LAYS SUBWAY DELAY UPON SERVICE BOARD

Controller Craig Writes That Interborough Has Failed to Install Power Cables.

CITES MODIFIED CONTRACTS

Says $300,000 Demanded of Estimate Board Was a Friendship Gift to Transit Company.

A statement was sent to the Board of Estimate yesterday by Controller Craig in which he laid the blame for the delay in completing the Seventh Avenue and Lexington Avenue subways on the Public Service Commission, and practically accused the commission of being leagued with the Interborough Rapid Transit Company in covering up the shortcomings of the latter and in permitting it to dally with the important subway work for the sake of profits.

The statement was the answer of the Controller to the recent letter of the commission to the board asking that haste be made in appropriating $300,000 to pay for track connections at Times Square and in Brooklyn. The commission intimated that if the operation of the two subway trunk lines should be delayed beyond June 15 it would be because of the failure of the Board of Estimate to appropriate the necessary money for the connections.

Mr. Craig says the commission for two years has permitted the Interborough Company to disregard its obligations to the city and to injure the traveling public because the delay was worth $300,000 a month to the company, and that an attempt was now being made by the commission to conceal its friendship for the Interborough by accusing the board of unwarranted delay.

"The reason," Mr. Craig's statement says, "that the operation of the Seventh Avenue and Lexington Avenue lines has been delayed is that the Interborough has not yet completed the conduits and cables connecting the Fifty-ninth Street powerhouse with the lines or the substation work connecting the conduits and cables in question. A sifting of all the facts makes it quite obvious that it is not the Times Square connection, but the conduit lines through Fifty-seventh Street to be laid by the Interborough, that is delaying the operation of the two subway lines. In this delay the Public Service Commission must share the responsibility with the Interborough."

Mr. Craig says the conduit lines could have been built as early as Oct. 31, 1916, if the commission had done its duty. He stated that the failure of the commission and the Interborough to make the track connections at Times Square served to divert public attention from that the two subway trunk lines were the duct line and the substations, and ready last October for the instanation of the signal system. To prove the alleged strong friendship between the commission and the Interborough, Mr. Craig says:

"A controversy was created by the Interborough when it lost the contract for the construction of the Seventh Avenue line, which was awarded to Holbrook, Cabot & Rollins, Inc., upon a bid substantially lower than that submitted for the Interborough. On half a dozen occasions when the Public Service Commission desired to permit the Interborough to do construction work and receive payment therefor it has proposed a modification of the original contract. The only purpose of such modification is to permit the Interborough to do the work without competitive bidding."

He says the Interborough had agreed to pay for making the track connections out of its contribution of $58,000,000 toward constructing and equipping the new lines, but that later the commission asked for a modification of the contract so that the track connections at Times Square and in Brooklyn should be done by the Interborough at cost with allowances for overhead, administration, and legal expenses to the amount of $300,000 which the city should pay. This is the $300,000, Mr. Craig says, which the commission is now asking for.

Mr. Craig points out that the commission in its letter to the Board of Estimate, made no reference to this previous agreement, but that it made the unfounded charge that the Board of Estimate was responsible for delaying the operation of the two trunk lines. He states that the delay was for the purpose of giving the Interborough time to lay its conduits, and that the claim is now made that the accumulation of interest charges has helped to absorb the $58,000,000 contributed by the Interborough. In concluding his statement Mr. Craig says:

"In view of the serious consequences to the city and the very grave losses that will ensue if this matter goes unchallenged, it is submitted that the Public Service Commission should be requested immediately to furnish a full and detailed explanation to the Board of Estimate and that the matter should be referred to the Corporation Counsel with instructions to advise your board what rights and remedies the city has in the premises."

The statement will be considered at the meeting of the Board of Estimate today.

6,000 SCHOOLGIRLS DANCE IN THE PARK

Military Touch to Public Schools Athletic League's Annual Fete Day.

More than 6,000 little girls danced about Maypoles decked with red, white, and blue streamers in Central Park yesterday afternoon at the eleventh annual park fête of the Public Schools Athletic League. The band of the S. S. Recruit played for the little girls, who were from fifty of the elementary schools of the city. The fête was to have been held on Tuesday, but was postponed because of rain.

It looked at one time yesterday as if another postponment was inevitable. There was a sharp shower of rain. The children ran for the trees at the edge of the sheep pasture, where the fête was held, and were back again in a minute, for the shower was over. But it was time enough to damage the paraphernalia of the show. The streamers of the Maypoles got wet and a few hair ribbons were destroyed, especially where these were of crêpe paper.

Most effective in these war days was the opening of the fête. A roll of drums gave the signal to clear the field, and all the children, some of whom had been on hand several hours in advance of the time for the opening, massd themselves around the sheep pasture. The bugle called "Attention!" and a white flag waved from the bandstand in the centre of the field to give the signal to advance. The children came forward, keeping time to a march played by the sailor band. As the bugle called "To the Colors!" a large flag was pulled up the flagstaff, the children standing at attention in silence, and then, as with one voice, the 6,000 little girls recited a pledge of allegiance to the flag.

$4,000,000 SITE BOUGHT FOR GREAT NEW HOTEL

Conditional contracts were entered into yesterday for the acquisition of a site for the proposed Hotel Commonwealth. The location selected, according to the announcement made by the Commonwealth Hotel Construction Company, of which Jason Rogers is President, comprises the entire block bounded by Broadway, Fifty-fifth Street, Seventh Avenue, and Fifty-sixth Street, valued at $4,000,000.

There are about thirty city lots in the plot, which is now occupied by the group of apartment hotels known as the Rockingham, the Sonoma, the Frederick, and the Van Corlear, at the top of the slight hill extending to Times Square. Franklin Pettit and Robert E. Dowling were the brokers in the transaction. It was learned last night that a substantial amount had been paid on the contract, but that no actual construction work would be undertaken until an additional sum of $2,500,000 had been raised.

Plans prepared by Starrett & Van Vleck and King & Campbell call for the erection of a thirty-four-story hotel structure to contain 2,500 rooms and to involve an outlay of about $15,000,000.

ELECT STEPHEN C. MASON.

New President of National Association of Manufacturers.

Stephen C. Mason of the McConway & Torley Company, Pittsburgh, was yesterday chosen President of the National Association of Manufacturers at a meeting of the Board of Directors held at the Waldorf-Astoria, following the three-day convention which ended Wednesday. Mr. Mason is the seventh President of the association, the offices of which are at 30 Church Street, this city. He succeeds as President Colonel George Pope, who died April 19 last.

All of the other officers were re-elected as follows: General Manager and Assistant Treasurer, J. Phillip Bird; Treasurer, Henry Abbott; Secretary, George S. Boudinot.

Announcement was made that the association was opposed to the introduction into this country of the metric system of weights and measures. The British Committee on Commercial and Industrial Policy After the War recently voted against the adoption of the metric system for Great Britain, and the National Association's special committee decided that a change in standards in the United States was inadvisable at this time.

Frederick A. Halsey, Commissioner of the American Institute of Weights and Measures, 20 Vesey Street, who has conducted a countrywide campaign against the adoption here of the metric system, expressed gratification over the action taken by the association, whose membership aggregates 4,000.

WOMEN ENROLL TOMORROW.

PALMER SEIZES MILLIONS IN COTTON

SECRET STORES ARE FOUND

Complete Surrender of Property Is Announced, and Warning Is Issued Against Concealment by Other Firms

A. Mitchell Palmer, Alien Property Custodian, announced yesterday through his New York offices that three more groups of corporations involved in the program of supplying cotton to Germany had been taken over as the result of inquiry made earlier in the year by the Bureau of Investigation. Five of the companies in one group have aggregate assets of $4,000,000. The seizure comprises many millions of dollars worth of cotton in storage in various parts of the country, all of which, the announcement said, had been traced and was at the disposal of the Government.

Of the corporations brought under the ban, according to Mr. Palmer's statement, the New England Waste Company, the American Linters Company, the American Products Company, the Overseas Trading Company, and Wolf & Sons, dealers in spinnable cotton and cotton waste, with offices and mills for the most part in Massachusetts, are owned by Wolf & Soehne. This manufacturing firm is described as one of the largest cotton houses in the world, with branches in England, Switzerland, Italy, China, and other countries.

"The other two groups," the statement continued, "are the Anglo-American Cotton Company and the Richard Mayer Company, also located in Massachusetts, dealers in spinnable cotton and cotton waste. They are owned by Reis & Co. of Heidelberg, Germany, whose holdings in this country approximate $1,000,000.

"For Wolf & Soehne the management of the American companies was vested in one group of officers, as follows: Adolf Leve of Boston, Mass., President and Lewis P. Sladen of Melrose, Mass., Clerk, who, together with George E. Lund of Melrose, Mass., constituted the Board of Directors.

"For Reis & Co. the American control in the Anglo-American Cotton Company was vested in the following officers: J. E. McIntyre, President; Julius Labbe, Treasurer; S. A. Neether, Clerk; all of Boston, who together constituted the Board of Directors. The Reis & Co. officers in the Richard Mayer Company were Richard Mayer, President and Treasurer; Charles E. Hicks, Clerk, both of Boston; they, together with Jacob Flatau of New York, forming the Board of Directors.

"When the war broke out in Europe both Adolph Leve and Richard Mayer were in Germany, and returned to America late in the Fall of 1914. Both told, for practical purposes, identically the same story: that they had rearranged the business of the American companies, severed their connection with the parent concern in Germany, and had taken the American business as their share in the profits.

"They immediately began to buy high-class cotton and ship it to Germany through neutral countries. After the English embargo stiffened and this country entered the war, they continued to buy up cotton, but instead of shipping it overseas they stored it in small lots in warehouses in the United States, ready to be rushed into Germany the moment peace was declared. At the present time they have millions of dollars' worth of cotton in storage, all of which has been located and which will be taken over by the Alien Property Custodian.

"The New England Waste and affiliated companies made reports in which only small enemy holdings were shown. The Richard Mayer Company and the Anglo-American Cotton made no report at all. Since then Adolph Leve has admitted that the reports of his company were incorrect, and Richard Mayer has now, as a result of this present investigation, made report of large German holdings in his company. It further appears that in at least one instance the attempt to cover the enemy-owned property was made upon the advice of American counsel.

"The collection of evidence on the operation of these representatives of the German Government has culminated in a complete surrender of the control of all this property, which, together with other assets of the corporations concerned, will eventually be sold to American citizens.

"Earlier in the year fair warning was given to all holders or custodians of enemy property, such as this, to come forward and make a full and complete report. The continued failure of all those included in this class to do so may result in their holdings being forfeited to the United States, as provided in the Trading with the Enemy act, as well as the prosecution of those concerned in the concealment of enemy-owned property or those who make false reports thereon."

Francis P. Garvan had been appointed Managing Director of the New York office, Mr. Palmer announced, and, in addition, would continue to direct the work of the Bureau of Investigation, whose function it is to discover fraud and to make all examinations in reference to reports on enemy property.

RUMORS OF EXTRA SESSION

House Leader, However, Insists President Has Decided On Legislation Before Recess.

WILSON REMAINS SILENT

Confers with Senator Simmons Again, and Announcement of Decision Is Expected Soon.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Developments today in the dispute between leaders of Congress and Secretary McAdoo over revenue legislation indicated that the President had decided to support Mr. McAdoo and soon would recommend to Congress the passage of a revenue bill at this session.

Although there was no announcement forthcoming from the White House as the result of the conference last night with the leaders of the House and Senate and another the President had today with Secretary McAdoo, it became known that the President had determined upon revenue legislation either at the present or an extraordinary session.

The most definite announcement to this effect came from Representative Claude Kitchin, Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee.

After Secretary McAdoo had left the White House it was said that Representative Kitchin received information that the Administration had concluded to urge the passage of a revenue bill before Congress adjourned. Mr. Kitchin declined to give his authority for the statement, but asserted unequivocally that there would be a bill this session, and proceeded to outline its salient features.

He indicated that the bill would provide for raising from $3,000,000,000 to $3,000,000,000, in addition to income produced by the present revenue laws. If a bill of such proportions is enacted it will be the largest revenue measure ever passed by any legislative body in the world, bringing into the Treasury about $8,000,000,000 for a single calendar year. In other words, there would be about 1,000,000,000 in addition to the taxes which are to come from the revenue laws now operating.

Simmons at White House.

Senator Simmons, who participated in the conference at the White House last night, declined to make any statement on the subject during the afternoon. He, with Mr. Kitchin, was summoned to the White House tonight. Mr. Kitchin was unable to be present on account of a previous engagement. Senator Simmons, however, went over the entire situation with the President in a conference which lasted nearly three hours.

After he emerged from the White House Mr. Simmons was not much more optimistic than Mr. Kitchin that the President had finally decided to support the contention of the leaders of Congress. He would not say, however, that there would or would not be a revenue bill this session. The President, he said, had asked him to obtain some information as to the status of the legislation, the time that would be required to dispose of necessary bills now before Congress, and the possibility of passing a revenue bill before the regular session in December without adjournment of the present session. Senator Simmons, it is understood, impressed upon the President the great and almost impossible task of keeping a quorum at the Capitol during days preceding the Congressional election in November.

Apparently the President had indicated to Senator Simmons his fixed purpose of having a revenue bill started at this session and passed promptly as possible, but was not averse to an extraordinary session of Congress if this became necessary. Senator Simmons emphasized this point in his talk with newspaper men and allowed it to be inferred that a bill would be started without delay, but that it might be necessary to actually pass it in a special session.

"If a special session is called I cannot say whether it will be before or after election," Senator Simmons added.

Believe Kitchin Was Hasty.

Members of both houses abandoned hope of an early adjournment following the statements made by Representative Kitchin in the afternoon. They concluded that the Administration had finally decided upon revenue legislation without delay, but were hopeful that the President might allow the matter to go over until an extraordinary session. Whether Mr. Kitchin's views will finally prevail or the President may eventually come over to Senator Simmons's argument and hold up the bill for a special session is the question agitating Congressmen, who are anxious to go home and begin their campaigns.

The generally accepted view is that Representative Kitchin had given to the public the position of the Administration somewhat in advance, and that in due time the President would recommend to Congress a revenue bill as was previously prematurely by the Democratic leader of the House. Some of Mr.

Costa Rica Declares War Against Teuton Powers

SAN JUAN DEL SUR, Nicaragua, May 24.—The Government of Costa Rica has declared war on the Central Powers, according to advices received here.

This brings the number of nations aligned against Germany up to a total of twenty-one. All of the Central American States have now clearly defined their attitude toward the war. Panama, Nicaragua, and Guatemala have become belligerents. Honduras has severed diplomatic relations with Germany, while San Salvador has remained neutral, explaining that this neutrality is friendly to the United States. The Government of Costa Rica, headed by President Tinoco, has never been recognized by the United States. It came into power after the deposition of President Gonzalez in January, 1917.

OUR MEN TO FIGHT WITH THE ITALIANS

TELLS OF TRANSPORT LOSS

The promise that "in the not distant future" American infantry, machine gun units, and artillery would be fighting with the Italians on the Italian front was made last night by Secretary of War Newton D. Baker, who spoke at the gala concert at the Metropolitan Opera House, which closed a day devoted to the celebration of the third anniversary of Italy's entrance into the war. Charles E. Hughes, President of the Italy-America Society, had just before that expressed the hope that if military considerations permitted it this might be done, and the audience was well acquainted with the general desire in Italy for this tangible evidence of American co-operation; so the cheers which greeted Secretary Baker's announcement were perhaps the most vigorous of a very enthusiastic evening.

The concert was the culmination of a day of celebration of the anniversary and of Italy's contribution to the cause of the Allies, in which the newly formed Italy-America Society played the leading part. There had been a flower parade of automobiles in the morning, in the afternoon the formal opening of the Italian war exhibit in the concert hall of Madison Square Garden, and at night a festival celebration in Washington Square, besides a number of minor exercises in various parts of the city; and the whole Italian population, and thousands of American friends of Italy, had made it a day of festivity.

Concert Brings in $40,000.

And it all came to a climax at the Metropolitan last night when Italian and American artists of the Metropolitan Opera Company gave their services in a concert for the benefit of the Italian Red Cross, under the patronage of President Wilson and the Italian Ambassador and the direction of Giulio Gatti-Casazza, general manager of the Metropolitan. The boxes, which had been auctioned off long before; the orchestra, and all the seats in the house were crowded with a brilliant assemblage, and in the standing room back of the seats were hundreds of persons who had been waiting in line since early afternoon. The receipts of the evening were well over $40,000, and were increased in the latter part of the program by the auctioning off by Mme. Frances Alda of a program bearing the signatures of Mr. Hughes, Secretary Baker, Count Macchi di Celere, the Italian Ambassador, and Signor Gatti-Casazza, and a caricature drawn between turns by Enrico Caruso. After considerable bidding this went to William Payne Thompson for $3,000.

The program opened with the playing of the Italian "Royal March" and "The Star-Spangled Banner" by the Metropolitan Orchestra, with Roberto Moranzoni conducting. During the playing of the first air one of the men among the chorus massed on the back of the stage came forward and waved a huge Italian flag, setting the audience to cheering wildly.

The President's Greeting.

Mr. Hughes, as Chairman, read the following message from President Wilson.

The White House,
Washington, May 24, 1918.

My Dear Mr. Hughes—Will you not convey to those assembled on the twenty-fourth of May this expression of my regret that I cannot be present in order to express in person my feeling of admiration for the great Italian people who are engaged with us in the great struggle now going forward for securing the rights of free men?

The friendship of America for Italy has always been deep and cordial. We have welcomed to this country with a very genuine welcome millions of Italians who have added their labor and genius to the richness of American life, and this new association with the Italian people in a struggle which has given to men everywhere the sense of community of interest and comradeship of right more intensely than they ever had it before, will serve to strengthen that friendship still more and crown the many happy recollections of the association of the two countries in thought and feeling.

I am sure that I express the sentiment of the whole country when I thus express my admiration for Italy and

RUSSIAN LOSS NOT OFFSET

U-BOAT DAMAGE OVERCOME

GREATEST BATTLE AT HAND

Tribute to Foch as Genius—German Peace Efforts Negatived by Army Party.

EDINBURGH, May 24.—That Germany is straining every nerve to strike a decisive blow before the American armies can be brought into the field was the statement made today by David Lloyd George, the British Prime Minister, in an address on the occasion of his being tendered the freedom of the City of Edinburgh.

The allied commanders, who knew best what the prospects were, he added, felt most confident about the result.

Mr. Lloyd George said that, while the United States was rushing its men into France, the present strength of those armies was not the equivalent of one-fifth of the fighting strength which was gained by the Teutonic allies through the collapse of Russia.

The Premier was most optimistic as regards the submarine campaign of Germany. He said that, while the menace of the underwater boat had not been entirely removed, the allied nations now were building ships faster than they could be sunk, and that the unrestricted submarine warfare might be disregarded as a vital danger by the Entente nations.

The prospects of using the entire force of the Allies were very bright, said Mr. Lloyd George in discussing the united command of the Entente armies in France. He sounded a warning in his address as to Germany's peace proposals, saying that the Prussian autocracy did not intend to bring the war to an end "until its basket is as full as it can hold."

Ship Loss Offset in April.

Reverting to the shipping situation, the Premier said that in April the output of shipping for the first time exceeded the losses. This statement was greeted with great enthusiasm, his hearers rising and cheering again and again.

The Premier paid a tribute to the sailors of the navy and the mercantile marine, "whose invincible valor overcame the submarine difficulties."

"Besides protecting our ships and the ships of our allies," he said, "they had to undertake the difficult task of harrying, pestering, chasing, and pursuing submarines day and night. They never ceased until they conquered that pest and blocked two of their nests—Ostend and Zeebrugge. These were thrilling deeds which gave new heart to our people."

The Premier read a report which he had just received from the Admiral that "as regards the meeting of enemy submarines—it was going on satisfactorily." This, said the Premier, was the official language. Since the beginning of the year, he added, the naval staff had been confident that the allied navies were sinking more enemy submarines than the enemy was able to build.

U-boat Loss Exceeds Building.

"We have reached the position," said Mr. Lloyd George, "where we are sinking German submarines faster than they can build them. We are building merchant ships—that is, the Allies as a whole—faster than they can sink them."

The Premier said that from data at present available, the Admiralty held the opinion that in April there was a record destruction of enemy submarines. When it came to the increase in shipbuilding, April was the record month since the ruthless submarine warfare began. For the first time the output exceeded the losses, and that, he said, was not a bad record for a Government whose faults were so freely advertised.

Mr. Lloyd George said that the submarine was still a menace, but that it was no longer a peril. As a means of inflicting injury it was still formidable, "but as a danger which can cause the winning or losing of the war we can rule it out." The failure of the submarine had been recognized by the Germans, he said, and that accounted for the present offensive in the west. The enemy had been driven into that offensive as a last resort to secure victory.

"Nevertheless," said Mr. Lloyd George, "we must not underrate the formidable character of that attack. The collapse of Russia caused a yawning gap in the bridge which has not yet been spanned by the coming of America, and until the span is reconstructed by America, Great Britain, France, and Italy have to defend the gap."

The Premier said that the Allies were on the eve of a great German attack and that those who knew best what the Irish Rising Timed With Great German Drive; Lloyd George Says He Has Seen the Evidence

EDINBURGH, May 24.—Speaking at a luncheon here today, Premier Lloyd George said that he had seen the evidence of the Irish plot and that the outbreak was planned for the time when Germany believed it was ready to strike a tremendous blow at the British Army.

"All the indications in our possession," said the Premier, "point to the fact that the blow was timed for the moment when the German High Command deemed its preparations to crush the British Army in France had reached the culminating point. Had we shirked stern action without delay we should have deserved impeachment.

"Let me make one point clear. The Irish Nationalist leaders had nothing to do with it. They were not even cognizant of it. Of that I am convinced from the evidence. I am therefore not in the least surprised at the doubts they expressed as to its existence."

The Premier, after referring to the brilliant achievements of Scottish divisions in the recent battle, said that he wished he could say the same of Ireland.

"The Irishmen fought as brilliantly as they always did when face to face with danger, but the vast majority of the manhood of Ireland unfortunately held aloof," he said.

"I do not despair of Irishmen realizing soon that they are not doing well for the credit of their great race to stand out in this struggle. Opportunity will be afforded them to come forward of their own accord, and I am hopeful that the response will be worthy of the best and highest traditions of their race."

The Premier's words evoked loud applause.

WAR CORRESPONDENTS' HEADQUARTERS, Friday, May 24.—There was a west wind yesterday over the northern front in France, and heavy rainstorms have broken up the fine spell of sunshine which made this May so splendid. This change does not fill us with regret, because dirty weather now may be in our favor and hinder the enemy in his offensive schemes.

Our memories of the wet months in Flanders last year when the British attacks were launched comfort us with the thought that the Germans will have to wade through the same bogs, get their transport over the same morass, and work their guns from the same slime pits. If the rain lasts for a few days, that is long enough to bring the Flanders battlefields into the same Slough of Despond which made them horrible.

Elsewhere, as on the Amiens front, the lines of communication are better and the ground has not been cratered by years of shell fire, so that the rain will not affect it so much. Bad weather, however, acts against both sides, and though they should, like the Germans, be held fast in the mud, the British do not want to lose visibility for their flying men or machine gunners. The enemy made use of fog on March 21 to sneak through and make his infiltrations of the British line under cover of a dense ground mist which restricted the field of observation of the British machine gunners in the rear positions. The enemy is very cunning in making use of climatic conditions, and adapts his methods to them.

High Wind Checks Air Work.

Yesterday's high wind checked airwork on both sides, and the German machines, like some of the British, had to make forced landings before getting back to their aerodromes. For some little time now the enemy's daylight fliers have been keeping more to the east over their own country, and the British fighting squadrons have pushed them back and kept them back far enough to enable the reconnoitring and photographic planes to do their daily routine work in safety from attack in the air a considerable way over the enemy lines. This, however, does not necessarily mean that the fighting quality of the German air service is deteriorating, and the British pilots do not find many expert and daring opponents to challenge them.

There have been a great number of air fights during the last week of perfect flying weather, and astounding tourneys have taken place in the wide arena of the sky, only known to us earth-tethered folk by a glimpse now and then of squadrons mingled far

FOES IN THE WEST VIE IN RAIDING

SHARP CLASH AT BUCQUOY

Germans Get a Few Prisoners There by Driving In Behind a Barrage.

LONDON, May 24.—Raids on opponents' trenches and patrol operations are the feature of the day's activities along the western front.

Both sides are busy on this kind of warfare. British and French patrols have brought in prisoners at various points, notably southwest of La Bassée and north of the Ypres-Comines Canal.

The Germans carried out a raid near Bucquoy behind a heavy barrage and took some prisoners. Near Hill 70 (north of Lens) they also took prisoners. A raid on a British post in Aveluy Wood (north of Albert) was repulsed.

German gunfire has been active at only a few points on the British front.

The report from Field Marshal Haig tonight reads:

Under cover of a heavy artillery barrage the enemy carried out a raid last night in the neighborhood of Bucquoy. A few of our men are missing.

A few prisoners were brought in from the different parts of the front by British and French patrols.

The day report of the War Office is as follows:

As a result of a raid carried out by the enemy yesterday north of Hill 70 (north of Lens) a few of our men are missing.

Early last night the enemy attempted another raid on one of our posts in Aveluy Wood, but was driven off.

We carried out a successful raid shortly after midnight southwest of La Bassée and captured a few prisoners.

A few prisoners were secured by us in a patrol encounter north of the Ypres-Comines Canal.

The hostile artillery was active last night west of Lens and in the neighborhood of Givenchy and Festubert. Our positions in the Forest of Nieppe section were bombarded with gas shells.

The official statement relative to aerial operations, issued tonight, reads:

The long spell of fine weather ended at 11 o'clock Thursday morning, before which hour several reconnoissances were made and eight tons of bombs were dropped on airdromes in the neighborhood of Tournai, used by the enemy's night flying machines.

Three German machines were brought down in air fighting and two others were disabled. Three of our airplanes are missing.

During the night, despite a very high wind, our machines dropped over seven tons of bombs on billets in the neighborhood of Péronne, Fricourt, and Bapaume, and encampments in the Somme area. All our machines returned.

On Friday nearly a ton of bombs was dropped on the railway and factories at Noganlangen, twelve miles north of Metz. While our machines were over their objectives they were attacked by hostile scouts and anti-aircraft gun fire, but all returned safely.

PARIS, May 24.—French troops last night carried out raids along several parts of the front, notably southeast of Coucy, on the Aisne front, in the Champagne, and in the Vosges, in which prisoners were

TRANSPORT HIT AMIDSHIP

Missing Men Probably Slain by Torpedo or Cut Off by Water.

HAD NO CHANCE TO ESCAPE

All on Board Were Cool, and at First It Was Thought the Vessel Would Reach Port.

WAS IN ENGLISH CHANNEL

Destroyers Hovered About and Gave Quick Aid When the Steamship Settled.

LONDON, May 24.—The British armed merchant troopship Moldavia, with American troops on board, was torpedoed and sunk yesterday morning, and fifty-six of the soldiers are reported "unaccounted for" by the British Admiralty.

Announcement of the disaster was made by the Admiralty tonight in the following statement:

The armed mercantile cruiser Moldavia was torpedoed and sunk yesterday morning.

There were no casualties among the crew, but of the American troops on board fifty-six up to the present have not been accounted for. It is feared they were killed in one compartment by the explosion.

The Moldavia was torpedoed without warning. It was a moonlight night, and although a good lookout was kept, the attacking submarine was not sighted before the torpedo struck.

Most of the men aboard were in their hammocks when the explosion occurred.

One seaman said after the rescue:

"We were proceeding up the Channel, bound for an English port. We felt an explosion amidships. The ship had been struck just below the bridge, but we could see no submarine."

The Moldavia steamed ahead for some time after being struck, and at first it was hoped that her watertight compartments would enable her to reach port.

The sailors and soldiers alike showed no panic. They fell calmly into line and awaited orders.

When it was seen that the Moldavia was settling down, all on board were taken off by the escorting ships.

The men who were saved lost all of their belongings, but were supplied with new clothing at the different naval ports where they were taken.

Washington Gets No Details.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Official news of the sinking of the Moldavia was received in Washington about 10 o'clock tonight, and soon afterward this statement was issued by the War Department:

Information has been received from London that the British armed merchant cruiser Moldavia has been sunk and that fifty-six of the American soldiers aboard are missing.

The announcement was made by the British Admiralty.

Beyond this brief statement nothing was obtainable from official quarters, but promise was made to give out the facts, including the list of casualties, as soon as received.

Officials said that they did not know whether the transport was bound to or from France when torpedoed, but they had heard through press channels that the Moldavia was sunk in the English Channel. According to another version the vessel was journeying between England and France.

The Moldavia is the third transport that has been lost while carrying American troops. On Feb. 1 the Tuscania, carrying more than 2,000 American troops, was torpedoed off the Irish Coast with a loss of 238 lives. Last October the Antilles, convoyed by American warships, was torpedoed and sunk while returning from France. Seventy lives were lost, most of them men of the navy, but there were on board also some soldiers who were being invalided back to the United States.

No transport bound from the United States to Europe with American troops and convoyed by the United States Navy has yet been lost.

AN ENGLISH PORT, May 24.—The Peninsular & Oriental liner Moldavia was torpedoed and sunk early yesterday morning, while carrying American troops. All the members of the crew and the marines are believed to have been saved, but about fifty American soldiers are missing, and it is feared that they lost their lives in the explosion.

The Moldavia was struck by the torpedo in the fore part of the ship, causing considerable damage. Her commander, Captain Smythe, and his officers handled the vessel with great skill. They made every effort to keep her afloat, but the extent of the damage defeated their efforts, and the Moldavia sank while still some distance from land.

The behavior of all aboard is said to have been admirable, the men lining up at their stations quite calmly when the muster sounded. Troops and crew were taken off by the British destroyers who had been convoying the Moldavia.

The work of transshipment was carried out with but one mishap, half a dozen men getting a wetting by slipping from a raft.

The torpedo had barely exploded before the destroyers were blazing away at the U-boat with every gun which could be brought to bear.

Today I found the survivors in one of the British rest camps. When I asked whether they were dispirited by their experience, they just bubbled over with denials.

"If you print anything about us," said one eagerly, "just tell the old folks at home that we are sure full of fight and will book this to old Fritz as a debt we will sure pay soon."

During the day General Biddle of the American headquarters staff in London visited the men.

"I have not yet learned much about what happened except that they were awakened in the middle of the night by an explosion," the General told me. "Their officers paraded them in soldierly fashion. There was no trouble, and they found the boats and rafts ready to take them off.

"Our men are in fine spirits," said General Biddle. "Depressed at their ill-luck? Not a bit. They came out laughing and joking, and the doctor tells me that they appear to have stood anything of the shock which came to them without bad effects. A few of them caught colds, but they should be safe from pneumonia, for they are physically tough and in good condition. At home they trained in camp in North Carolina, which gave them a lot of wet and mud.

"I was a little anxious about their officers. They had all the care and responsibility, and you cannot train them to meet that until they have more experience or something like this happens to them. But the doctor tells me that they have shaped well and stood the test finely.

"Of all the force, I believe, only three have had to go into a hospital, and they are in one of your military hospitals, where, my experience tells me, they will have everything done possible to make them comfortable and happy and to return them fit men again."

"We were asleep when the explosion happened, and it would not have surprised any of us if many of the men had been thrown into a panic," one of the officers told me, "but the discipline was good and I felt proud of the men. All the casualties happened at the moment of the explosion. So far as I know, no one was drowned. We could see the British destroyers circling around us. That gave us renewed confidence, of course. Most of us were unable to save much more than the clothes we stood up in, our money, and trinkets. If we had known that we should be so long afloat, we could have saved more.

"You ask me what the men thought of their experience. Well, it was a novel and startling one, calling for courage and steadiness. They met the call and sang as the ship slowed down and as they fell into their boat stations. As the ship sank the men gave hearty cheers."

"I was thrown bodily out of my bunk by the explosion," one of the crew told me. "With the exception of the men actually on duty, practically everybody on board was asleep at the time. The moon was up, but its light was obscured from time to time by heavy clouds passing over the sky. There was no warning of what was coming, just one big crash of an explosion, although afterward one of the lookouts stated that he saw the submarine a second before the torpedo struck. One torpedo was fired, and it struck the ship just forward of the bridge. The missing American soldiers were sleeping on the bottom deck, and it is thought that they were either killed by the explosion itself or drowned by the inrush of water which immediately followed.

"After the Moldavia was struck she steamed ahead, and it was hoped that her water-tight compartments would keep her afloat, but when it was seen that she could not be saved the British destroyers which had been convoying her picked up the men, who had given her a last cheer and were in lifeboats and on rafts. We were landed later in the morning at a Channel port, and, after being fitted out with emergency kits, we came here."

The men did not appear upon landing to be at all cast down by their experience. Rows of smiling faces looked out from the windows of the train which awaited them to bring them here, I am told, and as it moved off they gave round after round of cheers. Their appreciation of the splendid work of the Captain and officers of the Moldavia was manifested by the resounding cheers

May Have Been Crossing Channel.

WASHINGTON, May 24. (Associated Press.)—At a late hour the department had no information to indicate what American units were on board the vessel. Many men are in training in England, and it is possible that the Moldavia was carrying a contingent bound for the front.

MOLDAVIA A P. & O. LINER.

Was in an American Atlantic Port Last Month.

The Moldavia, a steamsip of the Peninsula and Oriental Line, is recorded in this week's Maritime Register as having arrived at an Atlantic port of the United States on April 26, but local shipping men said last night that they knew nothing of her having been here.

The Moldavia was one of the P. & O. fleet connecting London with the Orient via the Suez Canal. She was a twin-screw steamship of 9,500 gross tonnage, with high superstructure and spacious decks. She was 520 feet long, and had a beam of 58 feet and a depth of hold of 34 feet 8 inches. She could carry 200 first cabin and 150 second cabin passengers.

Other vessels of the Moldavia's type, such as the Maloja, Marmora, Medina, and others, have been torpedoed or sunk by mines since the beginning of the war.

BRITISH STEAMER SUNK; 37 OF CREW MISSING

U-Boat Captain Hands to Inniscarra's Steward Two Letters for Lloyd George.

QUEENSTOWN, May 24.—The Cork steamer Inniscarra, bound from Fishguard to Cork, has been torpedoed and sunk. Thirty-seven members of the crew are missing and are supposed to have been lost.

Five survivors of the disaster have been landed. They are the Captain, the chief officer, one steward and two sailors.

The Inniscarra was struck amidships. She listed immediately and foundered in four minutes.

After torpedoing the Inniscarra the submarine came up alongside a boat with survivors in it and took several, including the steward, aboard in an effort to learn if the Captain was among them. Although the Captain was among the survivors his identity was concealed from the Germans.

The commander of the submarine handed to the steward two letters addressed to David Lloyd George, with instructions to post them when he reached shore. The steward, however, turned them over to the authorities on landing.

The Inniscarra was a vessel of 1,412 tons. She was built in 1908 and belonged to the City of Cork Steam Packet Company.

AMERICANS TO DEFEND PARIS

Escadrille Will Help to Fight Off Enemy Air Raids.

PARIS, May 24.—An American escadrille, composed of aviators chosen from among the best American pilots, in the future will help to defend Paris against enemy air raids. Offer of this help was made spontaneously by the chief of the American Aviation Service and accepted by the French Government, through M. Dumesnil, Minister of Aviation.

An official announcement says the American offer was made after a German air raid some time ago. It was proposed to organize an American escadrille especially detailed to defend the French capital. Final arrangements were concluded today.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—An official cablegram received today from Paris was quoted in this official announcement:

"Following the recent German air raid on Paris, the head of the American aviation service in France proposed spontaneously to L. Dumesnil, Under Secretary of State in the Aeronautic Department, that an American air squadron take part in the aerial defense of the capital. This generous offer has now become a fact. An American air squadron, carefully recruited and composed of selected pilots, insures the defense of Paris, hand in hand with our valiant aviators.

Georges Leygues, Minister of Marine, and Alexandre Millerand, ex-Minister of War, spoke on the immense naval effort called forth by the war.

The Italian and British Ambassadors also spoke, and President Poincaré sent a message to King George.

BAGDAD OPERATIONS STILL GOING WELL

TURKISH ARMIES HAMPERED

Clearing of Wide Area North of City Has Materially Reduced Their Offensive Power.

By MAJOR GEN. SIR FREDERICK MAURICE.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 24.—While we are waiting for developments in the West there is time to turn our eyes to the East. It would be profitless to reopen the story of our first ventures and early failures in Mesopotamia. Present interest centres in what we are doing there now.

Speaking in the House of Lords on April 9 Lord Curzon said: "We are an Eastern as well as a Western power and the pillars of our dominions are planted at Delhi and Cairo no less than in these islands. We were drawn into the Mesopotamian campaign by the necessities of imperial defense."

That means that we are defending India at Bagdad. The Germans have suffered no more grievous illusion in this war than the one which arose from their belief that our empire was a rotten tree the branches of which would fall at the first storm. They looked particularly to South Africa, Egypt, and India, for troubles which would cause us grave embarrassment and, in fact, they expected and prepared to assist the outbreak of open revolution in all three. The splendid and unswerving loyalty of our dominions and dependencies brought these hopes to nothing as much as have the successes of our arms in the more distant theatres of war.

Yet as regards the enemy's attempts on India we have had and still have our anxieties. Before General Maude entered Bagdad and by joining hands with the Russians established an effective barrier against the enemy's attempts to penetrate further east, German agents and bands under German leadership had entered Persia freely, reached the frontiers of India and even penetrated Afghanistan, whence they were turned back by our loyal friend, the Ameer.

Maude's Aggressive Policy.

With the collapse of Russia the barrier established on the frontier of Persia broke down and the road to Turkish and German ambitions was again open. What have we been doing to meet this menace?

Maude's policy after he entered Bagdad was to use his central position to strike out right, left, and centre at the enemy, as he got his chance. In a country in great part desert, the enemy's lines of advance are limited to waterways which converge on Bagdad, the Diala coming down from the northeast and the Persian frontier, the Tigris from Mosul and the north, and the Euphrates from the direction of Aleppo and the northwest. With lines of railway running up each of these river valleys from Bagdad, we have been able to strike swiftly and successfully against the enemy, who, without railways and with deserts to traverse, cannot readily transfer his forces from one river line to another.

It is told of Forrest, the Confederate cavalry leader in the American civil war, that he was asked by a lady for the secret of his successes in the war, and replied, "Ma'am, I got there first with the most men."

That is exactly what has been happening in Mesopotamia. Our early troubles arose mainly because we had no railways and could not obtain sufficient river steamers. Our communications were, in fact, bad. Now we have adequate railways and an ample river fleet. Our communications are good, much better than the enemy's, and we get there first with the most men.

It will be remembered that early in the year General Marshall struck with his left on the Euphrates and occupied Hit. Then, after a pause, he attacked the Turkish force holding Baghdadie, about twenty miles up the stream from Hit, and completely annihilated it, capturing over 5,000 prisoners. Our pursuit carried us to Ana, nearly 200 miles northwest of Bagdad, and enabled us to destroy all the considerable preparations which the enemy had made for an attack upon us by the Euphrates line.

Now it appears General Marshall has drawn in his forces to Hit, as the Turks have reported that they have reoccupied Baghdadie. It is clearly no part of his plan to weaken his power of getting there first by extending his advance beyond what his communications can sustain. Having cleared the Euphrates of the enemy's advanced bases, just as General Maude cleared the Turkish base at Tekrit on the Tigris, General Marshall is free from any anxiety as to his left and has turned his attention to his right, where is the gap left by the withdrawal of the Russians. By a series of rapid and successful blows, which resulted in the capture of more than 1,200 prisoners and twelve guns, he has practically annihilated the 2d Turkish Division, which was on the Persian frontier. To the northeast of Bagdad we have occupied Kifri, with its valuable coal, and have pressed on through Kirkuk to the lesser Zab, at a point where the road to Mosul crosses that river, some eighty miles southeast of the latter town. We now learn that our cavalry has advanced up the Tigris to the rapids of Fattah, 130 miles north of Bagdad and about fifteen miles below the junction of the Tigris and the Lesser Zab.

Enemy Seriously Hampered.

We have by these successes cleared a wide circle around Bagdad. Before attacking us in force, the enemy, being without railways, must re-establish the advance depots we have destroyed and fill them up with necessary food stores and munitions, a slow and toilsome business when he is dependent upon river-borne traffic.

More important for our immediate purpose, these successes will certainly have an effect in Persia where the waverers may well have begun to doubt whether the collapse of Russia has not brought with it as great a menace to our position in the East as it has to that in the West. Hot weather, which is now setting in, forms as effective a bar to active military operations as the Winter mud in Flanders, and neither the Turk nor the German like it any more than our own men. It therefore will not be surprising if we do not hear much from this part of the world for some time to come. Not the least of the advantages we have gained by our recent efforts is that we occupied a portion of the Persian foothills, which give a healthier country for the summering of our troops than the plains of Bagdad afford.

Bavarians Now Face Americans on Toul Line

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 23, (Associated Press.)—The German troops which faced the Americans along the Toul sector for several weeks have been withdrawn and sent to the battle area of northern France.

Their places have been taken by the 8th Bavarian Reserves.

"The day has been quiet on all points occupied by our troops," says the official statement issued tonight from headquarters.

AIDING FUND FOR THE BLIND.

Paris Expects Big Price for Knight's Painting at Auction Here.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, May 24.—The price paid by William Nelson Cromwell of New York for the chief picture of the Paris Salon, "After the Battle of the Marne," by Ridgway Knight, which he will resell at auction in New York on June 1 for the benefit of the Permanent Blind Relief War Fund, is not known, but Paris expects that $40,000 to $50,000 will be raised in America. New York bidders will have to judge the merits of the picture solely by photographs unless the State Department gives them passports to come to Paris to see it, for the picture must stay here till the close of the salon on July 1.

The artist is an American, 80 years old, and living in Paris. He refused to sell to Mr. Cromwell, or anybody else, till it was agreed to resell for the benefit of the blind soldiers.

NANSEN TRUSTS AMERICA.

Found Friendship Here for Norway —Praises Wilson.

CHRISTIANIA, May 24.—Dr. Fridtjof Nansen, head of the Norwegian Food Mission to the United States, who has returned to this country after concluding an agreement for the exchange of commodities between Norway and the United States, said today that America had the most friendly feeling toward Norway, now that the American public understands Norway's reason for upholding her neutrality, and that it would do nobody any good to drag Norway into the war.

Dr. Nansen characterized President Wilson as the finest type of man, of charming personality and well informed on Norwegian affairs. He said he was confident that the United States would do its utmost to make the agreement between the two countries satisfactory to Norway.

ARAB SUCCESSES IN HEDJAZ.

Turks Captured in Raids—Convoy of 300 Camels Taken.

LONDON, May 24.—The British War Office statement relative to operations in Palestine reads:

On May 22 an enemy post near Ummesbert was raided successfully, and a number of the enemy killed or taken prisoner. On May 23 three enemy airplanes were downed.

Arab troops on May 17 raided a Turkish post at Wadi Jerdun, which had been re-occupied by the enemy on May 14. Fourteen prisoners were taken.

In Southern Hedjaz Arab operations continue with success. On May 11 Turkish defenses south of Bowat were attacked, and twenty Turks were killed and twenty-four prisoners were taken. Enemy works were demolished.

Later an important convoy of 300 camels attempting to enter Medina from the east was captured. On May 13 another Arab force destroyed a large section of railway track in the vicinity of Mudarij.

Laughed at U-Boat Killing.

AMSTERDAM, May 24, (via Ottawa.)—Giving evidence before the Shipping Council, which is inquiring into the sinking of the Dutch steamer Catherina, the mate of the vessel said that when the submarine crew heard that one of their shots had killed the captain they laughed.

Philip Gibbs's Dispatches from the Battlefront up like a swarm of midges and the high tatoo of machine gun fire in the clouds, and afterward by the sight of a German machine lying wrecked in some field behind the British lines.

Details of these adventures are told afterward in reports sent in by the unit commanders, told dryly, as dull incidents, though they eclipse tales of mythology and are like legends of old romance.

It is in the sky now that the fighting men get a chance of single combat—almost their only chance—and the air scout is a modern knight errant who goes out in search of adventure, challenges some champion of German fame, and chases him up spiral staircases and down long blue stretches of sky into cloud castles until one or the other falls.

Occasionally it is a squadron that rides out, and the British flying men support one another in attack and defense until sometimes in a fight they are separated and have to hold their own against one stubborn enemy or great odds.

Double Duel Ends in Victory.

So it was in an air battle which was fought on the 20th of this month when one of the British squadrons at a great height above the earth, turning homeward at half past eight in the morning, became aware that seven hostile aircraft were hovering near. The Captain and Lieutenant, in separate machines, flew straight for them. With instant challenge the Captain fired thirty rounds at one, but was attacked from above and his airplane set on fire. He dived down to a height of 3,000 feet, followed by his enemy, and in that steep journey managed to get the fire out.

The Lieutenant, who had attacked with him, saw his plight and swooped on to the hostile aircraft which was pursuing his friend, but suddenly his right top plane broke and another German streaked toward him. He made west like a flash of lightning, and as he flew the fabric ripped off his broken plane, left its ribs bare, and then tore the ribs out so that the plane was like a broken wing.

But as he came around he saw his Captain on fire, with the enemy over his tail, and he dropped down to them and fired thirty rounds so close that the German was scared away from his first opponent and swung around to attack the Lieutenant with the broken plane. The young Lieutenant was almost helpless because of this accident, but kept his wits and nerve. He made a pretense that he was about to land, while the enemy hovered above to watch him. The trick succeeded, and before touching the earth he flattened out and flew off again, pursued this time.

The Captain came to the rescue, and drew so close to the enemy that he fired at him at fifty yards' range, though he was handicapped by only having his Lewis gun in action, while his sighting was fogged and his engine boiling. The enemy was hit, or at least went down hard, and landed in a wood, so that the Lieutenant with the broken plane was able to make for home in a halting, crippled way. He crashed in landing so that his machine caught fire, but he did not hurt himself.

All this time the other aircraft in the same squadron had been fighting single combats with other enemies, and sent several of them to the ground.

Not a day passes without episodes like that of almost fantastic adventure in the blue; and sometimes the luck of war is with the British and sometimes not.

A few days ago one of the British air Captains had a mixture of bad and good luck, which ended in his favor when all seemed lost. He was out with an escort of bombing machines when several enemy machines were sighted, and they showed hostile intent. The air Captain chose one and swooped to it, firing a long burst of bullets so that it dived and crashed.

"That's all right," thought the Captain, and he sailed up and looked around for more enemies. "Home," he decided, and went away with a quiet mind until suddenly he felt a sharp blow on the ankle, as though hit by a hammer, and found he was wounded and that there was an enemy aircraft on his tail. At the same time his petrol tank was hit and his engine stopped. He dived for the British lines, kicking his rudder as he went, and the triplane, which followed him for some time, gave up the chase.

The British flying man crossed the enemy trenches at a hundred feet above the ground and crashed into No Man's Land. He was surprised to find himself alive, but after this surprise crawled out of his machine. Then he felt two more hammer strokes. One hit him on the left ankle, and another broke his arm badly. He was being fired on by machine guns from the enemy's trenches.

Quick as thought he rolled into a dip in the ground. Then he heard voices, saw long arms stretched out to grasp him, and recognized the Australian sleeve at the end of an arm which had him by the shoulder. They were Australians, who dragged him into a saphead. One of his rescuers was badly hit in helping him, but for the air Captain it was a lucky escape.

MOB WRECKS RESTAURANT.

Alabama Men Chase Manager Who Refuses to Eliminate Wheat.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., May 24.—The Thompson restaurant, operated by John R. Thompson, Inc., of Chicago, was practically wrecked this afternoon by angry citizens because the company yesterday refused to join other city restaurants in voluntarily eliminating wheat products.

Manager Wood was chased by the crowd. Later a committee of three citizens took him to Police Headquarters, where he is being protected.

The attack on the restaurant came as the culmination of picketing by a crowd of several hundred citizens which gathered in front of the place shortly before the lunch hour. When would-be patrons appeared they were told not to enter, as the place was pro-German. Placards and other legends, reading "For Germans Only," "The Kaiser's Restaurant," and "German Café," and streamers of crêpe and yellow were hung about the entrance. After the attack the police cleared the place and stationed guards.

The crowd gathered at the place following publication by local newspapers of the company's refusal to eliminate wheat from its menu, as other restaurants of the city had done, at the request of Food Administrator Spain. A committee visited the establishment Thursday about noon and interviewed Manager Wood in regard to the company's position in the matter.

Telegrams between Administrator Spain and the Chicago office of the corporation showed that the company had refused to eliminate wheat products from its menu on the ground that its business was largely a sandwich and pastry trade and to eliminate wheat would mean practically closing the doors. The company, it was stated, was observing the wheat regulations of the National Food Administration, and it was thought that nothing more should be required of it.

CHICAGO, May 24.—John R. Thompson, speaking with reference to the attack on one of his restaurants at Birmingham, said today:

"All of our restaurants scrupulously obey the orders of the Food Administration, Federal and State, and that includes Alabama. I so wired the Food Administrator of Alabama this morning."

WILMINGTON, Del., May 24.—All nationalities represented among the workmen at the Harlan plant of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation today joined with fellow-workmen of Italian birth in the celebration of Garibaldi Day by launching the latest ship at the plant, the Garibaldi, of 4,500 tons.

This vessel has been sixty-nine days in building, and will be completed, according to the management, in ninety days from the date of the laying of the keel.

STRIKE FOE IN AFRICA.

Converging British Columns Catching Up with Fleeing Germans.

LONDON, May 24.—The War Office tonight issued the following communication dealing with the progress of the British forces in East Africa.

Direct communication has been established between the advanced troops of Brig. Gen. Edwards's column, advancing westward from Port Amelia, and Major Gen. North's troops, advancing eastward from Lake Nyasa.

On May 19 Nanungu, hitherto the site of the German headquarters, was occupied by Brig. Gen. Edwards without opposition, the German force having retired southwest in the direction of Manua, abandoning their hospital containing eleven European and seventy-three native patients.

On May 21 Brig. Gen. Edwards's troops were in touch with the enemy's rearguard nine miles southwest of Nanungu. On May 22 the leading troops of our two main forces engaged the main body of the enemy about halfway between Nanungu and Manua and drove it westward, capturing 150 rifles and a quantity of small arms and gun ammunition which had been buried.

BLAMED I. W. W. FOR FIRES.

California Authorities Questioned Leader About Suspected Blazes.

CHICAGO, May 24.—Numerous fires in California towns where the authorities and members of the Industrial Workers of the World were clashing soon after America entered the war, were referred to in correspondence introduced by the Government today in the trial of 112 leaders for conspiracy to block the war program.

"We are excited over the numerous fires in our town," William Weyh, Secretary of the Stockton (Cal.) local, reported to William D. Haywood, under date of June 20 last. "Yesterday there were fifteen fires around Modesto, Cal., and the police, as usual, tried to make the I. W. W. the goat."

A few days later Weyh advised Haywood that he had been arrested and questioned regarding the fires in that district. "Of course I did not know anything about them," he wrote, adding that the prosecuting attorney questioned him regarding receipt of German money, and that he expected to be interned any time "for the crime of being a German."

"California is waking up," Weyh wrote last June, "and judging from the progress made in the last few weeks, you might include us in your general strike idea."

"Here in the Northwest the situation was never so bright," Weyh was advised by one I. W. W. official on Aug. 18, 1917. "The lumber workers are assured of winning their strike, and the authorities around the fruit belt, where they have been rounding up the organizers and throwing them in jail with no charges, are beginning to back down after a general strike call had been issued. They know we have the power to make good."

Other correspondence introduced today referred to battles between I. W. W. and authorities in some districts where attempts were being made to build up an organization in the West and Northwest that could defy the State and local officials.

TO TAKE LOYALTY PLEDGES.

Plans Discussed at Wanamaker Luncheon to Police Commanders.

Twenty-four Inspectors and ninety Captains of the Police Department were the guests of Special Deputy Commissioner Rodman Wanamaker at luncheon yesterday in the restaurant of the Wanamaker store.

After the luncheon there was a discussion of the Deputy Commissioner's plans for women volunteers to collect loyalty pledges from all citizens of New York. Instructions were given to the police officials, to be passed on by them to the volunteers, in furtherance of the work. Other communities throughout the country, it is expected, will take up the plan.

German raids, attempted to the west of Noyon, on the main battle-front, and southeast of Mesnil-St. Georges, were failures.

There was intermittent shelling at several points on the front.

The statement issued by the War Office tonight reads:

One of our detachments penetrated the German line south of Canny-sur-Metz, northwest of Lassigny, during a sortie.

An enemy raid east of Compigny failed.

NAMES ENGINEERS IN FIGHT.

Companies B and D of Sixth Regiment Battled in Picardy.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—The War Department today announced that the units of the United States Engineers with the British Army that took part in action between March 21 and April 3 in the great battle in Picardy were Companies B and D, 6th United States Engineers, under command of Colonel John N. Hodges, and that Colonel Hodges has won the British Distinguished Service Order in recognition of his services.

They were serving with the 5th British Army and as part of General Carey's forces were under fire and in action at Chaulnes, Moreuil, Demuin, Warfusee-Abancourt, and Bois de Tollauw. Colonel Hodges was in command of the sub-sector occupied by his troops at the time. He later received commendatory letters from the commanding General, 1st British Cavalry Division, and the Commanding General of the British 5th Army in appreciation of the work of his command.

It was explained at the War Department that for military reasons no longer applicable the identity of these units was concealed at the time of the engagement.

HOLDS DUTCH SERVE ALLIES

New Berlin Ruling Disregards the Ships Held in Port.

THE HAGUE, May 24.—In its latest alteration of German prize rules, according to a report from the Dutch Minister in Berlin, the German Government takes the view, which is held to be applicable to Dutch shipping, that ships laid up in harbors do not count. Therefore, the tonnage in Dutch ports is deducted from the total and Germany reaches the conclusion that the greater part of Dutch shipping is navigating in the service of the Allies.

It is set forth by Berlin, however, firstly, that there is no question of attacks without warning or destruction outside the danger zone, and secondly, that the differences raised by Germany would vanish if an arrangement were reached regarding conditions by which Germany would be ready to grant safe conduct to Dutch ships.

HONORS OUR AVIATORS.

French War Cross Conferred on Lieuts. Barneby and Culbert.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 24, (Associated Press.)—The French War Cross with Palms has been conferred on Lieutenant Walter H. Barneby of Sumner, Wash., and on Second Lieutenant of Marines Kenneth P. Culbert of East Orange, N. J.

Lieutenant Barneby was the pilot and Lieutenant Culbert the observer of an American observation machine which crashed to earth after returning from a tour of duty northwest of Toul.

FREED OF GERMAN LASHES.

East Africans Chant of Liberation, Says Scotch Churchman.

EDINBURGH, May 24.—At the annual General Assembly of the Church of Scotland the Moderator, presenting the report on foreign missions today, said that great issues hung on the fate of German East Africa. He asked his audience of clergymen whether it was to be German again, and was answered by loud cries of "No."

"Is it to be internationalized or British?" he asked.

Cries of "British" came from the whole assembly.

As a result of his correspondence and contact with those most experienced in East African affairs, the Moderator said he had become convinced that it would be a real calamity if this territory should revert to Germany. It was well understood what the German methods were, and their East African colony was known as the "land of twenty-five lashes" because of the terrible punishments with whips of rhinoceros hide inflicted on the natives for trifling offenses.

Now, said the Moderator, the natives were singing a new chant around their village fires, of which the refrain was: "The twenty-five lashes are gone, are gone."

"What is gone," the Moderator added amid applause, "is gone forever."

FRENCH SEIZE FUGITIVE.

Bonnet Rouge Suspect Ventured Over Frontier from Spain.

PARIS, May 24.—The Bonnet Rouge affair was revived today by the arrest in Perpignan, in Southern France, of Fernand Menandes, editor of a Barcelona paper called La Verité, which, it is charged, has been financed by the German Consulate at Barcelona. Menandes is a Frenchman who deserted from the French Army early in the war and was mentioned in the Bonnet Rouge trial when it was charged that one of the accused men made a trip to Barcelona with articles for him.

Menandes ventured over the border and was instantly seized on a charge of communicating with the enemy. Prosecutor Mornet characterized his campaign with the Federal language newspaper financed by the Germans as "infamous and abominable."

The War Situation

BY THE MILITARY EXPERT OF THE NEW YORK TIMES

The situation in Russia is daily becoming more critical, so far as the interests of the Allies are concerned. The Bolshevist element in the most insignificant element in Russia, so far as numbers are concerned. They represent a very small minority of the Russian people, but, unfortunately, a minority who, at a time when there was no power and no authority, seized the reins and held them against the "man on horseback" through murder and assassination. In the beginning no opposition appeared, no enemy of their futuristic dreams, who was not placed against a wall and shot or murdered by paid assassins as soon as he was found out. Through fear and terrorization they acquired power and have maintained it through the same practices.

In so far as Germany is concerned, however, an organized, highly trained, and efficient military machine, this element attempted no resistance. Their policy at Brest-Litovsk was one of unqualified and unconditional surrender. Their attitude since has been the same and has been consistently maintained. They are incapable of resistance, since they are without the desire to resist. Fanatics in their belief in the wrongfulness of fighting for nationality, they have committed an unbroken series of crimes in order to maintain themselves in power. Ardent and continuous proselyting has converted sufficient of the army to their views, that they may continue in power. Loud in protest against militarism and aggression, they yield to both with hardly a word of protest. In short, their rule is the most hostile influence to the Allies to be found in any land.

There seems to be some reason to doubt whether this is fully appreciated in the allied countries. There seems to be reason to fear that there is a tendency in some of the allied countries to ally themselves indirectly with this element in spite of the fact that they represent such a small fraction of the population of Russia—Russian authorities places it at not more than 10 per cent.—rather than to gain the support of the other 90 per cent. And yet every day that passes without action places the resources of Russia more securely in German hands, strengthens to this extent Germany's position and makes it more and more difficult to encompass Germany's defeat.

Aside from her conquest in Ukraine—a conquest, by the way, which produced most disappointing results in the failure to find a reservoir of food—Germany has been consistently securing and strengthening her grip on Poland and on Lithuania. In the latter case, particularly, she has been actively obnoxious. None of those countries has any love for Germany or any desire for German rule. Needless to say, Germany is not trusted, since, from sad experience, she is known for just what she is. At the same time the bourgeoisie consider that they have certain rights which should be guarded and protected, and since the Bolsheviki have refused to acknowledge such rights and have enriched themselves at the expense of the bourgeois element, this element is looking for a stable rule of some kind from some source—no matter what—and will naturally select that which is nearest and offers the most.

This unquestionably is Germany unless the Allies will make some move to circumvent her. Once permit Germany to fix her talons firmly in the throat of this element in the population and to gather together the Russian resources of Russia for German ends, and the task of the Allies has been made infinitely greater, if, indeed, it has not been rendered impossible. Russia produces everything which Germany lacks except those things which are indigenous only to tropical climates. Even cotton is produced on a large scale, and while it is not on sufficient scale to maintain Germany at war, it is enough to supplement the cotton substitute which Germany is using for her high explosives, and thus make them more efficient.

Wool for clothing, cattle for food and for leather, food for all description, metals in quantities, in deposit, of course, but capable of development under German rule; oil enough to keep a continuous supply of all oil products, including gasoline; in fact, there is hardly a single war material except rubber which Russia cannot give Germany in sufficient quantities to enable her with her own supply to continue indefinitely as far as this side of war is concerned.

Even in man power Russia can add considerably to Germany's potential force. While it is hardly probable that a great many Russians can ever be induced to fight against the Allies, at the same time German propaganda has already accomplished miracles in this country, and may even succeed in bringing conviction that help and final succor can only come from German hands. But even failure in this will not prevent the use in German industries of a great army of Russians and the release of a corresponding number of Germans for service with the army.

Inasmuch as the Allies will in all probability not be able to launch an offensive this year and possibly not even next (depending, of course, on the extent of the German offensive this year) Germany has time to place all of Western Russia at her disposal for use in this fighting. It would appear, then, that the time for action is here and that delay only jeopardizes the allied cause.

ALLIES SHOULD FREE RUSSIA FROM ENEMY

A RALLYING POINT NEEDED

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 24.—Dr. Harold Williams, a lifelong student of Russia and for several years a newspaper correspondent at Petrograd, writes in The Daily Chronicle his views of the situation in that country, and tells what he thinks ought to be done to relieve it. He says:

"Russia needs help. This may be a hard saying to those who are smarting under the sense of Russian defection, who have suffered personal loss because the Russians have ceased to fight with us and for us; but, in the first place, Russia cannot be accused of an intentional betrayal.

"The immense catastrophe that has befallen her has many causes, many of which lie far back in the past; but it is a catastrophe; and Russia is suffering at present morally and physically far more than we, and earlier in the war, when she was active and not passive, she bore many sacrifices, suffered bravely, and fought nobly in our common cause.

"Secondly, whatever our feelings may be, here is the plain fact: If Russia remains in her present condition, if German domination is consolidated, then nothing can avert that penetration of Asia by Germany which will give physical foundation for a victory of militarism over democracy. We shall have lost the war, whatever success we gain on the western front. Eastern Europe and Central Asia will become a reservoir of German world power.

"The facts speak for themselves. The peace of Brest-Litovsk led to a dismemberment of European Russia. Germans dominate in Finland, the Baltic Provinces, Lithuania, Poland, and the Ukraine. They control the Baltic and Black Seas. Their troops are masters of the Crimea, and have penetrated as far east as Rostoff on the Don. Their Turkish subordinates have seized the Transcaucasian provinces of Batum, Kars, and Andahan. The little Transcaucasian republic of the Georgians and Armenians is beset with enemies. Caucasian Tartars, presumably inspired and organized by Germans and Turks, have made violent attempts to cut the line of communications at Baku and along the Caspian coast in the region of the oil fields. Armenians of Erzerum and the neighborhood are again at the cruel mercy of the Turks, and the Turks are advancing into Persia. The Germans are opening a road into Central Asia to the confines of Afghanistan, to the ramparts of India.

Way Across Russia Open Also.

"Further, Germany is formally at peace with Russia. The German Ambassador and his staff sit in Moscow. The way is open for the peaceful penetration of the Germans to the Volga and Siberia.

"It is true that the Germans have repeatedly and contemptuously infringed the declared provisions of the treaty of Brest-Litovsk and that the Bolsheviki have offered feeble and ineffective resistance. Having disorganized and demobilized the regular army, the Bolsheviki are unable, even if they will, to oppose the advance of small but organized and disciplined German detachments. The way is clear for the Germans. They may take what they will. It is true, they meet with difficulties and dangers. The anarchy, which they themselves fostered in order to break up Russia, is now a serious impediment to their efforts. They can squeeze little corn out of the ruined and fermenting Ukraine. They are confronted with scores of very prickly social and national questions; their hands are full, their brains are taxed; but that does not alter the fact that, if the Allies give them time, they will surmount their difficulties, consolidate their position, and establish their despotism in Eastern Europe.

"It is a signal error to suppose that the Allies can gain anything by recognizing the Bolsheviki. If you love liberty, how can you condone the crimes they have committed against liberty and democracy and support a tyranny worse than that of the Czar? And if you are an opportunist, what point is there in supporting a power that has been merely destructive, that hangs, so to speak, in a vacuum?

"The presupposition of the whole singular existence is the suppression of national energy, the suspension of the normal functions of the State. To impart stability to this power by recognition is to maintain a miserable tyranny, to immobilize Russia in the face of the menacing forces of oppression. I have no doubt the Bolsheviki find the German dictatorship unpleasant, now that they have brought it upon themselves and upon Russia, and they at any rate cannot rouse to resistance the energies of a Russia they so cruelly maimed. They are enemies of the cause we are fighting for.

Allies Must Be on the Spot.

"What then? Russia is essentially for us; Russia is our ally, and will be our ally if we will show ourselves, if we will help directly, obviously, physically, if our presence is actually and tangibly felt. We have too long been merely a name, a distant echo, a hazy legend. We must be there on the spot.

"What is needed is a rallying point for the allied cause on Russian territory, a centre of organization. There are hundreds of thousands of Russians who love their country, who feel bitterly her shame and ruin, and who are longing for an opportunity to rebuild the State. They are thinking, scheming, waiting sadly and wearily in towns. Their hands are tied, their voices lowered to a whisper. Detachments of their more active forces are still carrying on a lonely struggle somewhere amid the chaos. Alexieff's little band in remote regions of the Cossack steppes, Semenoff's forces in Eastern Siberia, companies of guerrilla fighters clinging desperately to the hope of Russian freedom in the Kirghis steppes or in the Caucasus, and others still who bow the head, feign submission, and watch.

"All these would rally round the Allies, if they came; and if the Allies do not come, the Germans will, and Russian patriots in desperation will consent to the establishment of order with German aid rather than see their country weltering in anarchy, its population starving, and plague and pestilence stalking in over the ruins of their civilization. Russia will be under the German yoke. It is our great opportunity now and our great duty.

"Allied intervention is absolutely necessary. It is necessary to oppose German expansion eastwar; it is necessary to restore to the Russian people liberty of choice and action; it is necessary to prevent Germany's penetration into Asia and her exploitation of the huge resources of the East. The task is urgent; it will soon be too late. Allied intervention is not concerned with internal Russian politics. Our action must be disinterested. Its object must be to help the Russian people as a whole, to protect them against their enemy and ours. We cannot dictate forms of government. We can only help the Russian peoples to organize, to express their will, to re-establish the State in a form that best pleases them. We must be disinterested; and if the movement is widely organized, we shall meet with little resistance. We shall have the warm sympathy of the bulk of the harassed population, and shall find a host of active supporters rallying joyfully around us.

Allied Forces Needed.

"Detachments of allied forces must be brought into Russia through entrances still available, through Archangel, where intervention would most immediately be effective, through the Caucasus, and through Vladivostok.

"It so happens that the only ally that can easily throw troops into Russia is Japan. There are certain objections to Japanese intervention. Russians do not regard the Japanese with the same confidence with which they regard Britain, France, and America. They know little of them. They are not sure of their motives and aims. But the Japanese are free to act, and even those who take the lowest view of Japanese policy must admit it is better both for the Russians and Japanese that the Japanese should come in as representatives of the disinterested action of the Allies in support of Russian integrity, than that Russia should be left a helpless prey to German aggression on one side and on the other a perpetual temptation and incitement to whatever militarist appetites there may be in Japan.

"Representatives of all the chief allies must of course accompany the expedition, and its objects must be made perfectly clear. It is not a question of an isolated Japanese movement, but of a united allied effort.

"Intervention is absolutely necessary. It is good that President Wilson has signified his approval of it in principle, and it is high time to act, for every reason—military, political, and human."

Nothing is known in this country of any commitment by President Wilson to any policy of intervention in Russia. Mr. Williams probably makes his statement on this subject as an inference from a sentence in the speech of President Wilson in New York last Saturday—"I intend to stand by Russia as well as France."

BOLSHEVIKI PLAN GREAT MANUFACTURES

45,000 Men Said to be Busy Building Up the Southern Siberian Railroad.

MOSCOW, May 16.—Important schemes are in hand for the development of the great natural resources of Siberia. Transport is at present a matter of some difficulty, and a further hindrance is the lack of money tokens for the payment of workers. Still, solid progress is being made.

The nationalization of certain undertakings has been so far successful that the local Soviet Government is ready to nationalize others and is only awaiting instructions from the Central Government. Forty-five thousand hands are actually working on the construction of the Southern Siberian Railway. Siberia will be able fully to supply Russia with coal and coke. The main task before the Soviets is to increase the manufacturing industry. It is proposed to establish a number of steel foundries and engineering works, for which are needed engineers, chemists, and specialists of all kinds, and also labor, of which there is a marked shortage. It is also intended to establish polytechnics and to widen the activities of the already existing Tomsk Technological Institute.

There is immediate need of machines. Siberia now possesses great stores of wool, furs, wood, rye, butter, and an accumulated stock of about 2,000,000 gallons of alcohol, all of which products will be exchanged only for machines and other things needed for industrial development.

America is making propositions in reply to which the Siberian Soviet will be guided exclusively by directions from the centre. The general impression is hopeful; if only this young democracy is not to be crushed from without, it can deal with its internal enemies easily enough, and would long ago have crushed them finally if they had not had Allied support.

Today's Siberian telegrams report that the Irkutsk-Vladivostok railway is out of danger. The rumor that Colonel Semenoff had occupied Chita is false. Semenoff's bands were driven back from Mogutat.

FAMOUS GENERAL SEEKS EMPLOYMENT

"The Lord Roberts of Russia" Tells of Deplorable Conditions Under Bolshivist Regime.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 24.—The Daily Express publishes a translation of a letter from a Russian General to a friend in England. The Daily Express does not mention the letter writer's name, but says he is one of the most famous Generals in Russia and has been called "the Lord Roberts of Russia," and that during seventy-five years of his life has rendered immense services to his country as a soldier and diplomat.

The letter, which is dated Petrograd, April 15, contains the following:

"We live in unbelievable conditions of the most dreadful despotism, exercised by ignorant, vulgar, and corrupt elements. Of Russia, nobody thinks. The class war has annulled and canceled motherland, religion, truth, honor, and self-respect, exchanging for them mischief, rape, and robbery, and stopping at nothing. The aim excuses the means. Of other morality there is none.

"Feodof has tried several times to come to Petrograd, but he himself was robbed. His works have been seized by the workmen, and he is glad to be still alive, although at the same time we have no accurate news of him here. All industrial and financial life has stopped. The workmen are discharged, the works are closing, the army is nonexistent. Officers are cutting ice as workmen on the river, and also selling papers in the street, in order not to die of hunger.

"For my many years of service in nearly every branch of the administration, the Council of Workmen's and Soldiers' Delegates has absolutely deprived me of my means of existence. My pension has been annulled to the last farthing. All Government loans have been canceled; and, since Dec. 1, coupons have been valueless. As I have no other means of subsistence I and my family are at present starving. We have let our rooms in my flat, and I myself am looking for work.

"In the presence of such circumstances I have decided to address myself to you for assistance. Such a state of affairs will not last forever, and some day an end will come. Will no British firm wish to use my experience with my knowledge of the language by giving me an agency here, or somehow or other utilizing my services? At the same time, understand, I do not wish to receive money for nothing. I do not seek a high position at a large salary. I only wish for work; that is all—to have a modest piece of bread. Whatever work it is, it is just the same, so long as it is honest. Russia I know, and by her I am trusted. Speak in this direction with your friends. Perhaps they will consider me a useful agent, one who is ungble to be disloyal. Leaving Petrograd will not frighten me if it is necessary for business."

GERMANS CONTINUE ADVANCE INTO RUSSIA

LONDON, May 24.—A large German force is reported within twenty-five miles of Kursk, in the Dnieper-Don region, about 300 miles southwest of Moscow, says an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Moscow dated May 16. The Kursk Council of Soldiers and Workmen, the dispatch states, has decided to declare a "revolutionary mobilization" for defensive purposes because of the "critical situation created by the German invasion in violation of the Brest-Litovsk treaty."

The White Russian Republic has been proclaimed with Germany's consent, the Exchange Telegraph correspondent at Moscow reports, telegraphing under date of May 16. A coalition Government has been formed, the dispatch states, and negotiations are proceeding regarding the unity of Lithuania and White Russia, with the idea of forming a separate State under a German military protectorate.

An Associated Press Moscow dispatch says the Central Powers, according to an official German wireless telegram, indorse the view of the Turkish Government that Mussulmans should be at the head of the Government in the Crimea.

White Russia is of indefinite scope, but roughly takes in the region north of the Ukraine, with Poland and the Baltic Provinces on the west and Great Russia on the north and east. It includes Lithuania, where the greater part of the population of White Russian nationality resides. Lithuania has already been recognized by Germany as an independent State allied to the German empire.

SLAVS HERE EAGER TO FIGHT.

Volunteer Army Plan Details to be Given to Lansing.

The Russian committee which went to Washington to obtain the permission of the Government to work out a plan whereby relief could be brought to the demoralized Russian people through an army of volunteers organized in this country returned from the capital yesterday "highly encouraged" by the results of its visit. The committee was composed of Elias Rosenthal, P. Whitney Wishnemetsky, Colonel Nicolai Koch, formerly a member of the Russian Military Commission, and Apollinarius Dimitrovitch Semenovsky, who was Minister of Ways and Communications under the Kerensky Government.

The committee was escorted by Baron Ginsburg of the Russian Embassy to the Department of the Interior, where a high official of that department, on behalf of the Government, heard and considered the proposal as it was presented by Elias Rosenthal, the English-speaking member of the committee.

"I explained to him," said Mr. Rosenthal yesterday, "that there was no other way out of the Russian question at the present time but to raise a volunteer army in this country not only of Russians, but of Slavs, Croatians, Slovenians, and Ukrainians, and lay the foundation of an expedition that could bring to Russia by way of Siberia all the facilities required to assist and stimulate a demoralized Russian people and to shake off the domination of the Bolshevist and German elements.

"I explained to the official that the raising of a volunteer army in this country would meet with the response of many thousands of Slavs. It would not interfere in any way with the interests of the United States, because we would not ask for Slavs eligible to the draft. We could organize a sufficiently large force from the Russian and other Slavic peoples here who are either above the draft age or who are unnaturalized aliens. With such a nucleus for an army we could enter Siberia and march west, gathering thousands of Siberian and Russian volunteers to our banners.

"In accordance with the suggestion of the official who received us, we shall within two days submit to the Secretary of State a full statement of the details involved in carrying out such a project."

RUSSIANS STUDY OUR ROADS

Engineers Will Tour Highways from Here to the Pacific.

A staff of five engineers of the Russian Mission of Ways and Communications, of which Professor G. V. Lomonosoff is President, will start from Times Square today on a cross-country automobile tour to San Francisco. The route will be along the main highways of the country in order that the Russian engineers may have an opportunity of gathering first hand information on road and bridge construction which they intend to utilize in the reconstruction of Russia's railroad systems after the country is restored to order.

The inspection tour will be conducted under the direction of E. S. Zack, Chief of the Engineering Staff of the Russian Mission of Ways and Communications. In his party will be Professor Lomonosoff, Vladimir D. Almazov, Anatol P. Berejkoff, and Henry Czaplitski. They will be accompanied part of the way by two other engineers, John F. Peterson and Witold Pawlowski.

Leaving New York, the main points of the itinerary will be Indianapolis and Chicago by way of the National Trail. Thence to Omaha, Salt Lake City, and San Francisco by way of the Lincoln Highway. The return will be on the Lincoln Highway.

The mission was sent to this country by the Kerensky Government for the purpose of obtaining supplies and studying methods of railroad construction, which could be applied to the rehabilitation of the Russian roads. Until the Kerensky Government was supplanted by the present regime the mission had shipped a considerable amount of supplies. After the Bolsheviki took control, however, the members stopped sending supplies and concerned themselves entirely from that time in acquiring information on road construction, which it could utilize in Russia as soon as that country returned to some stable and recognizable form of Government.

RUMANIAN SPOILS EQUAL INDEMNITY

Von Kuehlmann Gave This as "Experts'" View in Address to Berlin Merchants.

GRIP ON FUTURE HARVESTS

Oil Production Now Two-thirds of Peace Output, Foreign Minister Asserted.

LONDON, May 24.—Economic advantages which Germany has obtained in the peace treaty with Rumania are equivalent to an indemnity from that nation, in the opinion of German experts, Dr. von Kühlmann, the German Foreign Secretary, told the Berlin Chamber of Commerce in his recent speech, in which he discussed the Rumanian treaty before that body.

According to the German wireless report of the address, Dr. von Kühlmann said that Germany's control of the coming Rumanian harvests caused the food question to be looked forward to "with a certain amount of confidence." German trade privileges also were most important, and these included the lease to a German company for ninety-nine years of the Bucharest-Czernavoda-Constanza Railroad line, thus giving ready access to the petroleum fields and grain centres.

Referring to the geographical situation, which eliminated the question of territorial acquisition, Dr. von Kühlmann said that therefore it was all the more necessary to obtain economic advantages up to a limit consistent with the maintenance of Rumania's capacity for production. "Two points," he asserted, "must be taken into consideration, first, guaranteeing Rumanian agricultural and petroleum production as urgently necessary for the carrying on of the war by the Central Powers and for the transition period; and, secondly, the important rôle which Rumania has to fill in providing a thoroughfare to the East, especially as she dominates the lower course of the Danube.

"It is here," continued the Minister, "that there comes into effect the International Danube Delta Committee, upon which only States on the banks of the Danube can be represented. Only if the States agree to it will the countries lying on the Black Sea be able to come into it. Therefore, it is especially important for the German seaboard traffic that we have been able to secure sites for dockyards.

"Along with the Danube, the importance of the Rumanian railways must be considered, especially the Bucharest-Czernavoda-Constanza line, over which Germany must have control. It has been agreed with Bulgaria that this railway to Constanza, which is to be made a free port with grain silos and petroleum tanks, is to be leased to a German company for ninety-nine years.

"The cable between Constantinople and Constanza played an important rôle before the war. This cable is to be developed to the utmost and secured from enemy control."

Alluding to the agreement by which Germany had secured the Rumanian harvest of 1918-19, and the far-reaching option upon the entire Rumanian harvest for the next seven years, Dr. von Kühlmann said:

"One can look forward to the whole food question with a certain amount of confidence. * * * Formal war indemnities were not demanded by Germany, but the numerous privileges we secured are equivalent, in the opinion of experts, to anything which would have been yielded by indemnities. When, some day, the damage caused by the U-boat warfare shall have been made good by newly-built ships, the sea route from Constanza will regain its importance. Whether traffic on the Danube will be able to compete with it is a question of the distant future. For the present we shall have to rely on the Danube.

"It would be a mistake, however, to turn our eyes only to the East. There are the mouths of the Rhine and Elbe. Future policy will have to see to it that German trade strives with redoubled daring and energy to travel once more on the open sea.

"The day will come when the genius of our leaders and the incomparable courage of our army and navy shall have obtained victory and peace for us—a day when ships will again sail the ocean under the black, white and red flag. On that day the German merchant and the German shipowner will prove to the world that they have no equals; that severe trials have only made them better qualified to take up competition again, and will prove that the proud motto, Nulli secundus, is appropriate to them."

In the course of his remarks the Foreign Minister announced that the extraction of Rumanian petroleum had now been so far restored that the output was two-thirds the peace-time production.

CHINESE STUDENTS STRIKE.

Quit Peking University to Protest Against Treaty with Japan.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PEKING, May 24.—Eight hundred students of the Peking University this morning declined to attend the classes and left in a body with the object of protesting to the President against the treaty with Japan.

The palace gates were closed and they were not admitted.

CHINO-JAPANESE ACCORD.

Financial and Economic Union May Follow Military Treaty.

TOKIO, May 18, (Associated Press.)—The military agreement with China has been signed. Being military in nature it is not likely the details will be announced. Also it was arranged particularly to meet the contingency of possible military action in Russia.

Hopes are entertained that it will be the forerunner of a permanent rapprochement with China and, therefore, it is regarded as of great historical moment. Efforts will be continued to prepare for a financial and economic understanding concerning the development of China and, generally speaking, for the broad co-operation of the two great nations in the Orient.

The present accord between China and Japan is attributed to the insistent tactfulness of Premier Count Terauchu. It is the first fruit of his belief, expressed when he assumed the Premiership in October, 1916, that Japan and China have a common world destiny.

MOSCOW, May 15, (Associated Press.)—The Italian Ambassador issued a statement today at Vologda, saying that the allied countries are in entire accord respecting questions of foreign policy. What are regarded by some superficial observers as disagreements among them, he said, are merely different methods of arriving at the common end of winning the war.

The Siamese Minister and his staff have departed from Vologda for Siberia, on the way for Siam.

Bolivia Seeks 10,000 Japanese.

LONDON, May 24.—A Bolivian Plenipotentiary, Munoz Reyes, has arrived in Tokio, according to a dispatch from Tokio to The Daily Mail, to arrange for the settlement of 10,000 Japanese farmers in Bolivia to work vast tracts of uncultivated land. The Mail's correspondent adds that an important development in Japanese emigration to South America is foreshadowed.

WOMEN ENROLL TODAY.

Women who wish to vote in the primaries next September must enroll today. Enrollment places will be open from 8 A. M. to 10 P. M. A list of all these places was printed in The Times last Sunday.

GERMAN TROOPS MUTINY.

Balked at Being Sent to West Front —50 Reported Executed.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—A German division at Dvinsk, Russia, ordered from the east to the western front, refused to proceed, and fifty men were executed and one thousand imprisoned, said a Russian wireless dispatch today to the State Department. Other German troops in the vicinity held demonstrations in favor of the division.

From the same source reports were received that the 56th German Regiment and others en route from the east to the western front held demonstrations against the continuation of the war.

A series of complaints against the action of the German authorities in various places in Russia, transmitted by the Moscow Government to Berlin, as outlined in the dispatch, declare that armed German merchant vessels had been sent to bombard Black Sea towns, that Russian fishing boats had been sunk, and that a Russian steamer carrying passengers had been torpedoed by a German submarine in Waida Bay. One complaint said a hospital ship had been attacked by German submarines in the Black Sea, and another protested against confiscation of Russian property by Germany in Finland.

ATTACKS KAISER'S COMPACT

Count Karolyi Calls It Obstacle to Hungary's Aspirations.

AMSTERDAM, May 24.—Protesting against the deepening of the alliance between Austria-Hungary and Germany, Count Michael Karolyi, in a speech at Eger, according to a Budapest dispatch to the Weser Zeitung, asserted that it would be an obstacle to Hungary's aspirations for political and economic independence.

Count Michael, who is head of the Hungarian Independence Party, reemphasized his pacifist policy, saying:

"You must stand up for a peace by understanding because the preservation of civilization is a great possession."

Italy Now Has a Food Minister.

ROME, May 23.—A Food Ministry is created under a decree promulgated today. Dr. Silvio Crespi, who has been Food Controller, received the new portfolio and Signor Nunziate was appointed Under Secretary. Signor Reggior, Under Secretary for Marine Transportation, has resigned. Salvatore Orlando has been appointed to succeed him.

GERMANY RACING AGAINST WILSON

prospects were felt most confident about the result. He said he felt happier than at any time during the war over the prospects of making the most effective use of the entire forces of the alliance. He had tried repeatedly to achieve unity of command, and it was really incredible that for months the Government had to fight every inch of the way to unity of direction against potent influences. But unity was now a fact, and it had added mightily to the strength of the Allies. The commander of the allied armies, General Foch, was one of the most brilliant of war strategists.

"He is a man of dynamic energy and profound knowledge and experience," said the Premier, "commanding the respect, admiration, confidence, and affection of the allied soldiers of every army."

The Premier said that the Allies were approaching the greatest battle that was ever fought and upon which depended greater consequences for the human race than any other battle in the world's history. He was glad to think that the Allies had to head the forces for freedom a man of General Foch's commanding genius.

"For the Germans as well as for us, the next few weeks will be a race between Hindenburg and President Wilson," said Mr. Lloyd George, "and the Germans are straining every muscle to reach the goal first, on the eve of American help becoming available for the Allies.

"This is not a time to organize campaigns to harass men in charge of the destinies of the nation. There ought to be a truce from all those monoeuvres, at any rate until this great offensive is over. Everything must be done to keep up the spirits and the moral determination and unity of the people as long as this struggle continues.

"We are approaching what may be the decisive struggle of the war. It is encouraging to know that we are entering it with a good heart and a clear conscience.

"Had I thought that by any safe or honorable means we could either have averted this struggle from the start or brought it to an earlier termination, I should feel at this moment not merely burdened down with anxiety but weighted down with guilt. I can honestly say that the Government has neglected no possible means for finding out whether there was any honorable outlet to this war, its horrors and tragedies.

"There are two types of extremists. The extremist who is trying for peace when there is no peace is not a real friend of peace but an enemy of peace. He is an encouragement to the enemy, and depresses his friends. Then there is the war extremist, who regards every thought of making peace as if it were treason to the State. But the path of sanity and safety which a Government ought to tread is between those two extremes.

German Army Party Blocks Peace.

"There are men who have paid too much heed to the speeches of statesmen of the Central Powers. To all appearances they are reasonable speeches, and a good many people in this and other countries have said, 'Why don't you respond to these appeals?'

"We did answer, and the moment we answered the response came from the German cannon. Why? It was not because the German and Austrian statesmen were deliberately deceiving us. That is not the charge. It was because they did not in the least understand in those countries how they are used by their military chieftains.

"When it served their purpose they were mere puppets. When it suited the purpose of the military chieftains they were allowed to let loose their peace cylinders, when the wind was favorable, in the direction of the Allies, to poison the atmosphere, but there was other business to be done, and that was where the military chieftains came in.

"We are dealing with a ruthless Prussian despotism that is out for plunder, loot, and pillage. Treaties restrain them just as little today as in the day of Belgium. They do not intend to bring the war to an end until their basket is as full as it can hold."

Says People's Will Backs Him.

The Premier in concluding his speech with a plea that any criticism at this time should be intended not to hurt but to help, said:

"During the eighteen months I have been at the head of affairs I have had no party organization behind me to defend or advertise my public record. I have neither the time nor the inclination for either.

"No mere intrigue or cabal could place at the head as Chief Director of the British Empire and maintain him for eighteen months an ordinary man of the people, without rank or social influence or special influence, and with no party organization behind him. I was put there by the will of the people of this country to do my best to win the war, and as long as I continue to do my best I feel sure that I shall have behind me men of all parties and creeds who place the honor of their native land above the triumph of any faction."

LLOYD GEORGE FIGURES PUZZLE WASHINGTON

Doubt as to Basis of Estimate of American Aid—Confident of Stopping New Drive.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Premier Lloyd George's statement that the United States had thus far been able to counterbalance less than one-fifth of the fighting strength which the Germans gained for west front operations through the collapse of Russia left officials here somewhat puzzled as to the figures upon which it was based.

In view of the fact that Secretary Baker formally announced some time ago that more than 500,000 American troops were in Europe, it was pointed out that the British Premier's statement would indicate that between 2,500,000 and 3,000,000 German troops had been released from the eastern front and were being employed in the west. Army officers here do not believe that Germany received any such advances from the Russian collapse. It has never been reported, they say, that the German fighting units in the east totaled so much.

It was regarded as probable that Premier Lloyd George was basing his statement on the number of men of the American Army now in line before Amiens with the French forces. The strength of that American force has never been made public, but it is known to be in excess of one division, and probably, counting all auxiliaries as well as line regiments, reaches a figure at least above 100,000. If that is true and the Premier based his calculation upon an American participation of 100,000 men, it would indicate that British information was that half a million German troops had been withdrawn from the eastern front for use in the west. That figure, however, it is felt here, probably underestimates the factual German movement.

Whatever the strength of the American Army in France may be today, the statement is made in semi-official quarters and has not been challenged at the War Department that a million men will have been transported by July 1 of this year. Officers here assert that the German withdrawal from the east front certainly could not have been anywhere like five times that number. The race between German offensive plans and the American effort to aid the Allies pictured by Mr. Lloyd George therefore narrows down to a question of the time when a heavy net increase in the man power facing Germany in the west will have been made.

Renewal of the German drive in France, indicated by Mr. Lloyd George as imminent, finds American military opinion here absolutely confident of the outcome. There is not a doubt in the minds of high officers familiar with the situation that the enemy will be repelled with loss and the offensive power of Germany finally broken.

There are those who believe that the end of the war may come this year as a result. Others foresee a long defensive struggle by the German Army while efforts to secure peace on the best possible terms are made by the Berlin diplomats.

In assessing the situation as it stands today in France, officers here point out that the Germans' position strategically is far weaker than it was when the drive was launched in March. Their lines are now shaped so that there is constant danger of flank attack from several points that might mean disaster. To guard those points ample reserves must be held, whatever the call for more men from the fronts of attack. Before the German Army stands a force that has been largely rehabilitated since the shock of the drive fell upon the British and French fronts and bent them back by weight of numbers. Losses in men and material have been made good. The armies are keyed to a high pitch of enthusiasm.

Besides the American reinforcements, many thousands of trained Italian troops have reached the front in France. They came without equipment beyond their uniforms, it is understood, but have now been fully supplied and are available for employment by the supreme commander, General Foch.

It is regarded as probable, to sum up the man power situation, that the effective fighting strength of the Allies in France today shows a considerable net gain over what it was on March 21, when the German assault was begun.

On the other hand, Germany, with losses certainly as great as those of the British and French combined, and probably very much greater, has only her returning wounded men to fill up the depleted ranks of her front line divisions. Every regiment of the German troops that could be spared from the eastern front was withdrawn before the first blow was struck. Nothing has happened since to make additional forces available. With a disorganized Russia at her back, Germany cannot further reduce the forces she is compelled to hold in the east, it is believed here.

OUR YARDS AVERAGE A STEEL SHIP A DAY

More Than 200,000 Tons Output in May Indicated by First 23 Days.

URGENT PLEAS FOR RECORD

Hurley and Fuel Board Confer on Means to Meet Shortage in Tank Steamers.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—In the first twenty-three days of this month American shipyards completed and delivered more steel tonnage than in any month since the Emergency Fleet Corporation took charge of the building situation.

In all, twenty-nine steel vessels, aggregating 174,662 tons deadweight, were put into active service. It is believed that the total before the end of the month will be considerably over 200,000 tons, and may reach 250,000. Reports have been received that a number of large vessels will be completed within the next week. The record for the first twenty-three days was equal to one ship of 7,594 tons each day.

Of the twenty-nine steel ships delivered, twenty-four were requisitioned on the ways when the Fleet Corporation took control and five were ships for which new contracts were let. Five of the ships, with a total tonnage of 28,200, were delivered yesterday.

All of the shipyards were urged recently to make the month a memorable one in shipbuilding by establishing a new record. One telegram received from the Skinner & Eddy Company of Seattle gave this report of the activity at that yard:

"Our West Apaum launched 5:30 P. M. today, (Thursday,) fifty-five days from laying of keel. This makes three vessels launched within last five weeks, two of them in fifty-five days, one in fifty-seven days. Will launch another vessel about June 5."

WASHINGTON, May 24.—The shortage of tank steamers, particularly for use in the Mexican trade, was the subject of a conference today between Chairman Hurley and Fuel Administration officials. Oil companies which have had their vessels requisitioned for transatlantic or naval use have urged that the quickest way to remedy the fuel oil shortage in this country is to put the ships back to bringing oil from Tampico.

Concrete tankers may be the solution of the problem. Steel tankers are being built, but will require seven or more months for completion, while the sixteen concrete tank steamers, for which contracts have been let, should be turned out in less time. In addition, designs are being prepared for concrete oil barges, of which fifty or 100 may be built on the Gulf Coast. Steel barges under construction on the lakes, and small tank steamers of 3,500 tons' capacity to tow them, will probably be put into the Mexican trade.

PERSHING'S OFFICERS FULL OF CONFIDENCE

Say Many of New Troops Are Fit for Fighting Without More Training.

By CHARLES H. GRASTY.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, May 24.—American officers are very numerous in Paris. They are part of the steady stream flowing northward to meet the German offensive. Among these officers the spirit runs high. They do not know exactly how it is to be done, but they are confident that the Germans will be held until America sends men enough to turn the scale. They all have supreme confidence in Foch. All speak hopefully and expectantly of their own commander, General Pershing, coming to lead and advise in the great battle about to begin.

Every officer speaks with satisfaction and pride of the American soldiers. The West Pointers express themselves as well pleased at the fine showing made by the new troops. I asked particularly about one division which recently arrived, in which I have many personal friends, and was assured that in a pinch these troops were ready now for actual fighting. Another divison composed of National Guard units—one from a State long my home—was much complimented by the officers, who predicted that the men would duplicate the fine record made by those of Massachusetts.

A point always commented upon is the fine discipline among the militia. None of the other new country men are quite equal to them there, and they are as good as the best in courage, coolness, and resourcefulness.

CITY NEAR QUOTA IN RED CROSS DRIVE

Gift of $3,000,000 from Rockefeller Foundation Helps Make the Total $23,850,111.

Contribution of $100,000 by Lackawanna Will Start Big Railroad Gifts, It Is Hoped.

New York's contribution to the Red Cross reached a total of $23,850,111 at noon yesterday, with the help of the largest gift of the campaign—$3,000,000 from the Rockefeller Foundation.

Gifts which had not been counted up to noon yesterday and which were received since are believed to have carried New York City's total well over the $25,000,000 which was set for the goal of the campaign. Yesterday's showing filled the leaders of the drive in New York City with the confidence that, as far as New York City was concerned, the prediction made by Cleveland H. Dodge last Saturday night in the presence of President Wilson, that the fund would be oversubscribed by 50 per cent at least, would be realized.

Yesterday's gift makes a total of $8,000,000 which the Rockefeller Foundation has contributed to the Red Cross since this country entered the war. It increased the expenditures of the foundation for war purposes to a total of more than $14,000,000. The rate at which the foundation has been spending money is far greater than its revenue, and the deficit has been made up by contributions by John D. Rockefeller, in whose honor a great demonstration was made at the daily meeting of Red Cross teams at the Chamber of Commerce yesterday.

Rockefeller Gift Announced.

Mr. Rockefeller himself was not present at the meeting, but the gift of the foundation was announced by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., who said:

"Last year the Rockefeller Foundation contributed $5,000,000 to the Red Cross campaign, which was part of a total amount of $11,000,000 in round figures which it pledged to war enterprises during the year. Since the annual income of the foundation is about $6,000,000, the greater part of which is already pledged to the support of various enterprises, educational, medical, &c., which the foundation itself is carrying on in various parts of the world, it was able to make these war appropriations only by trenching upon its principal to the extent of $5,000,000, and through the generosity of its founder $6,500,000 of additional funds had been placed in its hands.

"The trustees were led to make this large contribution to the first campaign because the Red Cross, reorganized on a war basis, was then in its infancy, because its subscribing membership was only 200,000, and because of the seemingly impossible sum which it was to raise. Obviously the trustees of the Foundation are not in a position to renew a contribution of this size or anything approaching it, nor is such a gift necessary, even if it were possible, for today the Red Cross has a record of achievement which is unprecedented. Its membership is 23,000,000, and as a result of its wise and efficient management, it has won the complete confidence and is entitled to the fullest support of the American people.

Big Gift Taxes Resources.

"The contribution which the Foundation voted to make is considerably in excess of the amount which its resources for the current year would justify, and is made possible only by a gift from the founder to cover the excess amount. As Chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Foundation, I take pleasure in reporting to the Corporation Team for inclusion in its receipts a pledge from the Foundation of $3,000,000."

Great applause greeted the announcement, and as it was subsiding, Cleveland H. Dodge said:

"That grand old man won't hear the applause. He hasn't given this magnificent sum for the sake of applause, and I think out of self-respect for ourselves, we cannot let this occasion pass without giving him a rising vote of thanks."

The motion was adopted at once, and several hundred Red Cross workers rose and continued the demonstration.

The chorus of church bells and factory whistles was repeated seven times yesterday, and the huge red cross at Broadway and Fifth Avenue moved up seven blocks, to mark the total of the day of more than $7,000,000, a sum greater by more than $2,000,000 than that raised in this city on any preceding day of the campaign.

Whitman at Chamber of Commerce.

At the meeting at the Chamber of Commerce yesterday, at which William C. Breed presided, Morgan J. O'Brien said:

"An association like this has been a wonderful agency in the present war. What we need is, of course, co-ordination and co-operation. With these as our watchword we can go forward until we have approached the ultimate objects of this association, and all that is necessary in that direction is for us always to remember the cardinal principles that underlie every true association of men and women united in a great cause, and that is—in essentials let us have unity; in nonessentials let us have liberty; in all things let us have charity."

Governor Whitman, who came to the meeting unexpectedly, praised the generosity which had been shown by New York City, and added:

"It is typical of the attitude of our people in the holy cause to which the country is committed; they are giving freely, liberally, and loyally, and will keep on giving. We are only beginning; the opportunity to give will continue; it will be a splendid opportunity, and it will be responded to in a way which will make every American citizen worthy of the name. We will do something to show that we are worth while, even if we cannot wear a uniform or carry a rifle. We will prove that we value something besides the mere material prosperity which we have enjoyed for so many years, and which I pray we will continue to enjoy."

The present campaign has resembled the Third Liberty Loan campaign in the great amount of money which it has gathered in on the streets. All of the teams, which have been making collections on the streets and at open-air meetings, have reported that the public has never before shown such promptness and liberality in giving, and that the education which the city has had in giving money and investing it in America's good cause has borne wonderful results in New York's average citizen. The activity of the workers has of course been partly responsible for this result.

House-to-House Canvass Effective.

Incomplete returns for the house-to-house canvass yesterday showed a total of $137,265, which is believed to represent more than a hundred thousand separate gifts, and comes very largely from families which have already contributed through other sources.

Twenty-seven city departments have reported already that 100 per cent. of their employes have subscribed. Canvassers of the Fire Department were much worried over the difficulty in filling their quota, because of the fact that more than six hundred firemen were on vacation. This difficulty was met, however, by firemen who volunteered to underwrite subscriptions for all those absent, and the Fire Department thus entered the 100 per cent. class. Very close to a perfect record is expected on behalf of all city employes, who number more than 100,000. G. M. Curran of the committee canvassing city employes wrote to the Mayor yesterday that he estimated the total contributions of city and county employes at $1,000,000.

The New York Public Service Commission reported yesterday that all of its 1,700 employes had subscribed to the Red Cross War Fund, and that practically all of the 2,000 employes of other State Departments in New York City had made contributions. Oscar S. Straus has been named by Governor Whitman to take charge of the solicitation among State employes in the city.

Thomas G. Patten, Postmaster of New York City, announced that the Post Office employes had entered the 100 per cent. class, the subscriptions from all employes totaling more than $10,000. The Post Office employes also gave more than $1,000 to the Salvation Army.

Magistrate McQuade, in the Tombs Court, conducted a vigorous Red Cross campaign among the petty offenders yesterday. He directed Police Captain John Lee, in charge of the court attendants, to bring a Red Cross worker into court. Miss Fannie Koenig, daughter of Samuel Koenig, Chairman of the State Republican Committee and niece of Magistrate Koenig, was found. The defendants, who included peddlers accused of obstructing traffic, persons quarreling with their neighbors, and others, received the impression that if they contributed reasonable amounts to the Red Cross they would obtain favor in the eyes of the Magistrate. The first batch of offenders contributed $106 to the Red Cross and escaped punishment. Several hundred dollars was gathered in yesterday, and the practice will prevail during the drive in the court of Magistrate McQuade, who has recommended the plan to other City Magistrates.

Rally at St. Paul's Chapel.

Governor Whitman was the principal speaker at noon yesterday at a rally at St. Paul's Chapel, at Broadway and Fulton Street, after 100 nurses in their blue service uniform and the Police Glee Club had taken part in a procession about the churchyard. Dr. William T. Manning also spoke.

The Mayor's Committee of Women on National Defense, which set a goal of $50,000 for its drive in City Hall Park, passed that yesterday afternoon, and now has $75,000 in sight. A strong lift was given the campaign yesterday by a speech by Sergeant H. M. Radermacher, a young Canadian, who offered for auction the cap of a Bavarian soldier which he had taken at Pozieres. Mrs. W. Bourke Cochran got the trophy for $1,000. The New York Letter Carriers' Band furnished the music, and some of the singers and entertainers were Beatrice Bowman, Gus Edwards and Rose Coghlan. Among the speakers were Major John T. Axton, Chaplain at Camp Merritt; the Rev. Vincent J. Toole, Chaplain of the 324th Field Artillery; Sergeant A. T. Couborough of the Anzacs, and Colonel J. R. de Salaberry of the 20th Canadians.

Help for Russia and Poland was the plea made last night at a Red Cross meeting in Cooper Union where a crowd that filled the hall listened to Colonel William Boyce Thompson, former head of the American Red Cross in Russia; Countess Laura de Turczynowicz, and Alma Gluck, the prima donna. Many of those in the audience were either of Russian or Polish birth. The Countess was accompanied by Lieutenant Marya Przybylowska, a young woman who wore a gray military uniform. The Countess told of her escape to Warsaw when the Prussians approached her home.

Alma Gluck Sings "America."

After the applause that greeted his statement that the President was thinking of Russia and the countries of Eastern Europe had subsided, Colonel Thompson said that he believed the way was opening up for Russia, and that the barriers that have prevented unity of purpose on the part of all the allied nations would be broken down. "I believe," he said earnestly, "that soon American men, side by side with the Russians and the Poles, will be fighting the Germans."

Colonel William Boyce Thompson of the Corporations Division received a telegram late yesterday afternoon informing him that the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad had voted a contribution of $100,000 for the Red Cross. This was regarded as one of the most important events of the day, for the reason that it is the first contribution from a large railroad, and it is believed that the precedent will be followed by other railroads which have been in doubt, because of the fact that they are under Governmental control and because of the peculiar position of the railroads in other respects, whether they should make any contributions.

While the Corporations Committee has met with few corporations raising doubts as to the legal correctness of their making contributions, certain classes of corporations, especially companies without capital stock, have hesitated over the matter. The Corporations Committee wishes to emphasize the clear-cut opinions of Charles Evans Hughes, Morgan J. O'Brien, and other lawyers who have stated that there is no question at all as to the legality of such contributions.

CLEAR RED CROSS OFFICER.

Inspector Within Rights in Curbing Activities of Collectors.

John W. Murray, an investigator for a division of the American Red Cross campaign fund, who found yesterday that a squad of Red Cross workers who had been authorized to collect funds in the vicinity of Corona, L. I., had left their own territory and had invaded the district of Manhattan workers at the Grand Central Terminal, was arrested when he sought to compel the Brooklyn collectors to return to their own district. M. J. Howe, head of the Brooklyn squad of men and women, who ordered the arrest of Mr. Murray, apologized and withdrew his complaint when the latter reached the East Fifty-first Street Station and showed written authority for his action, signed by Walter Stabler, Chairman of the Committee on House-to-House Campaign.

None of the Corona persons was concerned with the chief purposes of Mr. Murray's work, but his arrest reached the attention of District Attorney Swann, who requested both Murray and Howe to call at his office to see if they could aid him in an investigation made by members of his staff, which, he said, had indicated that persons not authorized by the Red Cross to take collections were soliciting contributions and were probably withholding the money for their own use and thus imposing on a generous public. Murray then told the District Attorney that he had evidence that contribution boxes had been rifled and discarded.

Mr. Swann said his detectives had reported to him that they had questioned forty girls and women on Thursday night, who said they were collecting for the Red Cross, but none was able to produce a badge, identification cards, or credentials of any description in support of their authority to solicit from the public. Some of these collectors were at Fifth Avenue and Forty-second Street. Others were at Broadway and Forty-third Street, and a greater number of them worked along Fifth and Eighth Avenues and Broadway to 110th Street.

"A man in the uniform of a soldier, who used a fictitious name, was found collecting Red Cross funds at Fifty-seventh Street and Broadway," Mr. Swann added. "He said his mother was the Captain of a Red Cross district in Queens County. This man will be further questioned tomorrow."

The District Attorney said he had received several complaints concerning men in soldiers' and sailors' uniforms ostensibly assisting women in collecting Red Cross funds.

"These men in uniform sometimes treat the public in an insulting manner, especially in crowded restaurants and on the streets," asserted the prosecutor. "I do not think any of these men in uniform come from any branch of the regular United States forces, and I am assured by British officers and the High French Commissioner here that none of their men is permitted to assist in this work."

The District Attorney intimated that he thought some of these men in uniform were technically slackers and that most of them belonged to some one or more of the militia units. One of the men, he said, had concealed the militia emblem on his uniform and had thus given the impression that he was a soldier who had seen service. The District Attorney telephoned to W. C. Breed, one of the Red Cross managers, and to William Fox, head of the Motion Picture and Allied Theatrical Team, which has had a number of men in uniform appearing in the theatres, suggesting that they discontinue the use of uniformed men.

Mr. Fox, it was said, replied that Commissioner James MacBride of the Municipal Civil Service had approved the use of the soldiers, and that he would continue the work.

"Well, notwithstanding Jimmy MacBride," Mr. Swann declared, "if these men in uniform are allowed to continue their methods—giving the public the impression that they are fighting men from the front—I shall let the public know that it is a deception."

QUAKERS AID RED CROSS.

Historical Pageant Presented on Crescent A. C. Grounds.

An elaborate pageant showing the part taken by the Society of Friends in the struggle for world freedom was staged yesterday afternoon at the Crescent Athletic Club Field at Bay Ridge by members of the Brooklyn and Manhattan meetings. The history of the society since its inception by George Fox, its conflict with persecution and bigotry, and its triumph in America were depicted in allegory.

There was a tumult of applause when the final episode of the pageant, symbolizing the war work of the Quakers, was shown. This episode was presented as a protest against the prevailing belief that all Quakers are pacifists. The pageant was enacted by the pupils of the Friends' School, Brooklyn. It was arranged by Mrs. John L. Carter, and music for it was composed by Charles J. MacDermott. The entire proceeds of the pageant were given to the Red Cross.

PRESIDENT'S RED CROSS PROCLAMATION LOST

Police Search for Historic Document, Which Was to Have Been Auctioned to Help Drive.

The Police Department has asked the entire city to join in the search for a historic document bearing the signature of President Wilson which was lost in this city. This is the original of the proclamation of the President of the Second Red Cross War Fund drive. It was brought to this city to be auctioned off at a Red Cross sale of art works and other gifts at the Waldorf-Astoria on Monday night. According to the announcement by the police, it was lost in a taxicab by James R. Murphy, who missed it after leaving the Hotel Calumet, in West Fifty-seventh Street. The Bureau of Licenses is carrying on a search among taxicab owners. The proclamation, which is about 10 inches wide and 15 inches long, was in a pasteboard holder.

If it is found the document will be offered on Monday night, according to the program, the lowest bid to be considered being $50,000.

BOMBING OF HOSPITAL AIDS RED CROSS DRIVE

Headquarters Reports $22,000,000 New Contributions, Making Total $86,689,000.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Red Cross subscriptions today took the Second War Fund $22,000,000 closer to its goal of $100,000,000, and the total tabulaed at National Headquarters tonight was $86,689,000.

Reports told how a wave of indignation sweeping across the nation with the news of latest hospital bombing exploits of the Germans in France had played a great part in making the day the most successful of the campaign, and officials count even more confidently now on an immense oversubscription to the fund.

New York City, with more than $23,000,000 pledged, came close to its quota of $25,000,000. Western cities reported totals for an excess of their quotas, and in the Northwest St. Paul had raised $660,000, against a quota of $440,000. Spokane gave $200,000, its quota being $90,000; Portland, Ore., exceeded its $250,000 mark by $80,000, and Tacoma, with a quota of $110,000, had raised $125,000. Kansas City had $881,000 on a quota of $800,000.

From national banks 429 subscriptions were reported, and the total tabulated by 350 institutions was $708,946. Subscriptions by divisons announced tonight were:

Central	8,800,000
Gulf	1,838,409
Lake	7,256,075
Mountain	1,599,839
New England	4,001,000
Northern	2,382,000
Northwestern	2,195,647
Pacific	3,089,426
Pennsylvania	5,500,000
Potomac	2,005,608
Southern	3,001,951
Southwestern	9,030,510

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., May 24.—Subscriptions to the Red Cross War Fund drive in the Northern Division, which is made up of the States of Minnesota, Montana, North Dakota, and South Dakota, have reached $3,315,000, according to an estimate made at headquarters here late today.

BOSTON, May 24.—New England neared its minimum goal of $7,000,000 for the Red Cross fund today, reports received at a late hour tonight placing the figures at $6,457,159. Campaign headquarters announced that the minimum mark was to be disregarded and that all efforts were to be concentrated on obtaining a 25 per cent. oversubscription.

The Boston Metropolitan District reported its best day thus far with $350,000, making the total $2,556,000 toward its minimum of $3,000,000.

Figures announced from other districts included: Maine, $437,000; New Hampshire, $228,000; Vermont, $165,000; Rhode Island, $729,000, and Eastern Massachusetts, $1,201,159.

BID FOR WHITE HOUSE WOOL

T. J. Ryan of This City Offers $100 for "Smallest Fraction of an Ounce."

ALBANY, N. Y., May 24.—A bid of $100 for the "smallest fraction of an ounce" of the wool from the White House sheep, donated by the President and Mrs. Wilson to be auctioned off in each State for the Red Cross War Fund, was received by Governor Whitman today from Timothy J. Ryan of New York.

It was suggested that if the wool were divided into small enough lots $1,000,000 might be realized. The highest bid for the two pounds of wool today was made by Alton C. Bean of Albany, who offered $500.

NEW RED CROSS BADGES.

Organization Gives Out Schedule of Official Insignia.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—The American Red Cross has issued from headquarters instructions concerning Red Cross medals and badges. The official medal in silver, bronze, or gold has been formally adopted by the Red Cross and may be awarded to such persons as give important volunteer service. The President of the corporation will bestow this in the name of the Red Cross.

There are three standard badges—the enrolled Red Cross nurse badge, the enrolled Red Cross dietitian badge, and the membership badge. Bars denoting the class of service may be placed above any of these three standard badges. The insignia for home defense nurses will be a white enamel bar bearing the words, "Home Defense Nurse," to be used in connection with a standard membership badge. The Life-Saving Corps has a similar bar, with the words, "Life-Saving Corps." Red Cross physicians, surgeons, and other Red Cross medical practitioners may wear a white enamel bar above the standard membership badge, with the words, "Medical Service."

Field service in the war zone, or in the military camps in the United States, or specially meritorious service in the civil areas in times of disaster, will be recognized by a bronze bar bearing appropriate words and placed below the standard badge. First aid contest awards will have a similar bar below the membership badge. The Life-Saving Corps has a silver alloy bar.

General service with the Red Cross will be recognized by a service bar which will be worn independently or below a standard membership badge. It is authorized for award to all classes of Red Cross workers, at national headquarters, at division headquarters, or at chapters, branches, or auxiliaries, both volunteer and paid, including officers, clerks, and those engaged in chapter or division workrooms. This bar is of white enamel, bears a red Greek cross in the centre, and is given after four months of service comprising not less than 200 hours. On completion of the next period of service, this bar may be exchanged for a similar bar with a tiny star at each end. Bars may be exchanged as the period of service grows, so that each star awarded indicates not less than 800 hours' work, and a five-star bar indicates not less than 4,000 hours' work. Service periods will be counted from Jan. 1, 1918.

Notable Concert in Cincinnati Raises $40,000—One Box, $3,500.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, May 24.—Between $35,000 and $40,000 was realized here tonight for the Red Cross through a concert conducted by Eugene Ysaye, the Belgian violinist, who was recently appointed conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra. One box seat for the concert brought $3,500 at auction.

The program furnished was considered by musical critics one of the best that has ever been rendered here, one part being the triple concerto of Vivaldi, played by Eugene Ysaye, Mischa Elman, and Gabriel Ysaye, son of the conductor.

One of the best received numbers on the program was a reading by the Belgian actor Carlo Liten. It was a poem, "Sing, Belgium, Sing," set to the music of Elgar, the accompaniment of which was played by seventy-nine members of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, who had contributed their services for the occasion.

ARMY WANTS MEN UP TO 55 YEARS OLD

TO SERVE BEHIND THE LINES

Proposed Law Would Release Thousands of Fighters from Staff Duty —Senate Favors 3,000,000 Call.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Another move toward full utilization of the country's man power was made today when Secretary Baker sent to Congress the draft of a bill proposing to raise the maximum age limit for voluntary enlistment in the army from 40 to 55 years. All men over 40 so enlisted would be assigned to noncombatant service.

In a letter to Speaker Clark asking that the bill be pushed, Secretary Baker said:

"Every man above the age of 40 years who is enlisted in noncombatant branches of the service will make available fro duty with the line troops a man within the prescribed age limit for all troops.

"Many men whose long experience as mechanics and artisans will make them particularly valuable to the various staff corps and departments may be thus secured instead of younger men without such experience, and the efficiency of the staff corps and the departments thus will be increased."

There probably are 7,500,000 men between the ages of 40 and 55, and many thousands of them already have attested their desire to serve by bombarding the department with applications. While the great majority of the men in this class undoubtedly will be restrained from enlisting by family and business ties, the number at liberty to join the colors is expected to be more than sufficient to meet the purpose in view.

Staff corps positions include many duties behind the front. Every headquarters unit includes a number of places for which the older men would be just as well suited as the present occupants who, under the new plan, would be released for line duty.

Official estimates are that a modern army, to be maintained as an efficient unit must have between 40 and 45 per cent. of its actual strength on duty behind the fighting zone. This means that of the first 1,000,000 men sent to France 400,000 serve along the line of communication, in hospitals, or at the various headquarters and debarkation bases.

The Senate Military Committee today unanimously went on record in favor of large expansion of the American Army. It ordered a favorable report on a resolution by Senator Reed of Missouri, declaring for an increase of 3,000,000 men.

By the resolution "the President is authorized in his discretion, and at such time as he may determine, to raise and begin the training of an additional force of 3,000,000 men," who are "to be called for training at such times and in such numbers as the President may direct."

Senator Reed announced that he probably would report the bill to the Senate next Monday and endeavor to have it considered at an early date.

The House Military Committee already has added to the Army bill an Administration provision giving unlimited authority to the President to raise an army of whatever size needed.

BROOKLYN SOLDIER KILLED.

Carlton D. Roberts Was Member of Eighteenth Infantry.

Carlton De Wolf Roberts, reported in yesterday's army casualty list as having died in France of wounds received in action, was a son of Mrs. Mary M. Roberts of 2,634 Bedford Avenue, Brooklyn. He was 21 years old and was born in Brooklyn. Roberts entered the army last November. He went to France as a member of Company K, 18th Infantry, in January. He was formerly in the employ of a firm of lace importers in Manhattan.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., May 24.—The mention in today's casualty list of Private Elmer H. Prengel of this city as having died of disease in France recalls a peculiar incident which exemption boards here have been unable to explain. Last September two women appeared before the district draft board, each claiming Prengel as her son and seeking exemption for him on the ground that she was wholly dependent upon him. Both gave the same address. Their visits were a week apart, and the last woman to appear declared she knew nothing of the other claimant.

There is no record that Prengel established his identity before leaving for France.

PRAISES OUR WORK IN WAR.

Prof. Roz Opens a Series of Lectures on America's Contribution.

PARIS, May 23.—High tribute was paid to the spirit of organization of the American nation by Professor Firmin Roz in a lecture at the Sorbonne today on "The American Effort in the World War." The lecture was the first of a series on the subject in French universities, and is part of the educational work organized by James Kerney, representative on the Committee of Public Information, with the object of placing before the French people what America is doing on both sides of the sea.

Professor Roz eulogized the work done thus far by the American Army, Navy, Aviation Corps, and Red Cross. He declared that the American soldier was clean in body and mind.

Referring to the work of the Red Cross, he recounted an incident in a large American Red Cross hospital near the front in which French and American wounded are patients. The Americans are not supplied with "pinard," while the French soldiers receive a regular ration of wine from the hospital authorities.

"Without pinard, a soldier is worthless," a French soldier told the professor, who asked:

"How about the Americans?"

"They are not used to it," the poilu replied.

Professor Roz said the Americans and French at the front formed parts of one army similar in ideals, courage and abnegation.

American Ambassador Sharp, Judge Berry of the American Chamber of Commerce, and L. V. Benet of the American Club were present.

ELSIE JANIS SINGS FOR MEN AT FRONT

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 23, (Associated Press.)—Seldom has a theatrical entertainment been staged in a more unusual setting than one given this afternoon in a location which enabled several hundred hot and dirty American troopers just out of the trenches to get back for an hour or so to the atmosphere of Broadway. An open-air prize ring was the stage. Airplanes purred overhead, and the booming of the guns on the front was plainly heard.

The ring, located at a crossroad on a hill from which the German borderland opposite the Toul sector can easily be seen, is constructed of rough lumber and roped in after the conventional style. On it of an evening some of the energetic youngsters of the American Army are wont to while away the hours of rest between trench tours by putting on the gloves and knocking each other around.

The performer who today trod the boards of this unique stage was Miss Elsie Janis, now on a visit to the front to give entertainment for the fighters. She told stories, sang new songs, and danced, and for the most part appeared unconcerned over the unusual conditions surrounding the performance. Once, however, when a German airplane soared in the sky not so very far away and the American anti-aircraft guns began bursting shrapnel around it, the performance stopped for a moment while Miss Janis looked up and asked if there was any chance of her being killed, because she didn't want to be, as she had work to do tomorrow.

The assembled doughboys, thick on the ground around the stage and perched on the housetops everywhere within hearing and seeing distance, yelled in chorus, "No, keep on!" Cheers and applause were very frequent during the show and the shouting on occasions could be heard a mile away.

At the conclusion Miss Janis offered to show the men the new dance steps and several accepted, including one "mule-skinner," who created much amusement by his eccentricities. The music for the performance was furnished by a Y. M. C. A. secretary on the remnant of an old piano.

Miss Janis will remain in the vicinity of the Toul front for two days, entertaining at various rest camps.

PRESIDENT CUTS SOFT COAL PRICE

Reduction, 10 Cents a Ton at Mines, Means $60,000,000 Saving to the Public.

RAILROADS MUST PAY MORE

Ordered to Meet Rate Fixed by Government and to Supply Cars Equitably.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Under the terms of an order dictated tonight by President Wilson the mine price of bituminous coal will be reduced by 10 cents a short ton at 7 o'clock tomorrow morning, and the railroads which have been obtaining coal at prices considerably less than those fixed for other consumers will be forced to pay the Government rate.

It is estimated that the new schedule will add $45,000,000 annually to the railroads' bill. Other consumers, it is said, will save about $30,000,000. The railroads, it is announced, are hereafter to supply cars equitably to all mines and not give certain mines 90 per cent. supply at the expense of others.

The order does not affect the price of anthracite coal used in the majority of households in the eastern part of the country, but it will result in a considerable saving to the industries and to domestic users who place large orders for soft coal.

It is believed by some officials that the new system for the distribution of cars will reduce production cost, on which the old schedule of prices was fixed. A careful study of the developments will be made to determine whether further changes must be made. There will be no changes, however, before August 31.

Ends Long Dispute.

The action by President Wilson brought to an end a long-standing dispute between the Fuel and Railroad Administrations over the price which the railroads should pay for their coal. The matter has been debated at several conferences between Fuel Administrator Garfield and Director General of Railroads McAdoo, and has been before the War Council, which meets with President Wilson on Wednesday afternoons.

The railroads had been paying from $1.46 to $2.07 a ton for coal under agreements made with certain mines. The Fuel Administration held that the railroads should pay the Government fixed price, and in this contention it is said, Dr Garfield was supported by President Wilson.

This, it was contended by the Railroad Administration, would mean an added expenditure on its part of $50,000,000 or more each year, and the argument was made that there should be general reduction of prices to all consumers if the railroads did not receive the lower rate.

There was another deadlock at this point and, after a long conference today, Mr. Garfield and Mr. McAdoo placed their troubles before the President again. The order issued tonight was founded upon the President's decision. The Railroad Administration had argued for an even greater reduction, while the Fuel Administration was in favor of retaining the present scale of prices for the present at least. The outcome, therefore, was accepted as a "draw."

The reduction will cover all orders for coal which have been placed but which are not filled by 7 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Text of the Order.

The order reads as follows:

"The United States Fuel Administration, acting under authority of an executive order of the President dated Aug. 23, 1917, appointing said Administrator, and of subsequent executive orders and in furtherance of said orders and of the act of Congress therein referred to and approved Aug. 10, 1917,

"Hereby orders and directs that all prices for bituminous coal f. o. b. mines in the coal-producing districts throughout the United States fixed by the said executive order of the President, dated 21st August, 1917, and subsequent orders of the United States Fuel Administrator, and in effect at 7 A. M. on the 25th day of May, 1918, shall be and the same hereby are reduced as to all shipments made after 7 A. M. on the 25th day of May, 1918, by the sum of 10 cents for each net ton of 2,000 pounds.

"This order shall in no way affect the increase contained in the executive order of the President dated 27th October, 1917, adding the sum of 45 cents to the prices fixed for bituminous coal under the terms and provisions set forth in said last-mentioned order."

A statement issued tonight by the Fuel Administration read:

"The reduction will mean an annual saving to consumers of a sum estimated by the Fuel Administration at $60,000,000. The President has directed that the railroads pay the Government price for coal. The increased cost of railroad fuel thereby occasioned is also estimated at $60,000,000 per annum. The reduction of 10 cents per ton on all coal will, however, reduce the net increased cost to the railroads from $60,000,000 per annum to $45,000,000 per annum. Under the President's plan the railroads will furnish cars to all coal mines alike, without discrimination except as dictated by the prior requirements of the railroads for operating purposes and the needs of domestic consumers and of the war.

Equal Car Supply.

"Under the present war demands the maximum output of every mine working at full time would still be insufficient to meet the country's coal needs. The principle of equal car supply has accordingly been adopted so as to make for as steady an operation as possible of all properties and for continuous employment of men, thus making for maximum output.

"The introduction of the principle of even car supply will reduce the general average overhead of mine operation and thereby justifies the Administration in putting out a price reduction order. It is understood that the price prices thus fixed will remain undisturbed until the United States Fuel Administrator has before him the cost returns for the twelve months ending Aug. 31, 1918.

"The returns thus far in are being carefully studied by Fuel Administration accountants and engineers, with a view to making the utmost saving to the public that is consistent with a maximum production of coal.

"The order issued tonight will have no effect on the price of anthracite coal, which forms the bulk of the domestic consumption fuel in the Eastern part of the country.

"Consumers of bituminous coal who have already entered their orders for the year's coal supply, but whose coal has not yet been delivered, will, of course, receive their supplies at the reduced price effective tomorrow. This price applies to all coal which leaves the mines after 7 A. M., May 25, no matter how long the order for the delivery of the coal has been standing.

"Coal delivered after 7 A. M., May 25, under contracts which have been entered into since Dec. 29, 1917, will be billed at the new price. Under the regulation of the Fuel Administration all such contracts call for the delivery of coal at the Government price effective at the time of delivery."

DENY PULLMANS CONTROL

Officials Deny Report That Government Has Taken Over Service.

CHICAGO, May 24.—Published reports that the Government had taken over management of the carrier business of the Pullman Company were denied tonight by officials of the corporation. It was stated that there had been no change in the relations between the Pullman Company and the Government since Dec. 28 last, when the Government took over control of the railroads and the Pullman car service of the railroads.

The company's compensation still is based on contracts with the railroads as before, and although actual Federal management of the company could be taken over by the Government at any time, officials of the company said assurances are to the contrary.

MOVE FOR CHEAPER MILK.

Health Commissioner Gets Promise of Aid from Many Agencies.

In an effort to insure an adequate supply of milk at lower prices for the Summer months, Health Commissioner Royal S. Copeland yesterday brought together in conference Commissioner of Markets Jonathan C. Day, his deputy, Miss Laura C. Cauble; State Commissioner of Foods and Markets F. H. Porter, and F. H. Benton, representing the up-State farmers.

All of them promised to do all they could to help the Health Department get a sufficient supply of milk at a reduced price for the poorer parts of the city, and the conference will be followed by the gathering by Commissioner Copeland of representatives of the big distributers, whom he will ask to cut the prices in certain districts for those who are unable to pay the present rates.

Tomorrow is the opening day of the Commissioner's "Health Drive Week," and he has asked the clergy of the city to make the text of sermons on that day "Cleanliness is next to godliness."

KITCHIN BEGINS WORK ON TAX BILL

Kitchin's critics, however, were saying tonight that he had gone too far in giving the provisions of the bill, some of which, they said, would cause a great protest from business interests and might bring about a backfire against the Administration.

In the view of Republicans, the plan of the bill, as announced by Mr. Kitchin, would saddle the taxes almost entirely upon the very prosperous and would not in any appreciable way touch the masses. They said that if they could force through such a bill, great advantages might come to the Democratic Party in the November election.

Kitchin Is Positive.

Mr Kitchin, who was hopeful after the conference with the President last night, said late in the afternoon that he believed the President would recommend a revenue bill at this session. All day he was besieged by Congressmen who wanted to know the decision that had been reached after Secretary McAdoo's conference this morning with the President. He began to lose the optimistic tone that had marked his predictions early in the day, and at five o'clock, without making known his reasons, therefor, said that there would be a revenue bill this session.

President Wilson, he said, was expected to inform the leaders of the House and Senate of his final decision to recommend revenue legislation before the November election. The President probably will make his position known in a letter to Senator Simmons and Representative Kitchin tomorrow.

In announcing his belief that the President would insist upon revenue legislation immediately, Mr. Kitchin said in his good-natured way:

"Just say that I have been the most optimistic man in the world, but I've done lost all hope."

With that he plunged into a brief sketch of what would be the character of the bill and described some of its essential provisions.

"The bill," he said, "will be a wise, just, and righteous revenue measure. There will be sufficient time for hearings, and they probably will be public and begin next week. We expect to take our time in framing the measure in order to cover the situation fully and comprehensively. In my opinion these hearings will begin next week, and will be open to the public for two weeks, during which time we will hear business men and those who will be affected by the tax levy. Probably six weeks will be consumed in our hearing each other in the committee after the public hearings close. We cannot get the bill out for two months, probably late in August or early in September. By that time Congress should have disposed of the supply measures and be ready to devote itself entirely to revenue matters."

Biggest Levy in History.

"How much will be raised by the new bill?" he was asked.

"The bill will raise from $7,000,000,000 to $8,000,000,000, including the old taxes. It will be two and one-half times larger than any revenue bill ever written by any nation. The bill itself will probably raise from $3,000,000,000 to $4,000,000,000 in addition to the total of $4,000,000,000 we expect to get from taxation out of the present revenue bill. In other words, it will double the returns expected from the present bill. The incomes and excess profits taxes will be made to cover the calendar year 1918."

"Has the framework of a bill been submitted to the Ways and Means Committee?" he was asked.

"No; the Ways and Means Committee will write this bill themselves," he replied.

"What do you think will be the effect of a revenue bill now upon business?"

"I think that it will have a very disturbing effect on business, and will cause a great deal of agitation and lobbying," was his reply. "Also I think it will hinder the sale of Liberty bonds in the Fall, although Mr. McAdoo thinks that a revenue bill now will stimulate the sale of bonds."

Mr. Kitchin said that the Ways and Means Committee would "get after the profiteer a little," and would summon some "of the dollar-a-year men to tell the enormous profits their firms had reaped while they were serving the Government for a dollar a year."

Further explaining how the money would be raised, Mr. Kitchin said that 40 per cent. of the new revenues would come from excess profits and incomes. This will be accomplished, he said, by readjusting the brackets on excess profits and income surtaxes. In other words, double the aggregate amount would be received from these sources, but the rates would not be doubled. It is not the intention of the Ways and Means Committee to lower the exemptions of $1,000 and $2,000 now allowed to single and married persons, respectively. There will be increases on excise taxes, he said, and possibly on automobiles, jewelry and phonographs.

Business Must Pay a Billion.

Representative John W. Garner of Texas, a member of the Ways and Means Committee, who was present, interrupted Mr. Kitchin to say:

"You cannot announce to business that they had better get ready to show why they should not be taxed. A billion dollars has got to come out of business—a sum never thought of before. There will be at least fifty propositions to tax. Every nonessential known in this country will be considered."

Mr. Kitchin said he predicted that Congress would be in session until November. "There has never been a bill that became a law in less than five months," he concluded. "We were six months on the last Revenue bill, raising in round numbers $3,000,000,000. The Underwood bill took seven months. The Wilson bill seven months. Why should we be expected to get through in less than five months?"

PRESIDENT CALLS FOR JULY 4 CELEBRATION

Asks Native Americans and Foreign-Born to Celebrate Birth of a New Spirit.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Native Americans were called upon by President Wilson tonight to join with the foreign-born of the United States in celebrating on the Fourth of July this year the birth of a new and greater spirit of democracy.

Committees representing national organizations of nearly every element of the foreign-born citizenship recently sent the President a petition announcing plans for a great demonstration on the Fourth of loyalty to the United States and the cause for which it is fighting and asking the entire country to join with them.

The President tonight made public this reply, addressed to "Our Citizens of Foreign Extraction":

"I have read with great sympathy the petition addressed to me by your representative bodies regarding your proposed celebration of Independence Day, and I wish to convey to you, in reply, my heartfelt appreciation for its expressions of loyal and good-will. Nothing in this war has been more gratifying than the manner in which our foreign-born fellow-citizens, and the sons and daughters of the foreign born, have risen to this greatest of all national emergencies. You have shown where you stand not only by your frequent professions of loyalty to the cause for which we fight, but by your eager response to calls for patriotic service, including the supreme service of offering life itself in battle for justice, freedom, and democracy. Before such devotion as you have shown all distinctions of race vanish, and we feel ourselves citizens in a republic of free spirits.

"I, therefore, take pleasure in calling your petition, with my hearty commendation, to the attention of all my fellow-countrymen, and I ask that they unite with you in making the Independence Day of this, the year when all the principles to which we stand pledged are on trial, the most significant in our national history.

"As July 4, 1776, was the dawn of democracy for this nation, let us, on July 4, 1918, celebrate the birth of a new and greater spirit of democracy, by whose influence we hope and believe what the Signers of the Declaration of Independence dreamed of for themselves and their fellow-countrymen shall be fulfilled for all mankind."

TO EXCHANGE PRISONERS.

Britain Plans an Extension of Present Arrangements with Germany.

LONDON, May 24.—The War Cabinet has decided to open negotiations with Germany, through Holland, for the extension of present arrangements for the repatriation and internment of civilian and combatant prisoners.

There has been strong agitation recently for more active steps by the Government in behalf of prisoners in Germany. This was increased when it became known that the French and Italian Governments had concluded an agreement with Germany for an exchange of prisoners on a large scale. The suffering, starvation, and needless cruelties inflicted on the prisoners in German camps have been brought home to the public recently by a series of letters from repatriated prisoners, and have excited the bitterest feeling.

Major Charles Fox of the Scots Guards, accompanying the Earl of Denbigh on a speaking tour, tells audiences of his experiences. He says that when he was wounded and a prisoner a German officer, "after gathering his mouth full of spit," discharged it straight into Fox's face. He says he saw a British sailor bayoneted and killed when climbing out of a burning hut, and tells how other prisoners, both officers and privates, were bayoneted by guards for slight offenses.

NEGRO WAITERS LIKELY TO BE HIRED BY HOTELS

The Park Avenue Will Employ Them in Place of White Men of Draft Age.

Following the announcement from Washington that all men of draft age must be engaged in useful employment, the waiters and cooks who on Thursday went on strike at the Park Avenue Hotel kept the telephones hot yesterday in their efforts to be reinstated.

But owing to the fact that waiting on tables is not considered useful employment by the Administration, Manager George S. Brown of the Park Avenue has decided that he will not deal with the unruly former employes, but will carry out his plan to take on negro help to fill the vacancies. After careful inquiry he has found that a greater number of competent negro waiters above the draft age is to be had than white men, and he believes that this course will do much to settle the problem. Few occupations have been more greatly affected by the draft than that of waiters, for a great percentage of them are under 31.

Mr. Brown first learned of the discontent among his men on Tuesday morning, when his cooks told him they wanted an eight-hour day. This he agreed to, but when he was approached for an increase of $15 a month in wages he declined to meet their terms, with the result that they walked out, accompanied by all but nine waiters.

Their leaving as they did at luncheon time left the manager in something of a predicament, but girls from the Martha Washington Hotel were brought over, and they have since been in attendance. Just as soon as matters can be adjusted the negroes will be installed, and because of this same difficulty in other hotels, it is believed that the Park Avenue will foster the return of the negro waiter to the big hotels of New York.

The New York office of the National Retail Dry Goods Association announced yesterday that at the meeting of the association to be held in Chicago next Monday and Tuesday there would be a thorough discussion of how to meet the new draft order of Provost Marshal General Crowder, which will seriously affect the department and other dry goods stores of the country.

The earlier drafts took many employes and the latest order threatens to still further deplete the ranks of the workers in the stores.

First Deputy Police Commissioner John A. Leach said last night that the Police Department would immediately begin the collection of certain data relative to unemployed men of draft age, and others, who come under the new "work or fight" regulation. He said the department expected to have this information ready for the War Department by the time the new regulation goes into effect, July 1.

Representatives of various waiters' unions met last night, it was said, to discuss the drafting of a protest against that part of the Crowder regulations which brings waiters of draft age within the scope of the new order.

POLLS ARE READY FOR WOMEN TODAY

Enrollment Will Begin at 8 o'Clock This Morning in the Five Boroughs.

MAY EQUAL MEN'S RECORD

Miss Mary Garrett Hay Says if 50 Per Cent. of Women Enroll She Will Be Satisfied.

The Board of Elections has completed its arrangement for today's enrollment and promptly at 8 o'clock this morning 2,000 polling places throughout the five boroughs will open their doors to women who desire to enroll and thus qualify for participation in the September primaries and full political partnership with the men.

Predictions from headquarters of the New York City Woman Suffrage Party, as well as from the headquarters of the Democratic and Republican organizations throughout the city, point to a large enrollment. Some of the men leaders last night expressed a belief that the number of women enrolling today might equal, possibly exceed, the number of men enrolled during registration week last year, which reached a total of 625,209 for the five boroughs. Miss Mary Garrett Hay, head of the Woman Suffrage Party, was more conservative.

"Women certainly have shown great interest, and I believe tomorrow will witness a heavy enrollment," she said. "If 50 per cent. of the women entitled to enroll come out I shall be satisfied."

John R. Voorhis, President of the Board of Elections, announced yesterday that an eleventh-hour decision had been reached by the board under which only men would be employed as Inspectors in the enrollment today. Suggestion had come from many quarters that, as today's enrollment was for women alone, it would be proper to appoint women as Inspectors. The Board of Elections, however, after giving considerable thought to this proposal, reached the conclusion that as the hours were long, the work apt to become trying, and as women so far lack experience in service of this character, men only should be appointed. Mr. Voorhis said that at the September primaries, when there would be four inspectors in every polling place instead of two, as at the enrollment today, half the number appointed would be women.

Through the courtesy of the official Inspectors, however, and in order to make the women who present themselves for enrollment feel that they are being supported by members of their own sex, women will act as auxiliary and unofficial Inspectors in many enrollment places. The New York City Woman Suffrage Party as well as the women's divisions of the Democratic and Republican organizations in at least three of the five boroughs—Manhattan, Brooklyn, and the Bronx—have assigned workers to this duty.

Headquarters of the Woman Suffrage Party at 3 East Thirty-eighth Street was one of the busiest places in the city yesterday. All day long and far into the evening there was a practically unbroken procession of prospective women voters who had come to be taught how to go about enrolling. Mrs. Jarvis Fairchild, one of the active workers of the party, was detailed to assist the applicants for such instruction. In very many instances they asked Mrs. Fairchild to direct them to the place where they should present themselves for enrollment. The Assembly District maps and the list of polling places printed in a special supplement of THE NEW YORK TIMES last Sunday which have been posted on the bulletin board at suffrage headquarters did service during these lessons. In the meantime Mrs. Kate Morris, another suffrage worker, devoted her time to explaining the platforms of the four parties with one of which women may affiliate when they enroll today.

The rule against electioneering in polling places, or within 100 feet of them, will be strictly enforced by the police at the enrollment today. Signposts will be placed showing the point on either side of a polling place where such importunities must cease, exactly as on Election Day, and a policeman will be on hand to see that the law is not violated in this respect. Women who present themselves for enrollment may be challenged either by an Inspector or by a watcher, who must be a qualified elector in the Assembly district where he or she is doing duty. But after she has been challenged a woman voter, under the law, has the right to swear in her enrollment certificate.

Mrs. James Griswold Wentz, President of the Woman's Republican Club, yesterday called upon women to enroll with the Republican Party. She said that while attempts have been made to convince the women that the Republican Party was less friendly to the enfranchisement of women than were the Democrats, the fact that a majority of the suffrage States were normally Republican should be sufficient indication that there was no justification for the statement.

"The vote of every American woman is needed at the primaries to see that every man nominated for office in the State or for Congress shall be 100 per cent. American," said Mrs. Wentz. "We are fighting to win the war. Let us prepare tomorrow to the end that our votes in the primaries and later on Election Day may help to insure the country against any pro-German, pacifist, or slacker ever again holding public office under the Stars and Stripes."

AETNA DECISION UPHELD.

Receivers Likely to Continue to Direct Company's War Work.

The decision of Judge Mayer of the Federal District Court that the stockholders of the Aetna Explosives Company should not meet for the purpose of electing a Board of Directors until after Receivers Odell and Holt had notified the court that their services might be terminated was affirmed yesterday by the Circuit Court of Appeals. The opinion was written by Judge Manton and concurred in by Judge Rogers. Judge Ward dissented on the ground that the prevailing opinion conflicted with a former ruling of the court.

Since the company went into the hands of receivers in April, 1917, its debts have been paid, and it has been placed on a flourishing financial basis. It has many contracts for making ammunition for the allied Governments. It is believed that the receivers will be permitted to remain in control of the company's affairs as long as its services are needed in war work.

In commenting on the proposed readjustment plan which many of the stockholders bitterly opposed, Judge Manton's opinion says that the plan proposed a retirement of the preferred stock which would mean a deprivation to the common stockholders, and would also injure the holders of preferred stock.

"It leaves the future of the corporation to a new company," the opinion reads, "and without apparent limitation places it in the hands of readjustment managers with unrestricted power given to issue and dispose of new securities, and grants them an allowance of $750,000 for their services. The entire plan means a large and unnecessary expense and reduces the cash assets of the company, which might again result in another period of financial embarrassment.

"In our opinion the complaint of the common stockholders is fully justified. The course pursued by the court below was well within its power."

GROUT CHARGES DROPPED.

Court Dismisses Indictments on the District Attorney's Motion.

The two indictments against ex-City Controller Edward M. Grout, growing out of the affairs of the Union Bank while he was President of that institution, were dismissed yesterday by Justice Van Siclen in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, on motion of District Attorney Harry E. Lewis. Mr. Lewis said that a decision by the Appellate Division had deprived the case for the prosecution of its strength.

Mr. Grout was indicted for perjury in having sworn to an alleged false report of the financial condition of the bank to the State Banking Department. He was convicted after a trial which lasted nine weeks and was sentenced to one year's imprisonment by County Judge Lewis, now the District Attorney. After spending a few days in Raymond Street Jail, Mr. Grout obtained a certificate of reasonable doubt from Supreme Court Justice Scudder and was released. The Appellate Division set aside the conviction some months later. An application by the District Attorney for permission to appeal to the Court of Appeals was denied. Because of the rulings laid down by the Appellate Division as to the evidence in the case Mr. Lewis felt that a new trial could not possibly result in a conviction.

CENT A MILE FOR SOLDIERS.

Sailors, Too, Will Enjoy Reduced Fare Under McAdoo's Ruling.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—All systems under the control of the United States Railroad Administration will be directed soon to give soldiers and sailors on furloughs, who wish to visit their homes before going to Europe, a special rate of one cent a mile.

Agitation for a policy along these lines has been going on for some time, and the Railroad Administration has been arranging its plans so that it could make this concession to the fighting men of the nation. This statement was issued today:

"Director General McAdoo, realizing that the payment of the full railroad fare means a serious hardship to our soldiers and sailors who desire to visit their homes before going overseas, has ordered that as soon as necessary details can be completed soldiers and sailors of the United States forces, when furloughed and traveling at their own expense, will be granted a rate of approximately one cent per mile.

"This fare will be available on delivery to ticket agents of certificates signed by commanding officers. Such certificates of standard form will be prepared and distributed with the utmost promptness."

The order will extend the special privilege to the men in training at all camps and training stations under the jurisdiction of the War and Navy Departments. It is probable that the new regulations will become effective within another week or ten days.

As hundreds of thousands of men will be brought under the new traveling rate order, the loss of income to the railroads will be considerable. The Railroad Administration, however, believes that this should not be looked upon as a serious objection to putting the plan in operation.

MUST WIN PEACE, SAYS HAYS

Republican Chairman Adds Political Issues Must Be Subordinated.

Will H. Hays, Chairman of the Republican National Committee, told 2,000 persons at a Red Cross benefit at the City College last night that "all political issues at home must be subordinated to the one uppermost cause of winning the war." He praised the war aims of President Wilson and said that the United States was a divine agency set up for the salvation of the world.

"We must have a peace by a military victory and never a peace by compromise bargaining," he said. "To win the war abroad we must have absolute political peace at home. The world must know that we are united in our purpose of winning the war. We must band together politically and industrial peace also must prevail. All political issues must be subordinated to that one uppermost cause—that of winning this war. There must be less profiteering and more volunteering. That lawless individual who calls himself an I. W. W. and goes about the country preaching sedition is a traitor and should be treated as a traitor. He should be put up against a wall and filled with the good bullets we intend to give our other enemies.

"America must put her soul into the war and we must keep our eyes forward and up. The divinely ordained mission of America must be accomplished. In his proclamation of the war aims of this nation President Wilson has written one of the great historical documents of all ages. It is a Magna Charta for civilization and for the future peace of mankind."

SCHOOL STAMP SALES.

Total in Competition for Wertheim Prize Will Be Near $3,000,000.

With the close of the Wertheim prize contest only a week away, the Board of Education announced yesterday that the school children of the city had sold, up to the last return, $2,369,956 worth of War Savings Stamps, not including pledges and orders yet to be filled, which, it is estimated, will add at least a half million more to the total. The $5,000 in prizes offered by Jacob Wertheim will be awarded to high and elementary schools which obtain the highest per capita sales by next Friday, when the competition closes.

The leading elementary school in each of the city's forty-six school districts will get a prize of $100. At the last compilation of returns the following were found to be the leading schools in the districts:

The juries drawn to determine which entries from New York State in the national school War Savings poster contest shall be sent to Springfield, Mass., for final judgment completed their work in Yonkers last night. More than 300 posters were submitted to three juries out of the thousands painted by the children in the three classes of schools covered by the competition. Eighty-four were finally selected for submission to the jurors for the Eastern States, who will meet in Springfield next week to make the final awards. The competition, which closed on May 15, was open to any child in the United States attending an art school, high school, or grammar school.

NEW PARIS LIGHTING PLAN.

Mirrors to Help in Finding Street Number at Night.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, May 24.—The Paris City Council has decided to adopt an ingenious system to surmount the present difficulty of recognizing numbers of houses owing to the darkness of streets at night. The appliance selected consists of a dark blue plate into which are inserted small mirrors about the size of waistcoat buttons, arranged in front of the necessary figures.

These would be fixed alongside the doors at a height of six feet from the ground, and the least flash of light from a match will reflect the number clearly.

The device was invented by Charron, an automobile manufacturer. Large bracelets, constructed on a similar principle, are to be placed round lamps at the street refuges at important points to obviate automobile collisions at night.

March and Bliss Confirmed.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—The nominations of Major Gen. Peyton C. March as Chief of Staff of the Army with the rank of General, and Major Gen. Tasker H. Bliss as General by brevet, were confirmed today by the Senate. General March has been acting Chief of Staff since he was recalled from France several months ago to succeed General Bliss, who now is the permanent military representative of the United States on the Supreme War Council at Versailles.

WANT MRS. SIRE REMOVED.

Manager's Brothers Say Executrix Was Not His Widow.

Mrs. Elizabeth Sire opposed yesterday before Surrogate Fowler an application to remove her as executrix under the will of Henry B. Sire, theatrical manager, on the ground that she is not the widow of the decedent, as she claims to be. Mrs. Sire admitted that although she had been known as the wife of Henry B. Sire for more than forty years there had been no ceremonial marriage. Mrs. Sire stated that in 1876 she and Mr. Sire agreed to become husband and wife, and he put a plain gold ring on her finger and said, "We are now married in the eye of God, though not in the eye of man."

The application to remove Mrs. Sire was made by her husband's brothers, Leander S. and Albert I. Sire. She stated that although she had always been on good terms with her husband's mother and brothers, they had him in their charge shortly before his death and she was not permitted to visit his sickbed. She did not attend the funeral in order to avoid making a scene and creating a scandal. She asks that her husband's brothers be compelled to tell what they know of his property. The Surrogate appointed ex-Justice Charles F. Brown referee in the case.

McAdoo Takes Steps to Include Four Smaller Companies.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Negotiations are under way between Director General McAdoo and four smaller express companies — Northern, Great Northern, Western, and Canadian — looking to their participation in a merger which has already been arranged tentatively for the Adams, Wells Fargo, American, and Southern companies.

It was reported today that all the companies probably would come in, and that the combination, with George Taylor of the American Company as President, would be approved by the Director General as the express carrying agency of the railroads.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Women munition workers in Washington, who have added their voice to that of the National Woman's Party Headquarters in urging President Wilson to give further support to the Federal Woman Suffrage amendment, were informed in a letter from Secretary Tumulty today that nothing they could say could increase the President's interest in the matter, and that he had done everything he could with honor and propriety do in behalf of the passage of the amendment.

DR. HOROWITZ IS FOR A 'PEOPLE'S KAISER'

He Sees in Wilhelm II. the Man for the Place and Now He Faces Internment.

ACTIVE AS A PROPAGANDIST

Arrest Bavarian Who Said "Instinct in Him" Caused Him to Criticise the Government.

Dr. Ernst P. Horowitz, graduate of several German universities, a former professor in the University of Dublin, friend and reported coworker with Dr. Bernhard Dernburg and Dr. Heinrich Albert during the time those high German propagandists were operating in this country, was arrested by agents of the Military Intelligence Service yesterday. Dr. Horowitz came to the United States in 1914, three months after the outbreak of the war. Dr. Horowitz was in London when the war started, but left England, he says, because of fear of internment by the British.

Arriving in the United States early in November, 1914, Dr. Horowitz is said to have reported to Dr. Dernburg, then here as chief German propagandist, and to have been subsequently associated with Dr. Alexander Fuhr, another active German propagandist, who was very busy during the first months of the war.

When arrested yesterday, Dr. Horowitz is said to have protested that since this country declared war on his fatherland he has been careful to obey all American laws and to faithfully observe the enemy alien regulations promulgated by President Wilson. He said he had little sympathy with Prussianism as it is understood in this country.

"I am in favor of a Volks Kaiser for the German people," announced Dr. Horowitz.

"Well, that being so, do you think that the present Emperor of Germany would fill the bill?" he was asked.

"I have dreamed at times," replied Dr. Horowitz, "that Wilhelm of Hohenzollern has in him the making of a Volks Kaiser."

Likely to Be Interned.

Dr. Horowitz is well known as a writer, and is said to be an authority on Indian literature and history. His internment for the period of the war has been recommended.

Josef Sober, a Bavarian, who came to this country ten years ago, was also arrested yesterday. He has been working for a concern in Brooklyn which is filling important contracts for the navy. He has also, it was said last night, been outspoken in his sympathies for Germany. When asked why he talked as reported at a time when he was working on contracts for this Government he replied with a shrug of the shoulders:

"I guess it is an instinct with me."

His internment has also been ordered.

Franz Wohlweber, who until his arrest yesterday was employed by a Mrs. Rossbach, whose home is in Eighty-eighth Street, near Fifth Avenue, was taken into custody charged with having attempted to obtain a permit to go to Elberon, N. J., by forging the name of his employer to the application. Mrs. Rossbach has a Summer home at Elberon. He was ordered locked up in the Mercer County Jail for ninety days.

Rahor Wicek, a Hungarian, who was employed as a gardener on the Delmar estate, near Tarrytown, was brought to New York yesterday. He is charged with uttering criticism of the war policies of this country and with having said that "one Austro-Hungarian soldier is as good as ten Americans." He is locked up in the Essex County Jail pending further investigation. Josef Kobusick, also a Hungarian, and also employed on an estate near Tarrytown, was also brought to New York yesterday as a result of his utterance against this country. He, too, is held pending further investigation.

No Trace of O'Leary.

It was said yesterday that no trace has been found of Jeremiah A. O'Leary, the fugitive Sinn Fein agitator. The Secret Service agencies of the United States and Canada are engaged in a continent-wide search for the missing man.

Albert V. Parr, who is said to have deserted from the 165th Infantry of the Rainbow Division just before that unit sailed for France last year, was arrested in Brooklyn yesterday. Parr, who held the rank of Corporal, has been working as a motor truck driver and was found at 625 Fifth Avenue, Brooklyn, where he was living with his wife and two children. He will be turned over to the military authorities on Governors Island.

The Army Intelligence Service handed over to the authorities yesterday Edward B. Reed of Newark, N. J., who is charged with impersonating officers of the army. He has been posing as a Captain in the Medical Corps.

John Wasulekid, 28, a Russian, of 42 East Nineteenth Street, Bayonne, employed at the Bayonne plant of the Standard Oil Company as a stillman, was sentenced yesterday by Recorder William J. Cain to six months in the county jail or to pay a fine of $50 for having used an American flag to clean his automobile.

A. P. ERROR NOT A FACTOR.

Senator Pomerene Explains Status of the La Follette Case.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Senator Pomerene of Ohio, Chairman of the Senate committee investigating the speech of Senator La Follette made at St. Paul, Minn., last September, made public tonight the following letter to The Associated Press:

"I beg to acknowledge receipt of your telegram of May 23 concerning The Associated Press reports of the speech of Senator La Follette made at St. Paul on Sept. 20 last, which is now the subject of investigation by the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections. I note your acknowledgment of the error in your press reports and your expression of regret because of it. I shall have your telegram printed in the record of the case.

"In view of the controversy which has arisen concerning the accuracy of the press reports of the speech, I hope it will not be considered out of place for me to say that the committee has at no time concerned itself about the press reports of the speech, but it is only concerned to know what the speech was as it was in fact delivered, the truth and the purpose of the statements therein contained, and the legal effect to be given them."

NEWS PRINT MAKERS TO CONSIDER WAGES

Representatives of twenty manufacturers of news print paper met yesterday afternoon at the Hotel Belmont to appoint a committee of five at the request of the National War Labor Board to confer with a similar committee of five representing the news print employes, regarding an increase in the present scale of wages.

The committee selected to represent the manufacturers is composed of W. W. Nearing, Vice President of the Pejepscot Paper Company; F. L. Carlisle, President of the St. Regis Paper Company; John Lundrigen, Industrial Superintendent of the International Paper Company; E. B. Murray of the St. Maurice Paper Company, and S. W. Williams of the De Grasse Paper Company.

R. H. Kellogg of the News Print Service Bureau, who acted as Secretary of the meeting, said the committee sent a telegram to William Howard Taft, Chairman of the National War Labor Board, saying that it was ready to confer with representatives of the news print employes as soon as it suited the convenience of the National War Labor Board.

A strike of the 100,000 employes of the news print companies was averted on April 30 by the action of the National War Labor Board, which promised a decision in regard to the demands of the employes before July 1. The men want an increase approximating 45 per cent. of the pay schedule of 1916." Mr. Kellogg said, however, that in very few cases would that mean an increase of 45 per cent. over the present wages, as nearly all the manufacturers had voluntarily increased the pay of their men since 1916.

The greatest difficulty to be met in reaching an agreement with the employes, Mr. Kellogg said, was that no decision had been made as yet by the Federal Trade Commission in regard to fixing the price for news print paper, and until this was done the manufacturers would be at a loss to know how much they could afford to increase wages.

First Pierce-Arrow Truck Built

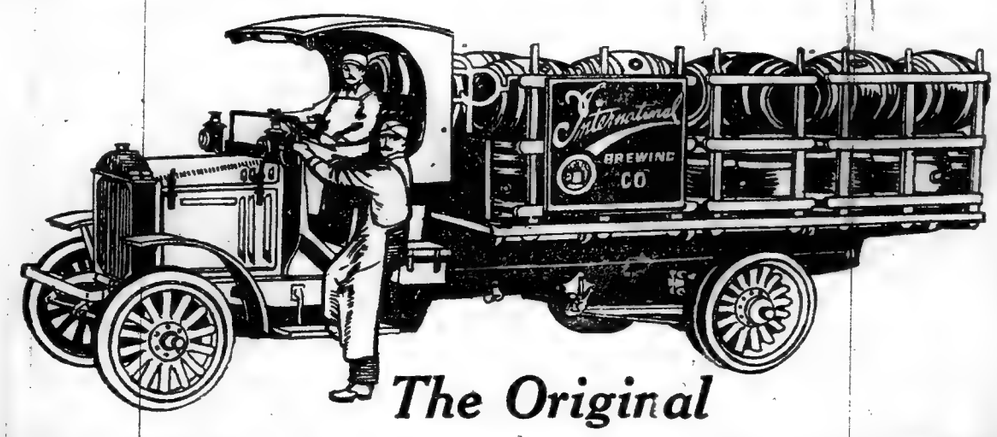
from New York to Boston



The Original

made the trip on scheduled time

May 28th, 1911

At that time there was serious doubt even among truck advocates whether a truck could operate long distances over the road under practical commercial conditions.

But this truck was unique in America. It was the first truck to be equipped with the worm drive. So it was determined to satisfy doubting Thomases by a public demonstration of its capacity.

At that time the worm gear was ridiculed by all American truck wiseacres. Nearly all trucks were chain driven and their makers declared that the worm gear was an absurdity. Indeed for several years they maintained this attitude toward it. To be sure, practically all leading makers have now adopted it, and declare that no other form of drive is practicable. But since those days they have learned by experience, for which their earlier buyers paid.

This first Pierce-Arrow has delivered more than 100,000 miles. By every standard of cost accounting, its initial cost has been written off the books. The annual depreciation figured on all machinery equalled the original investment several years ago. Every mile run since, has represented profit.

In seven years, it has been overhauled once. Except for inconsequential repairs, it has been out of commission at no other time. Day after day it has been ready to deliver any service it might be called upon to deliver, at an operating cost and a maintenance expense that make it the most economical truck on the market.

It is service such as this, duplicated by hundreds of our trucks, which justifies our belief, that irrespective of initial cost the

Pierce-Arrow delivers a greater aggregate of work in a given time;

Pierce-Arrow loses less time, on and off the job;

Pierce-Arrow costs less to operate and costs less to maintain;

Pierce-Arrow lasts longer, depreciates less, and commands a higher resale price after an equivalent service.

Of the first fifty Pierce-Arrows marketed, every one is in service and has delivered more than 75,000 miles.

In repeating this original demonstration run from New York to Boston, this initial truck will duplicate its original running schedule, covering the 281 miles in 20 hours' running time.

No tool touched on the trip. The only stops were those made in answer to insistent demands that local demonstrations be given in the four cities where scheduled stops were previously arranged.

HOME RUN BY WOOD BEATS YANKS IN 19TH

Cleveland Is Victor in Season's Longest Major League Game by 3 to 2 Score.

NO IDLERS ON BALL FIELD

Participants Give Ample Proof of Industriousness Before Circuit Drive Ends Battle.

Joe Wood, who recently went through a transformation from a pitcher to an outfielder, landed the Cleveland Indians on top in the longest game of the season yesterday, when he catapulted a home run into the left field bleachers in the nineteenth inning at the Polo Grounds, snapping the knotted 2-to-2 score in twain and pushing the Yanks down to heart-breaking defeat. The mathematical aspect of the long strife was 3 to 2.

This jubilant home run by Wood was the second he made during the game, for in the seventh inning he laced the ball into the left field bleachers, the ball just scraping over the top of the barricade. Ping Bodie made a desperate leap for the ball, climbing the fence until he almost touched it. With a soap box to stand on, Ping would have had it.

The ball players were evidently smarting under the intimation of some one in Washington that they were loafers, so they put in the hardest day's work noticed in the major leagues this season. Never were they idle. The hardest worker among them was Stanley Coveleskie, the Indians' pitcher, who went through the nineteen long innings, covering three and three-quarters hours, without giving his strong right arm any rest.

Throughout both leagues it seemed as if the players were out to show that they could do a full afternoon's labor, for Washington and Detroit battled until dark to a 2-to-2 tie, while the Reds and Phillies went eleven innings and St. Louis and Brooklyn labored for twelve innings.

Mogridge Loses Game.

Russell pitched seven innings of the long tussle for the Yanks and was relieved by Lefty Mogridge, who held the Clevelands in subjection up to the fateful moment when Wood loaded his bat with TNT and walloped the ball far from the gaze of the naked eye. A crowd of more than 6,000 saw the fun, and in the gathering were idle rich, idle poor, to say nothing of the idle middle classes. They were all careful to put in a full day's work downtown before going to Harlem so as to be above the suspicion of Washington.

The game scintillated with brilliant plays and those who hurried away, afraid of the home scolding which always follows these extra-inning games, will give themselves a kick under the breakfast table as they read about it over the oatmeal. Every time the Yanks play the baseball widows place a candle in the window to show the way to the homecoming father as he plods his weary way from Harlem.

If the ball players were worried about going to work after July 1, they didn't show it in yesterday's game. In another month they may all be building ships or mixing dynamite or sharpening bayonets, but in the meantime they went about their labors hammer and tongs.

When Lee Fohl, the Cleveland manager, decided to make an outfielder of Joe Wood he established his greatness as a manager even if he makes another t m-strike. He's as fine a piece of outfielding bric-à-brac as there is in the game right now. He moves around here and there in left field and is in just the place where the ball is hit. As graceful as an infielder and as dangerous with his bat as any of them is this same Joe Wood.

Yanks Lose Opportunity.

Perched at the home plate was Ping Bodie. Ping had previously soaked a home run into the right field stand, giving the Yanks their first run, and he was the little fair-haired boy in the affections of the populace. As the day was the third anniversary of Italy's war activities, it was a great occasion for Mr. Pizzola to do a little celebrating for the land of his forefathers. Ping swung with might and main and only popped to Ed Miller at first base, which brought forth the most heartrending groan heard at a baseball game in many a year.

The game was studded with fielding gems, Frank Baker, Peckinpaugh and Wambsganss sweeping the infield clean of all sorts of blistering grounders. The Yank defense cracked in the third and the Indians coined a run. Halt singled to short and O'Neill walked. Coveleskie shot a grounder to Pipp, who touched the bag and fired the ball to second to double up O'Neill. The ball went wild and Halt scored. Then in the seventh, with Russell still pitching, Wood made his first home run in the bleachers, making the score 2 to 0.

The ability to make it an uphill fight cropped out in the Yankees' attack again, and in their half of that same seventh Bodie made his first home run of the season, plastering the ball into the grand stand.

Pipp tied the score in the ninth, when his terrific drive scooted through Tris Speaker for three bases, and Bodie again came to the rescue by sending Pipp home with a sacrifice fly to right.

A play which sent thrills spinning up and down the onlookers' spines shut off a Cleveland victory in the seventeenth. With two out, O'Neill singled to left, and Coveleskie came to his own rescue by smashing a whale of a hit between left and centre fields. O'Neill worked up racehorse speed which was carrying him triumphantly to the plate. Bodie got the truant ball, relayed it to Peck, who was standing in short left, and the Yank Captain made a gorgeous throw to the plate and Walters nipped O'Neill as he was within a sixteenth of an inch of victory.

The Yanks got Pipp around as far as third in the sixteenth, but could not coax him home, and the suspense became depressing. With one gone in the nineteenth, Wood leaned plumb against one of Mogridge's twisters and whanged it on its merry trip among the two-bit boys in the bleachers.

DODGERS LOSE IN TWELFTH.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., May 24.—The Dodgers dropped a tough game in the inaugural of the series with the Cardinals this afternoon, 2 to 1, in twelve innings. It was a pitchers' battle between Gene Packard and Rube Marquard. In the last innings Packard improved, no Brooklyn player reaching first after the ninth, while Marquard became wild.

Brooklyn was the first to score. Olson opened the sixth by hooking a single into left. O'Mara sacrificed him to second and the Dodger infielder came home on Jake Daubert's base drive into left. That ended Brooklyn's scoring, though failure to hit in the pinches cost the visitors several runs.

The Cards tied it in their half. Doug. Baird drove a triple to left centre and Hornsby, who returned to the game today, scored him with a hit through O'Mara. In the last half of the twelfth, Red Smyth, a former Brooklynite, won the game for St. Louis. Wallace walked and was forced by Gonzales. The Cuban took second on Packard's roller to Marquard. Smyth's drive in centre scored Gonzales with the deciding run.

BLOWS FALL FAST AT BOXING DISPLAY

The ancient and bruising game of fisticuffs landed a knockout wallop for the cause of mercy at Madison Square Garden last night. The greatest collection of pugilistic stars ever gathered in one ring pounded and pummeled each other in boxing's contribution to the Red Cross.

There has never been greater enthusiasm at any of the thousands of sporting events held in the old arena then there was last night when such aristocrats of the scrapping game as Jim Coffey, Johnny Dundee, Gunboat Smith, Willie Jackson, Kid Lewis, Battling Levinsky, Joe Lynch, Lew Tendler, and many oth- and many others swapped hooks and ers swapped hooks and jabs. The Garden, decorated with flags and Red Cross posters, was packed from the ringside boxes to the top gallery.

It was an unusual gathering for a boxing show. Hundreds of fashionably dressed women were in the boxes. Almost everybody of prominence on Broadway was there. Hundreds of pretty girls, dressed as Red Cross nurses, collected a large sum for the cause.

United States Marshal McCarthy auctioned off the Kaiser's Cup, the gold international yachting trophy won by Wilson Marshall's Atlantic in 1905. The cup is to be melted to make gold dollars to carry on the fight against Germany. A sum of $17,500 was realized on the trophy. Richard Doggett, Joseph Marone, John Walters, and others each bought it and put it up for auction again. It is expected that more than $50,000 will be realized on the show.

Although it is against the law to hold fights in this State, William Fox, the Chairman, explained that there is no law where the Red Cross is concerned. The boxing in all the bouts was brisk and very much in earnest. For instance, Battling Levinsky did not save his punches when he set sail after the big, smiling Coffey. Harry Greb picked and pecked at Gunboat Smith as he liked and was able to keep out of the way of Smith's wild and vicious swings.

Lew Tendler, Philadelphia's boxing sensation, showed his wares to the New York boxing public for the first time against Barney Adair of Harlem. He was swift and shifty, and, boxing with his right arm extended, landed often on game little Adair. There was no theatrical exhibition fiction about any of the bouts. All the boxers were in there to scrap and scrap they did.

Never before did ring enthusiasts get so much fighting for their money, and they probably never will again. Along toward midnight there were still so many battles unfought that Charley Harvey and Joe Humphreys decided to cut down the bouts to four rounds so the folks could get home in time for breakfast. There was a big howl from the dyed-in-the-wool fight fans, so the six-round schedule was restored.

However, as the early morning wore on a four-round route was adopted, but even at that the fighting was still raging in the Madison Square sector at an early hour.

The first bout brought together two of Uncle Sam's fighters for four rounds. They were Ritchie Ryan, some time ago a formidable local lightweight, and Eddie Grover, both now attached to the 326th Motor Truck Company, Camp Upton. Lieutenant Roy Mitchell, a former prominent auto race driver, refereed the bout, and at the final bell he raised aloft the hands of both boxers.

Benny Volgar, former amateur bantamweight champion, and Battling Reddy of Harlem were opponents, and Volgar, through his cleverness, was entitled to the verdict by a shade. Augie Ratner, former amateur middleweight champion, pommeled Tex Kelly, formerly of Harlem but now of Camp Upton, for six rounds in the fourth bout, and at the finish Ratner was easily the winner.

Jim Coffey, Ireland's heavyweight boxer, now one of Uncle Sam's naval reserves, boxed Battling Levinsky, erstwhile light-heavyweight champion, in the next contest of six rounds. Levinsky was in perfect condition through his work as boxing instructor at Camp Devens and completely outclassed Coffey throughout the six rounds, and although considerably outweighed, earned the honors in every round. Coffey willingly enough tried to keep pace with the fast stepping Levinsky, but was not equal to the task.

Harry Greb, the Pittsburgh light heavyweight, who recently joined the navy, outpointed the California veteran, Gunboat Smith, in the sixth contest, which went five rounds. Greb was the aggressor and had Smith on the defensive throughout. He landed oftener and more accurately than the lanky Californian. Although Greb was much lighter than The Gunner, the Jack Tar fought rings around the old-timer.

Johnny Dundee, the Scotch Wop, indulged in a red-hot bout with Eddie Wallace. Dundee peppered Wallace on the nose so often with a left jab that Eddie's nose resembled a beet. Johnny was like a jumpingjack and forced a terrifically fast pace. Dundee's speed was too much for Wallace, and most of the way Eddie was running second. The sixth round bubbled with action, and Dundee set out and gave Eddie a hard lacing, bouncing short right and left hooks off Wallace's face. It was a great finish for Dundee.

The nineteenth inning of the famous Kid Lewis-Jack Britton engagement was a hummer. The two welterweights asked no favors of each other, and pounded each other with a will. One minute Lewis was rushing the milling and the next the skillful Britton was landing stiff punches on his rival.

After the first few rounds Lewis became the aggressor and worried Britton with right hooks to the jaw. In the fourth Lewis caught Britton on the jaw with a left hook and sent him to the floor, Britton taking the count of nine. Britton landed his most effective blows on Lewis's stomach. Lewis had a shade the better of it.

LINKS TO BE BUSY TODAY.

Rearranged Fox Hills Course to Open—Other Golf News.

It will be a sort of new Fox Hills course that members will play over at the season's formal opening there today. While play has been in progress all Spring, it has been on a temporary layout, but now the course has been rearranged so as to bring about a number of improvements. In connection with the opening, Colonel Rutherford, commanding officer of the Fox Hills Base Hospital, will be on hand at ceremonies coincident with the raising of the club service flag, which has twenty-one stars.

The competition for today consists of the usual medal play round, and the prizes will be war stamps. There will be no valuable trophies played for at Fox Hills this year.

Clubs affiliated with the Westchester County Golf Association are all ready to take part today in their team qualification round. According to conditions announced by the committee some time ago, eight men at each club will qualify for the team, and there will be a prize for lowest gross and net scores. The tournament proper will be held at Siwanoy, June 20 to 22.

This is the first time the Westchester association has attempted team matches. It has taken the stand that these affairs tend to increase club spirit, besides giving added zest to the competitive phase.

Links followers who go to the Garden City Golf Club will have a chance to see the game at its best there this afternoon, when Sergeant Francis Ouimet and John G. Anderson will team up against Jerome Travers and Oswald Kirkby. This is one of the special attractions arranged to swell the fund during the Red Cross drive, and a tidy sum is expected this afternoon.

Ryan struck out ten men and Brown, pitching for Syracuse, six.

Stevens Institute's baseball team scored convincingly over the C. C. N. Y. nine yesterday in a loosely played game on Castle Point Field, Hoboken, N. J., by the score of 8 to 2. The Stevens team outplayed the City College nine after the fourth inning, and Carlson's excellent pitching was backed with heavy hitting and effective base running, which enabled the Hoboken players to pile up their tallies.

PRINCETON, N. J., May 24.—Bill Clarke, former member of the old Baltimore Orioles and coach of the Tiger baseball team until this Spring, when he went to France to engage in Y. M. C. A. work, took charge of the final practice of the Princeton nine today in preparation for the Harvard game. Clarke has returned to this country to recruit former baseball stars to carry on Y. M. C. A. work with the American soldiers. The practice is about the only one Princeton has held this week.

PRESIDENT SEES LONG GAME

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Detroit and Washington played a sixteen-inning tie game today for the benefit of the American Red Cross second war relief fund. The score was 2 to 2 when darkness ended the contest.

About 8,000 persons, including the President and Mrs. Wilson, and President Ban Johnson of the American League, saw the game, and with $3,000 paid at auction for a baseball autographed by President Wilson just before play started, probably $10,000 was added to the Red Cross fund.

BENEFITS FOR TRIO AT JAMAICA RACES

The Red Cross, Trainer James Fitzsimmons and Jockey George Walls were very much in the public eye at the Jamaica races yesterday. All the gate receipts were donated to the Red Cross, and the fund was further increased by the Nassau Stable turning back the purse won in the handicap by Decisive. Auctioneers were busy collecting money from the clubhouse patrons by the sale of horses, paintings and flowers, and even the jockeys took up a subscription for the reigning charity.

Fitzsimmons, who is now a public trainer, caused a sensation by saddling three of the six winners, these including the Red Cross Handicap and the Highland Selling Stakes, which were the day's features. All three of the horses sent to the post by Fitzsimmons were ridden by Jockey Walls, but each was the property of a different owner.

The Fitzsimmons influence began to be felt when little Walls, perched on the back of H. L. Pratt's Game Cock, guided his mount home in front of a field of selling platers in the second race at a mile and a sixteenth. Walls next had the mount on the Nassau Stable's Decisive in the event named for the Red Cross, and in which the distance was six furlongs. The chances of a second victory looked slim when Ed Cudihee and The Masquerader were making the pace, with Decisive among the trailers. Walls got busy, however, on hitting the stretch and Decisive came on with a rush to win by a length and a half from The Masquerader.

Compadre, owned by the Quincy Stable, was tightened up by Fitzsimmons for the Highland Stakes, also at six furlongs. The stable connections were not upset by his defeat on Wednesday and figured with some reason that the change in track conditions would favor the black son of Colin. The result justified the heavy speculation on Compadre, for Walls had his easiest ride of the day, taking the track early and winning by five lengths from Poacher.

Another notable stallion has been added to those in the possession of the United States, as F. Ambrose Clark, acting for the Government, bought Achievement, by Hastings-Achieve. Jules Garson bought the horse in the morning from Wilfred Viau, and later sold him for remount purposes.

BIG FIELDS IN HUNT MEET.

Amateur Races to be Held Today Attract Many Entries.

Amateur racing men will have their only exclusive day of sport of the season this afternoon when the United Hunts will hold its annual meeting at the Belmont Park Terminal course. It will provide the first opportunity of the year for New Yorkers to see the steeplechasers in competition, as four of the seven events will take place over the brush course.

In both the events through the field and on the flat the quality of the entries is equal to that to be found at the regular meetings. An instance of the high class of the flat runners is the naming of the Kentucky Derby winner, Exterminator, by Willis Sharpe Kilmer. Exterminator will carry 122 pounds in the Turf and Field Highweight Handicap at a mile, in which the top weight is the four-year-old Tom McTaggart.

Edward M. Weld's St. Charlcote, a leader over the sticks last season, occupies the post of honor in the United States Double Event and the Great United Hunts Steeplechase, with 158 and 157 pounds respectively. One of the features will be the International Military race at a mile and a half on the flat, in which the best riders in the United States Army will compete against those of the allied nations.

Special trains for the course will leave the Pennsylvania Station at 12:30 and 1:30 P. M., and the first race will be started at 2:30.

Eddie Hearne Enters Auto Race.

Eddie Hearne, a wealthy Chicagoan, is the latest to enter for the $30,000 Harkness Handicap, to be run at the Sheepshead Bay Speedway on the afternoon of Decoration Day. Hearne wired his entry to Promoter William H. Wellman yesterday, and added that he and his car will reach the track some time today.

GIRLS START PLAY FOR DOUBLES TITLE

Misses Rice and Aydelotte to Meet Misses Jessup and Kreuter in Tennis Final.

Spirited tennis marked the opening of play in the metropolitan doubles championship for girls on the courts of the West Side Tennis Club at Forest Hills yesterday. Two teams advanced to the semi-final round of the event. In the upper half of the draw the final round bracket was gained by Miss Helen Rice and Miss Winifred Aydelotte, the former having only recently won the metropolitan singles championship with Miss Aydelotte, the runner-up for the honor. In the lower half the successful players were Miss Mary Jessup and Miss Louise Kreuter.

The play of Miss Rice and Miss Aydelotte was of very superior quality, but despite their skill they were pressed to a hard match in the first round when they opposed Miss Hildegarde Ross and Miss Ruth Goldsmith. The latter team won the first set after a merry struggle, but was defeated by the steadiness of Miss Rice and Miss Aydelotte in the two following sets. The victors showed a finely co-ordinated game and secured the honors with the score 6—8, 6—4, 6—3. In the semi-final round Miss Rice and Miss Aydelotte had rather easy sailing, sweeping through to a victory at 6—1, 6—2.

Miss Jessup and Miss Kreuter were also forced to a three-set match in the first round, their opponents being Miss Virginia Bell and Miss Ruth Sapoport. Here, too, the victors lost the first set, but won the match at 4—6, 6—4, 6—1. In the semi-final Miss Kreuter and Miss Jessup gained a decision over Miss Eunice Rossman and Miss Edith Guiler at 6—2, 7—5.

One of the most stubbornly contested matches of the afternoon was a first round encounter between Miss Margaret Morrey and Miss Helen Jenkins and Miss Margaret Goldsmith and Miss Justine Wise. The first set went to 13—11 before it was won by Miss Goldsmith and Miss Wise. Apparently this effort proved their undoing, for in the following set they were defeated at 6—0. They made a determined effort to clinch the honors in the third set, but were finally vanquished at 7—5.

The summaries:

Doubles—First Round—Miss Margaret Morrey and Miss Helen Jenkins defeated Miss Margaret Goldsmith and Miss Justine Wise, 11—13, 6—0, 7—5; Miss Helen Rice and Miss Winifred Aydelotte defeated Miss Hildegarde Ross and Miss Ruth Goldsmith, 6—8, 6—4 6—3; Miss Mary Jessup and Miss Louise Kreuter defeated Miss Virginia Bell and Miss Ruth Rapoport, 4—6, 6—4, 6—1.

Semi-final Round.—Miss Helen Rice and Miss Winifred Aydelotte defeated Miss Margaret Morrey and Miss Helen Jenkins, 6—1, 6—2; Miss Mary Jessup and Miss Louise Kreuter defeated Miss Eunice Rossman and Miss Edith Guiler 6—2, 7—5.

The Harvard crews had their practice late in the afternoon. It consisted of little more than a paddle for a few miles.

PRINCE ARTHUR PAYS HONOR TO PRESIDENT

PRAISES OUR MEN IN WAR

Discusses the Great Battle Still Raging and Expresses Confidence in Ultimate Victory.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Prince Arthur of Connaught, first cousin of King George of England, who is on a special mission from the King to the Emperor of Japan, came to Washington today and paid a call of courtesy on President Wilson.

The Prince, who is a Major in the Royal Scots Grays, and has seen much service at the front, is accompanied by a staff consisting of Captain the Hon. Joseph St. Clair, Master of Sinclair; Lieut. Gen. Sir William Pulteney, Major the Earl of Pembroke and Montgomery, and Captain F. Batt of the Royal Berkshire Regiment. He is going to Tokio to present the baton of a British Field Marshal to the Emperor.

In the party at the station to welcome the royal visitor were the Earl of Reading, British Ambassador, the staff of the embassy and representatives of the British Naval and Military Missions. Breckenridge Long, Third Assistant Secretary of State, was on the train, having met the Prince on his arrival at an Atlantic port.

Call on the President.

Escorted by a troop of United States cavalry, the Prince was driven to the British Embassy and soon afterward from there to the White House, where he was presented to the President by Lord Reading. Tonight he was the guest of honor at a dinner given by the Earl of Reading, at which the guests included members of the Cabinet and other high officials of the Government, with their wives.

After his visit to the White House the Prince met the newspaper men at the embassy. In a brief address he spoke of his gratification at being in the United States. He recalled that his father, the Duke of Connaught, while Governor General of Canada visited New York and made many American friends.

"We British," he said, "recognize and appreciate the great spirit which prompted you to send the best of your country's manhood to the other side of the world to fight for liberty and civilization. I had an opportunity of seeing a good many of the American officers in France, and can speak with first-hand knowledge of their splendid keenness and enthusiasm. I have also had the pleasure of meeting General Pershing, who is an old acquaintance of mine, as I knew him when he was Military Attaché at your embassy in Tokio in 1906.

Confident of Victory.

"Our troops have been sorely tried in the great battle which is still raging, but we are confident of ultimate victory. American troops are now pouring into France to our assistance, and although we recognize that there is still a desperate struggle ahead of us, if we all put forth our fullest efforts we shall secure final victory and a just peace."

AN ATLANTIC PORT, May 24.—Prince Arthur of Connaught arrived here today on a British cruiser from England. He wore the uniform of a Major in the British Army, and walked with a cane, as he is slightly lame from a wound in the left leg that he suffered in the early days at the battle of Mons. He left the cruiser in a coast guard cutter for a pier, where automobiles were waiting to convey him and his staff to the station to take a special train to Washington.

This is Prince Arthur's third diplomatic mission to Japan. In 1906 he went on a special mission, and in 1912 he was sent to Tokio again to present the Order of the Garter to the Emperor.

The Prince declined to give any interviews beyond saying a few words regarding the American troops that he arrived in England just before he sailed.

"One of the last functions I attended before leaving London," he said, "was a review before the King of the American troops passing through the streets on their way to their camps, where they remain a short time before embarking for France. The sun was shining brightly and the American soldiers, marching well in line, made a fine appearance. The windows of the houses and the streets were lined with enthusiastic people, who gave them an enthusiastic welcome."

One of the Prince's aids said that they had experienced fine weather on the voyage and it had been without incident.

A detachment of the Women's Motor Corps of America took the party to the station. Prince Arthur complimented them on their war activities.

Prince Arthur, who is a brother of Princess Patricia, patroness of the "Princess Pat" regiment of Canada, has led an active life as a soldier. He was in the first expeditionary force to France in August, 1914, and took part in the early battles of 1914 and 1915, and also in the Somme in 1916, when he was with the Fourth Army under Sir Henry Rawlinson, and also served on the staff of the Canadian Army. He was born in Windsor Castle Jan. 13, 1883.

WILL HONOR OUR DEAD IN FRANCE ON MAY 30

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 23—(Associated Press.)—The American dead, sleeping in the soil of France, will receive the homage of the American Army on Memorial Day. Many of those who have given their lives for their country are buried in graves over which shells and bullets are flying, close to the spots where they fell, but wherever they are resting their comrades will bear them in mind and pay tribute to their memory.

Throughout all the zones in which there are American soldiers plans have been made for ceremonies, in which the French will participate in nearly all cases. At one place is a row of mounds under which lie sons of New York. Men of the same regiment will gather there to replace the faded American flags with new ones and deposit wreaths of fresh flowers.

Similar ceremonies will take place at the graves of boys from Iowa, Illinois, Michigan, Maryland, and other States who have been killed in action or have died from wounds. In the same locality roadside graves of French soldiers, buried where they fell in the earlier days of the war, will be decorated by Americans.

At General Headquarters all graves of American and French soldiers in that vicinity, many of whom died in hospitals, will be decorated with flowers and crossed flags—the Star-Spangled Banner and the Tricolor of France. Led by a band, a body of soldiers will march to the main cemetery, where the graves have been dug on a peaceful hillside overlooking a valley through which winds a canal lined with stately trees. There the troops will be drawn up while American and French army chaplains repeat prayers for the dead. A squad will fire a salute.

All the other ceremonies will be similar. In the sector northwest of Toul they will be held at several localities. Men of the new and the old armies lie there, some in cemeteries exclusively American, others beside French soldiers. The heroes of the air who have given their lives will be remembered suitably by their comrades.

At various points along the battlefront there are little groups of American graves and single mounds, marking the resting places of men from units which have faced the enemy there for a time and then moved elsewhere. Efforts will be made to decorate every one of these graves.

French officers, soldiers, and civilians, having learned the significance of Memorial Day, are making plans of their own to show their appreciation of the Americans who have fought and died for their country.

NEW BROWNING GUNS COMING OUT RAPIDLY

Enough Light Rifles Ready for Four and a Half Divisions—One Division Gets Heavy Type.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—The War Department today announced that heavy Browning machine guns sufficient to equip the machine gun companies of one army division had been manufactured and were being shipped to Camp Meade, Md. More than half of the guns have arrived at that camp. The "Liberty" division, as the Camp Meade command is known, will be the first to be equipped completely and trained with heavy Brownings.

Light Browning rifles sufficient to equip the machine gun units of four and one-half army divisions have been manufactured. Overseas shipment of one-half of these has begun. The other half of the output goes to troops in this country. Camp Meade will be the first division completely equipped with light Brownings. Camp Meade now has approximately half its complement of this light type.

Enough heavy Brownings for instruction purposes have been shipped to every National Guard training camp and cantonment in this country where troops are in training. They have arrived at as distant a point as Camp Lewis, American Lake, Wash. Heavy Brownings for overseas training have been shipped.

NEW SIEGE GUN PLANT.

Suggestion That the Cannon Will Be Used in Invasion of Germany.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, May 24.—As an evidence of its supreme confidence in the outcome of the war, the War Department, it became known today, is preparing for the manufacture of gigantic siege guns to be used in leveling German fortifications when the enemy shall have been driven back from the occupied positions of France and Belgium, says the Washington correspondent of The Chicago Tribune in a dispatch received here tonight. The mammoth new plant to be constructed for the Government by the United States Steel Corporation on Neville Island, near Pittsburgh, will be used primarily for the manufacture of the giant guns—counterparts of the mammoth Krupp guns that leveled the fortifications of Antwerp and Liége.

The dispatch further says:

"Negotiations are practically completed for the construction of a second huge ordnance plant by the Midvale Steel Company near Philadelphia. This plant also will be used for construction of great siege guns.

"The amount of money to be expended in the Midvale gun plant has not been announced, but it is planned to construct one approaching in size the $70,000,000 plant which the Steel Corporation will construct at Neville Island.

"Plans for the quantity construction of the siege guns have been undertaken as a preparedness measure for the day in the future when they may be called into play. The guns also can be used, however, in field operations against ammunition depots back of the line and in destruction of 'pill boxes' and dugouts."

TWO NEW PICRIC PLANTS.

Butte, worth-Judson Co. to Build One at Brunswick, Ga.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Contracts have been awarded by the Ordnance Department for the establishment of two large picric acid plants at Little Rock, Ark., and Brunswick, Ga. Men and material for the buildings are all ready on the ground at Little Rock. It is expected that the plant will be in operation by September.

The Everly M. Davis Chemical Corporation has received the contract for the Little Rock plant, the construction of which will cost approximately $4,000,000.

A larger plant is to be constructed by the Butterworth-Judson Company of New York City at Brunswick at a cost of nearly $7,000,000.

These will be the first Government controlled picric acid plants to be established in this country.

WHEN THE PACIFIST COMES TO FACE THE TEST.

Mrs. ROSE PASTOR STOKES had the misfortune to be tried by a Western jury, which convicted her on all counts. It is probable that her unhappy experience will teach our Bolsheviki and pro-Germans the advisability of confining their anti-American utterances to New York, where juries are more amiable, and that in future, when they go West, they will modulate their voices according to the pro-American prejudices of the vicinage.

Mrs. STOKES no doubt convinces herself that she is a martyr, but she is so far from being one that she is a proof instead of that weakness of soul which cannot stand out against unpopularity. Her whole environment was Bolshevist. When America entered the war she had a patriotic impulse; she severed her connection with the Socialist Party, bought Liberty bonds, subscribed to the Red Cross. And straightway she encountered that blighting frost to all weak souls, unpopularity among her old companions. Many who could face a firing squad cannot face the cold shoulder. Mrs. STOKES could not stand it; she recanted her Americanism, sued for readmission to the anti-American party, and sought to make up for her brief heresy by outdoing other assailants of the Government.

She made the mistake of carrying this activity to the West, where they are not so tolerant of anti-Americanism, and was arrested and indicted. Then again a weak spot appeared in her martyrdom. The prospect of fine or imprisonment was not pleasant, and she sought to evade it by the ingenious explanation that, when she denounced "the Government" she meant "the Administration." But this was not true. Any Socialist knows it was not true. It is no one Administration to which Socialists are opposed, it is the present system of government, the democratic republic, or, as they call it, the "capitalistic" republic. The whole basis of their system is opposition to this Government, the abolition of it, the destruction of the present Constitution. It is no one "Administration" to which they object; their heated language about "tools of capitalism" and "profiteers" is applied equally and impartially to any and all Administrations, because all Administrations administer the Government which is the object of their hatred. If, instead of being WILSON, the President's name were ROOSEVELT, TAFT, or even BRYAN, their language would be just as abusive; in fact, the epithets they used to apply to it when Mr. TAFT was at its head were far more scurrilous than those they apply to it now.

Therefore Mrs. STOKES was seeking to escape punishment by the very unheroic device of trying to mislead the jury about the meaning of what she had said, by a pretense that she did not hold the principles for which she was suffering martyrdom. It is not the way martyrs are made; and the jury's flat refusal to believe her adds the cap-piece to this unedifying spectacle.

Yet this effort to win the credit of martyrdom while at the same time running away from its pains, and running away by devious and twisting paths, is characteristic not of her alone, but of the whole clan. She certainly does not cut a more pitiable figure than Senator LA FOLLETTE, for instance, pretending now to a support of the Government which the whole world knows he did not give, and resting his pretense on the fact that an error was made in the report of one sentence of his St. Paul speech. He was quoted as saying that we had "no grievances" against Germany, whereas he said that we had "grievances"; and on this he rests his claim to be considered an injured patriot. Yet everything he had ever said about the war, and everything he said in that St. Paul speech, was of such a tenor that the phrase "no grievances" sounded perfectly natural and surprised nobody; and his argument even there was that, while we had "grievances," they were of no great consequence and nothing to get angry about. Martyrdom, even the velvet kind which faces him in the Senate, is not so agreeable to Mr. LA FOLLETTE as the name of martyr. Our modern martyrs love the name, but only if it can be won cheaply and without martyrdom itself.

Further down in the scale we come upon coarser, grosser, more contemptible manifestations of the same thing—JEREMIAH O'LEARY jumping his bail rather than face a trial for sedition, the swaggering CHARLES FRANCIS PHILLIPS running away to escape the draft. High or low, the motive and the performance are always the same. They all claim to be heroic fighters for their convictions, and at the test they fail, all of them, in the same pitiful way. Brave as lions as long as no danger appears, they shake their fists in the too patient face of Uncle Sam, and when at last he raises his hand the lions shrink instantly into "frighted rattons," and "seek the benmost bore."

TWO DAYS MORE TO HELP THE RED CROSS.

New York's contribution to the Red Cross war fund rose well over $20,000,000 yesterday, with two more working days to send the city's quota "over the top." In announcing a pledge of $3,000,000 JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, Jr., speaking for the Foundation, said that the gift was "in excess "of the amount which its resources "for the current year would justify." That is the true Red Cross spirit, and it is a splendid thing to realize that thousands of givers, whether of great sums or small, share that spirit. To get the right glow of satisfaction out of helping the Red Cross, the giver has to stint or to sacrifice something. But time soon passes and the privation is forgotten. You may be sure that the soldier who is nursed back to health or the despairing refugee who is fed by the Red Cross and sheltered by it will never forget. No matter how small the gift now—it may be only a child's silver piece—that gift will do its humane work in some degree in France, or in Italy, or perhaps in devastated Serbia. It may save life; it will certainly cheer or relieve pain.

There can be no rest for the loyal army of Red Cross collectors in New York until the last appeal is made. Word comes from every part of the Union that one city after another has gone "over the top." In some cases quotas have been doubled or trebled. It would not be a reproach to New York, which always has given spontaneously for victory, if its total barely exceeded the $25,000,000 asked for, but it would be a keen disappointment to the indefatigable men and women who have labored all day, and turned night into day, to make a showing worthy of the Empire City. It does not seem possible that any New Yorker will avert his face from the appeal.

Two days more to "go over the top"! Don't speculate about the excess, and don't take for granted that there will be any. Help the Red Cross and put New York in the proud place she should occupy.

PROHIBITION BY INDIRECTION.

The Randall amendment to the Food Stimulation bill bears the name of a California Dry, an unsparing prohibitionist in season and out of season. It provides that none of the $6,000,000 appropriated by the bill for field agent work in the Department of Agriculture shall be available unless the President prohibits by proclamation the use of fruits, foods, foodstuffs, or feeds "for the production of malt or vinous liquors for beverage purposes."

Mr. CANDLER of Mississippi, an earnest prohibitionist and the father of the bill, opposed the amendment. It wasn't fair to the President, he said, to "force him to settle a moral question." There are other patent and sufficient objections to the amendment, which, nevertheless, was accepted by the House by a vote of 178 to 137. The manufacture of whisky was forbidden by the act of Aug. 10, 1917. That act gives the President power to prohibit by proclamation the use of fruits and foodstuffs to make beers and wines.

Now the House seeks to compel the President to do what was properly left in his discretion. The Randall amendment is a pragmatical interference with his authority under the act. It is an attempt to force prohibition by indirection on the country. If further prohibition is necessary as a war measure, the President can and should be trusted to ordain it. The $6,000,000 appropriation is either needed or not needed by the Department of Agriculture. If it is not needed, it should not be granted on any terms. If it is needed, no terms, no conditions, should be imposed. The amendment is irrelevant to the purpose of the appropriation and the bill. It is an attack on the President's dignity and a suspicion of his discretion.

Moreover, it is an improper, an offensive, roundabout method of foisting complete prohibition upon the country. If that prohibition be necessary for war purposes, let the President so proclaim it, and the Wets will cheerfully put up with prohibition. This amendment is not fair to the Department of Agriculture. It is not fair to the President. Is it cynical or merely natural to see in the House majority for this amendment a duck before the supposed "prohibition wave"? Would any considerable number of those political Drys in the House be grieved if the Senate should strike the amendment out?

NO MORE GERMAN IN THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Yesterday the Board of Superintendents voted that no new German classes be formed in the New York schools during the war. The resolution will be approved, doubtless, by the Board of Education. It is sound, hard common sense. Some of us, many of us, perhaps, will even go so far as to say that the time limitation is superfluous and unjustifiable. The chief argument against the teaching of German in our high schools, where so far it has flourished, is that the pupils and graduates of those schools don't, as a rule, know English sufficiently well, learn it amply, use it in speaking and writing with correctness, let alone elegance.

In this multi-composite city, this home of many nationalities, swarming with foreigners and loud with strange languages and jargons, English is the indispensable common bond. Why neglect the one necessary tongue in the effort to get a smattering of another? As a matter of polity, of patriotism, of Americanism, as a matter of right education, as a condition precedent of political, social, and business common need, English, good English, should be first in our training. And what is learned in the schools should be well learned.

Moreover, nothing but habit, the swollen megalomania of the Germans of Germany, German prepossessions and propaganda, justified the selection of German, if two languages were to be taught. In business, Spanish is notably more likely to be helpful to Americans in the Pan American future. French is more cosmopolitan and urbane, with a longer and a nobler literature. And, for one can't estimate how long, German must be in a certain disfavor as the language of a Government against which civilization has had to fight desperately. For the time being, anyway, this city, rich in worthy men and women of German origin who repudiate the false and destructive Germany of today, will give up teaching the German language. Too readily, too unsuspiciously, the United States used to listen to the German propagandists. Now even their idiom is become suspect, taboo; and New York will do all in its power to make the next generation thoroughly, but not chauvinistically, American.

PRESIDENTS AND RAILWAYS.

The Interstate Commerce Commission must gape at the spectacle of such railway Czars as REA and WILLARD bowing to the Director General. It looks so easy when it is done, but the Commission has never turned the trick with thirty years of opportunity and all the laws it has asked for. Perhaps some day the Director General may become too bold, but thus far he has carried the public with him in his masterful progress. The reason is that he is looking out for the country rather than for the railways. He is able to see, as the Commission was not able, that what the country wants is railway service rather than lower rates or profits. He is raising rates more than the railways ever asked. He is raising wages more than the award allowed. He is reducing wasteful competition in a manner no law ever compelled or could compel.

He is able to do this because the question of what the railways are to receive has been set aside, and he has nothing to think about beyond operation. That is a comparatively simple matter, so well is the railway machine working. Almost any Vice President is competent to keep a road running when there are no questions of finance or extension or policy to be settled. Aggressive as the Director General's procedure seems, it really is less so than was the Presidents' when the railways were growing and competing. Now they are not competing at all, and there is no hope that they will grow so long as the Government controls. When the Director General allowed a billion dollars the other day for railway betterments, only 2 per cent. was for extensions.

There is little for a real President to do in the way of operation so long as the country has a real Director General. But there is much for the Presidents to do for their companies, even while other operators can serve the country as well. The settlement of the contract with the Government is a large and pressing matter. It is settled in principle for all the railways, but it is settled in particulars for no company. The Presidents will confront the Director General on more even terms regarding that matter than on operation. Only one head is needed to run a railway, but it takes two to make a contract. Then, there are all sorts of outside undertakings incidental to railway operation which the Director General's operator neither could nor should have anything to do with.

It has been considered an offense on the part of the railways that they have used the capital of the railways in investments of various sorts. Some of them were for the purpose of evading the laws which the Director General overturns with impunity. Some were for the purpose of making business and profits by encouragement of local business, or by promoting travel or traffic. Everything that resembles enterprise will be in the particular charge of the Presidents deposed from operation. The deadening effect of Government management without the motive of profit is apparent beneath the quickening of traffic by the release of forces forbidden to the railways by law. For a time it will be beneficial. But it will be a sad day for the country if the railways are truly cured of enterprise. There are counties as large as kingdoms which never have heard a locomotive whistle, and which are not likely to so long as the Director General rules. Government operation is a good port in a war storm. But there will come a time when the people will want back what they lose by it, and which they will appreciate more as they sense its loss.

ORGANIZING FOR VICTORY.

"We must organize for the future," says Provost Marshal General CROWDER, speaking of his latest amendment of the selective service regulations. More men are wanted for the army than Class I. will yield, and more men are needed for the war occupations. It will become necessary to draw upon all the deferred groups, II., III., and IV., to fill the ranks. There is no avoiding this resort, whether Congress raises a new army of several millions of men or authorizes the President "to draft, subject to the provisions of "the Selective Service act, and all acts "amendatory thereto, as many men, "from year to year, as can be "equipped, trained, and used," according to a proposed amendment to the Army bill.

Men in the deferred groups who are not engaged in occupations that contribute to the winning of the war must either go into the army or seek a useful occupation. Idlers, and the term includes gamblers, race-track attendants, bucket-shop helpers, fortune tellers, and like parasites, will in most cases go to the cantonments. This is plain sailing, but the designation of noneffective occupations that will be proscribed and the transfer to useful occupations of those who have the choice of working present a problem.

General CROWDER, as a beginning, has listed a number of occupations as noneffective. Waiters, passenger elevator operators, footmen, doormen, and like attendants at clubs, hotels, stores, apartment houses, and office buildings, ushers at games and sports, sales clerks and other clerks employed in stores, and persons in domestic service, who are of the draft age, must change their positions, or become soldiers, or volunteer for the army, the navy, or the Marine Corps after July 1. But the local boards will have discretion to make exceptions if "disproportionate hardship" to dependents would be worked, or for other sufficient reasons. The theory is that the vacant places could be filled by men over the draft age or by women.

There will, of course, be criticism of the list, (it is to be extended,) because there are differences of opinion about what is a useful occupation. It is not necessary to go into that phase of the matter now. As to the hardship involved in having to change from one family-supporting occupation to another that might not yield sufficient wages or salary, there will be more criticism. People do not always choose their occupations and perhaps are fit for nothing else. There is always the military service, however. This alternative suggests that Congress or the State may have to legislate anew for dependents.

But the American people have got to win this war. If civilians at home suffer in their personal circumstances, it must be remembered that those who fight for them may suffer infinitely more, and may lose their lives. Scores of thousands of them will never return. All Germany is organized, the people of every community, every man, woman, and child, as well as the military forces, to defeat America and her allies, and to impose ruinous peace terms upon them. America must organize with the same thoroughness, no matter what the sacrifice. "This," says General CROWDER, "is not alone "a war of military manoeuvre, it is a "deadly contest of industry and mechanics." America is not organized yet. In raising an army of about 2,000,000 men and expanding the navy it has taken only the first step.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Counselors Good and—Other.

If the qualified woman voters do not enroll today in one of the four recognized political parties, it will be either because they fail to follow the wise counsel they have received from many sources or else because they have chosen to heed counsel the reverse of wise which even up to yesterday was coming to them from certain misguiding advisers.

The real leaders among the women who until recently were seeking the franchise, after a little hesitation when this question of party enrollment first became a living issue in New York State, all came months ago to the sound conclusion that there was but one right thing to do. That was for women to think of themselves as voters, just like other voters, with the same privileges and the same duties, none of which had anything to do with sex, and to take their places in whatever political group most commended itself to their judgment. That is what these real leaders have been telling the other women for some time past, and for doing so they deserve a special credit. They were well aware that they were advising action that involved the loss of their own present power and prominence and relegated them to something like obscurity, unless they could gain in one of the old parties, and in competition with men, a position like that occupied by them while the women stood politically alone.

Some of the minor lights of suffrage have not shown this wisdom or this spirit of sacrifice, and for no conceivable reason other than fear of losing whatever of eminence and influence they now have they were still protesting, yesterday, against affiliation with—and something like disappearance in—the old parties. These protests will be heeded—they will be heard with patience—only by women for whom participation in political activities means display and advertisement of self, not public service—the advancement of the general welfare. It is a pity that the ballot has been placed in the hands of such women, for they are as unworthy of its possession as are the men who make the same bad and selfish use of it.

Georgia as Seen by a Georgian.

No Northern paper has denounced with anything like as much vehemence the recent lynching in Georgia of a negro woman as is shown by The Augusta Chronicle of that State in an editorial article discussing this last of many such murders committed in Georgia. The offense for which the woman was first hanged and then riddled with bullets was that of having made "unwise remarks" about the lynching of her husband the night before! Her taking off The Chronicle calls a "detestable and cowardly crime," one "at which all civilized people must stand aghast," and it wants to know what Governor DORSEY is going to do in the way of bringing the murderers to justice.

Its expectations of action from him, evidently, are not high, for it recalls that "Governor DORSEY was swept into the Governor's chair by the lynching sentiment of the State"—the reference here is to the case of LEO FRANK—and it also recalls that, of the scores and scores of lynchings that have taken place in Georgia in recent years, not one has been followed by the infliction of punishment in any form or degree upon any member of the mobs that thus showed contempt for law and love for its opposite.

The Chronicle describes Lowndes County, where the negro woman was lynched, as "one of the most prosperous and progressive in the State, with as cultured and noble people in it as are to be found anywhere on earth," but it says that they must be greatly outnumbered and reduced to a strange powerlessness by folk of a very different sort. For not long ago Government officials were dynamited there because their method of eliminating a cattle plague seemed objectionable to the farmers, and in the list of deserters under the draft law the same county leads all the rest in the State, with a score of 211 to its discredit—211 men, every one of whom must be either a coward or a traitor!

What the Georgians think of such writing as this in one of their own papers depends, of course, on how many of them prefer the law of Judge Lynch to that of courts. All who have not that preference should join The Chronicle in its very pertinent questioning of their Governor.

Excuses for Killing the Wounded.

In his account of the raid on British hospitals in France by German air raiders, PHILIP GIBBS uses language more moderate than will come to the lips of most people who read the story as told by himself and the other correspondents. He also seems disposed to admit the possibility that the bombing of the hospitals was not exactly intentional—that it may have been nothing worse than a failure on the part of the raiders to take due and proper care in the distribution of their deadly missiles. At any rate, he said that there was no way to disprove the statement of the German commander that he and his men had no desire to kill wounded soldiers and their nurses.

What Mr. GIBBS thinks as to the adequacy of this exculpation can be easily imagined, as can also his opinion of the same commander's cynical impudence in declaring that if the English would build their hospitals near railways they must expect them to suffer.

Incidentally, the German who led the raiders and made these comments on their work was himself brought down, slightly wounded by shrapnel, and he was taken into, and had his hurts dressed in, what was left of the hospital he had wrecked. And this service was rendered by the nurses who had survived the high explosives he had rained down for two hours! That is magnanimity, and it is fine, but—well, how it will make the Germans laugh!

ART NOTES.

At the Art Alliance is an exhibition of posters made in the competition held in the high schools of New York City under the auspices of the Committee for the Prevention of Tuberculosis in Manhattan and the Bronx and the Committee on the Prevention of Tuberculosis in Brooklyn. Twenty of the high schools are represented. The young artists have succeeded fairly well in presenting an educational theme with due regard to both message and design. The color for the most part is excellent, so good that it rather obscures unfortunate lapses in drawing and composition. The various lessons embodied in the posters are clearly understood, and the public learns from a design in which a robust young man is pushing up a window sash that tuberculosis does not come in at the window, and from designs showing gardeners at work in their flower-beds, boys and girls at outdoor games, or on the open road, or in boats on pleasant streams, the desirability of keeping in the air. From fine displays of fruit and vegetables picturesquely grouped, from still-life arrangements of a loaf of bread and a jug of milk beneath a bough, from babies deep in the enjoyment of their bowls of cereal or milk, is learned the part played by pure food and nourishing food in combating disease, and cleanliness is emphasized in the one humorous poster of the group, in which the devotee peeps out from a curtained tub to proclaim his doctrine of daily bathing. This, of course, is the important side of the competition, the illustration of lessons in hygiene that cannot be forgotten once they have been committed to memory in this manner. On the artistic side, however, the exhibition reflects credit upon the pupils and their instructors. The work is clear-cut and almost professional in neatness of execution. Perhaps it is inevitable that the designs should conform so closely to a single poster type.

Right Position for the Union Jack.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am sure that the people of New York that fly the flag of our ally, Great Britain, the Union Jack, do not intend to insult that friendly nation or to be discourteous to her citizens in the city, but the number of these flags that are flown upside down is astonishing. To be ignorant of the correct position or careless in the hoisting implies a thoughtlessness that is, to say the least, bad taste that one should be ashamed to admit.

The red diagonals are imposed on the white diagonals in such a way that the white band is wider on one side of the red band than on the other side, and this wide white stripe reverses after passing the intersection of the right angled crosses. The wide white band should always be on the upper side of the red on that side of the flag which is toward the staff. ARMY OFFICER.

WOMEN SOLDIERS.

Sergeant Ruth Farnam One of a Notable Company.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Having seen your editorial in yesterday's TIMES referring to woman soldiers, may I say that I am aware that our splendid Molly Pitcher fought in her husband's place, but it has never been made clear that she did it as an acknowledged and enrolled soldier? Many other women have doubtless enlisted, and fought bravely, too, but not as women. As you say in your editorial, these women fought, "their sex being unsuspected," or "before being discovered," and in every case the woman fighter is cited as having kept her secret until wounds or some accident disclosed her sex. Far be it from me to claim any distinction which is not rightfully mine, but I, as a woman, was given the right to wear the Serbian uniform and am very proud of the honor.

RUTH S. FARNAM.

New York, May 21, 1918.

Sergeant Farnam is mistaken in saying that "in every instance" the women mentioned kept their sex a secret. The article in question mentioned Sergeant Molly Pitcher, Captain Belle Boyd, Major Belle Reynolds, and Major Pauline Cushman, all of whom fought as women and without disguise. Sergeant Pitcher was not on the rolls at Monmouth, but was placed there immediately after. Sergeant Farnam may be proud of being in that gallant company.

FROM GENERAL TOZZI.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The manifestation of sympathy and sorrow given by the people of New York, and by the military and civic authorities, has deeply impressed and moved me and my officers as an honor to our beloved dead and to the ideals for which he gave his life.

Such manifestation of friendship will be appreciated by the whole of Italy and with deep emotion and gratitude by the bereaved family.

Please express to all my sincere appreciation and recognition.

Soap Box Patriotism.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your issue of May 13 appears a letter which has several times been brought to my attention. The writer wishes to know why "such a common prosaic sentiment as American patriotism" should not be preached on our streets, through the use of the "soap box" pulpit which has been so extensively used by radical orators. I should like to bring to your attention the fact that the Flying Squadron of the National Security League is doing just this very thing, particularly on the east side along Second Avenue, where we have several stands every night, and also in other localities throughout the city. In the last two months we have increased our number of speakers from one hundred to over four hundred, and are daily receiving many offers of assistance from both men and women. We hold training meetings for the instruction of our speakers every Monday evening at the Bar Association, 42 West 44th Street. Patriotic citizens desiring to help in this patriotic and practical propaganda are invited to come to these Monday night meetings, or to apply at the National Security League office, 19 West 44th Street.

Secretary the Flying Squadron.

Democracy Can Beat Aristocracy.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

De Tocqueville is right when he says "Men living in democracies love their country as they love themselves, and they transfer the habits of their private vanity to their vanity as a nation." He further describes this vanity: "No kind of greatness is more pleasing to the imagination of a democratic people than a military greatness—a greatness of vivid and sudden lustre obtained without toil, with nothing but the risk of life." This comes about by the fact that "while the interests and tastes of a democratic nation divert it from war, its habits of mind fit it for carrying on war well; its members soon make good soldiers when aroused. They court chance—vanity and equality make no end to promotion for the individual." On account of this unlimited vanity in the nation and its people "an aristocratic nation which does not succeed in ruining a democratic nation at the outset runs great risk of being conquered by it in a protracted war, because of the tendency of the democratic population to transform individual vanity and pride into a national feeling, while equality offers opportunities of advancement to the members of a populace which always courts luck."

Six Stars in Their Honor Flag.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your article in yesterday's issue you speak of Yonkers with 252 per cent. oversubscription, claiming to lead the nation. But the little village of Palenville, N. Y., with less than 400 population, oversubscribed its quota by nearly 700 per cent., and there proudly hangs in our village street an honor flag with six stars. I should like to know if this record has been beaten.

VOICES.

The little drowned babies came floating along—
The little drowned babies, so guiltless of wrong;
And all Queenstown gathered, aghast, on the shore—
For when was horror like this seen before?

The little drowned babies, no longer afraid,
With outstretched hands floated to Erin for aid.

Now who from his grievance would not be beguiled
To weep for the pitiful wrongs of a child?
They lifted them gently, they viewed them with tears;
They laid the drowned babies on improvised biers.

Did God send the wind then, did God send the tide,
To float them the green shores of Erin beside?

Ah, Ireland—fair home of a child-loving race,
Have done with all bickerings! Take your proud place
Where, shoulder to shoulder, all true men unite
To conquer or die in defense of the right!

The little drowned babies so brutally slain
Are pleading—and shall they beseech you in vain?

Close, close to your beautiful, generous breast,
The little drowned babies eternally rest.
So gently, so kindly, they buried them there,
Hearts heavy with sorrow, lips moving in prayer.

The sea sighs its message, the wind whispers, too—
The babies are calling, O Erin, to you.

PRINCETON GREEK AND LATIN

To the Editor of The New York Times:

My friend Dean West of Princeton has called the attention of your readers to what no doubt seemed to him an impious mistake in an article by me in your issue of May 12 on Princeton's patriotic decision to turn itself into a "military college" for the duration of the war. I made the statement that "Latin and Greek will no longer be required for entrance to Princeton," and I'm afraid I cannot quite agree that it is altogether incorrect. For it is a fact that for the first time in the history of Dean West's and my Alma Mater it will be possible to enter Princeton's Academic Department without knowing a word even of Latin!

I am quite aware how appalling such a state of affairs must be to that stalwart champion of the classics. But I still think it well, as a war measure, to call attention to the fact, for the benefit of the college and the country, in order to bring in potential officers for the new military course.

My statement was misleading, however, because while it is true that students may now get into Princeton without Latin or Greek and take the military course and get a B. S. degree, it is still incumbent upon those who wish the degree of A. B. or Litt. B. to be equipped in the classics before entering. But even so, I can't feel that I was guilty of academic blasphemy exactly, or else that statement would of course have been corrected by the duly authorized officials to whom my manuscript was submitted before publication: (1) to Princeton's "Committee on Public Information," the responsible head of which submitted it (2) to the Secretary of the university, and (3) to the Chairman of the committee in charge of the new courses.

If the accredited authorities on Princeton publicity did not feel that it was a mistake serious enough to be corrected, even in private, I may be pardoned for feeling that it was hardly serious enough to be corrected in public by the Dean of the Graduate School. The manuscript was returned to me with several valuable revisions, but the statement which excited my good friend the Dean was neither changed, amplified, nor "deleted by the censor."

Work of Regimental Family Units.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In behalf of the 307th Regimental Family Unit of the Organization of Soldiers' Families of America we wish to correct an erroneous impression unintentionally conveyed by an article which appeared in THE TIMES on May 17, which was unauthorized by the organization. The Organization of Soldiers' Families of America, of which the 307th Regimental Family Unit is a part, is for the sole purpose of mobilizing the families of our soldiers to co-operate with the Red Cross and thereby make it possible not only that the Red Cross may the more easily and effectively aid such families as need aid, but that the soldiers' families themselves may the better serve the Red Cross. No funds are to be raised except a fund with which to purchase tobacco and a small administration fund. We wish to state definitely and conclusively that this organization is to be purely patriotic and social, and not charitable or beneficiary, except indirectly through practicable, definite, and well advised co-operation with the Red Cross, the helpfulness of whose officials cannot be overstated. Moreover, we are privileged to announce, through the courtesy of Mr. Wilson of the Atlantic Division of the Red Cross, that he heartily approves of this effort to organize the soldiers' families of America along regimental lines, with a Central Committee which shall co-ordinate the work of the units and, so far as possible, make the work uniform throughout the country.

President of Central Committee.

Truer Than "Le Feu."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The French officer's opinion of "Le Feu," as printed in THE TIMES of Sunday, interests me especially. I am very glad to have had publicity given to that opinion. "Le Feu" is being widely read, both in French and in English, and is being accepted as a sort of final word as to real war conditions as they affect the fighting man. There is another book which undertakes the same task of representing the French soldier and his life, and especially his reactions to all the infinitely varied experiences of modern fighting, but which leaves in the mind of every reader a vivid picture of simple heroism, of eager patriotism, and of natural right-mindedness such as explains the power of the French Army in its unexampled contest against great odds. This book is "Bourru, Soldat de Vauquois," by Jean des Vignes Rouges.

To every reader of French who has already read "Le Feu" I earnestly recommend the reading of "Bourru" as a necessary correction of the impression which Barbusse has so powerfully given. The author shirks no scene of terror or of horror; he is realistic, but not sordid; he believes in the poilu, and he shows him as he has seen him, winning strength out of weariness, steadiness out of alarms, even faith out of despair and the sickening presence of death and decay. The best evidence of the greater truthfulness of this picture is the record of the French Army through these four years—simple, steadfast, undoubting, counting the end worth the cost.

Praise for Army Hospital.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Reading a letter of appreciation of a camp hospital in THE TIMES of May 19, I am moved at this late date to voice my gratitude for the splendid achievements of the Base Hospital at Camp Wadsworth, where I spent the latter part of February and March.

Learning of my brother's illness of pneumonia, I hastened there full of misgivings. It gives me much pleasure to say that from the moment of my arrival I was impressed with the efficiency, courtesy, friendliness, and kindness of every one connected with the hospital with whom I came in contact. I was a daily visitor for six weeks (my brother developing pleurisy), and had ample opportunity of seeing remarkable recoveries made from this treacherous disease in response to the treatment given. There was constant vigilance on the part of fine young women nurses, resident ward surgeons, and visiting specialists. During my long stay I did not find it necessary to make a single request. A private hospital could give no better satisfaction.

There was a diet kitchen, where trained dietitians, collaborating with the doctors, prepared special food for unusual cases and the very sick. The quality and serving of the general food was excellent. The entire hospital was a model of sanitation. When it is remembered that a few months before my visit the present site of the hospital was a dense woodland, all praise of the work of the Medical Corps of the army is insufficient.

A Name for the War.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Arthur F. Cosby in a letter in today's TIMES suggests that this great war should be named "The Liberty War." Mr. Cosby evidently has overlooked that Germany, having provided the world with a war with German thoroughness, has also given it a name right from the start. She has called it "War for a Scrap of Paper." Since England and America are in this war for a scrap of paper, no other name would be as appropriate as this one.

HENRY GREEN.

TWO DOORS TO RUSSIA.

Murmansk and Vladivostok as Bases for the Allies.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The Russian question is a determining factor for the Allies, and must be decided fundamentally and at once. Every hour of delay means the increase of German supplies by tens of thousands of tons of grain and coal, which the Germans could export from the basin of the Don, the Ukraine and the Crimea, and by hundreds of thousands of gallons of petroleum products, which they can obtain from the Baku region.

There is no government in Russia. There is not a single institution or party around which Russia as a whole could gather. German propaganda has already succeeded in shattering Russia into a thousand fragments, and the country will come to its senses only when it feels itself in the grasp of the mailed German fist. And then it will be too late—outbreaks of popular fury and new wars will be necessary in order to tear the country from this iron embrace.

Perhaps the Allies imagine that the Bolshevist riots are "internal affairs" of Russia. In reality, the Bolshevist revolution indicates the complete absence of such internal affairs in Russia. In itself, this outbreak is merely the explosion of a mob, drunk with not comprehending freedom, but substituting unbridled license for true liberty. These manifestations are only signs of the temporary weakness of the real Russia; and Germany has cunningly taken advantage of this unfortunate condition.

There is no one now in Russia who could permit or not permit the allied troops to enter the country, because there is no Government in Russia which the Allies could recognize, for, if there were a real Russian Government actually representing real Russian interests, it would be the first to beg the Allies to send troops, around whom the Russian people could once again rally and consolidate for battle against the Hunnish invasion.

No financial or economic commissions can help Russia now. No letters, speeches, meetings, calls to arms, or outcries can help to save Russia at a time when the Germans are already carrying on a positive policy, when German agents have swarmed over the country from the White Sea to the Black, and from the Baltic to the Pacific; when, thanks to German policy, the Ukraine, the Caucasus, the Crimea and Siberia have been severed from Great Russia; when, thanks to German aid, Finland is preparing to seize a portion of Russian territory, and when, from day to day, the Finns, aided by German troops, are making ready to occupy the port of Murmansk—the only ice-free Russian haven on the northern coast—in order to establish there a German naval and military base. And who can tell what further advantages Germany may be able to reap from her unrestricted rule in Russia?

The Allies must decide the question without delay, whether they are going to wave a fond farewell to Russia and yield her up to the plundering power of Germany, or whether they will keep Russia for themselves. In the latter event, every minute is precious, and the only way to help Russia and the allied cause is the immediate investment of the port of Murmansk by a powerful contingent of allied troops and the simultaneous investment of Vladivostok by a powerful Japanese force.

Let these soldiers fight the Germans. Their mere presence in Russia will give the Russian people moral support and will make it possible for them to assemble a Constitutional Convention and establish a permanent Government.

N. STEPANOFF,

A "HELP RUSSIA" PARADE.

Imagine a Great Pageant, Headed by Kerensky!

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The Allies seem still to be groping in the dark as to the best way to solve the Russian puzzle. Our President's declaration of Saturday last that Uncle Sam has made up his mind to stand as firmly by the stricken Russian bear as by the wounded Gallic rooster has undoubtedly not only cheered the true Russian patriots throughout the Russian Republic, but also inspired with new courage all genuine friends and supporters of the Slavic cause the world over.

The plan apparently under consideration by our Government to buy up en masse the raw material of Russia; the eloquent appeal to England by the great Siberian patriot and merchant prince, Joseph Okulitch, to save his Siberian fatherland, which is as vast as the United States and nearly as rich in its natural resources, from the fangs of the hungry German wolf; the appearance of the Federation of Russian Associations of America at the White House with the firm and concrete proposition that the President allow, as soon as possible, a military Slavic advance guard to proceed to Vladivostok—all these phenomena point to the conviction that Woodrow Wilson, Lloyd George and Georges Clemenceau will oppose Germany's plan of Russian "penetration" with the same vigor Joffre and Pétain kept the Teutonic hordes from the sacred precincts of Verdun and Paris: "Ils ne passeront pas!"

Permit me to suggest a Pan Slavic and Slavophile monster parade in the streets of our city, in which delegations of all the Slavic tribes and nations throughout our country, all the sincere friends and willing supporters of Russia, Poland, Serbia, Bohemia and the cause of the Jugoslavs, ought to participate. It goes without saying that Alexander F. Kerensky should head the pageant, should it really be true that the ex-Premier of the Russian Republic honors us with his presence.

A national contribution of $100,000,000 ought to be collected during "Russia's Week" for the healing of the wounds which a ruthless enemy continues to inflict on his prostrated former foe.

The joyful shouts of New York's masses acclaiming the Slavonic paraders will re-echo not only in the wide plains of Russia but also in the trenches of the western front, and, finally, in the palaces of Berlin and Munich, Dresden and Vienna.

A pictorial panorama of the Slavonic peoples ought to be presented, all the national costumes to be represented by the paraders; besides the national hymns of the Allies, the beautiful songs of the Russians and Poles and the other Slavic peoples ought to be sung in chorus. The dominating chord of the manifestation must be that of Hope. For Russia will be resurrected and the doubting Thomases will be put to shame. But let us hurry! Every minute counts when all mankind finds itself in a state of high fever. It is hard to understand—but facts are facts—why we shortsighted Allies should ever prefer the surgeon at the operating table to the hygienist in his laboratory.

MANY IRISH SIGN PLEA FOR TRIBUNAL

Want America, Holland, and Switzerland to Pass On Island's Problems.

HOPE TO WIN NATIONALISTS

Plan Is Embraced in Document Which Dublin Mayor Withholds from British.

By CHARLES N. WHEELER.

Copyright, 1918, by The Chicago Tribune Company.

DUBLIN, May 24.—An entirely new alignment of Irish politics is seen by well-informed leaders in the response of all sections of the island to the proposal to refer the Irish question immediately to an international tribunal, composed of the United States, Holland, and Switzerland, and that this is to be the first step in the setting up of a League of Nations before the war ends.

It will not be surprising if several prominent Nationalists swing to this platform within the next few days as the quickest way out of the almost hopeless wilderness into which Ireland is now plunged by the intrigue with Germany.

That the British Parliament will enact a Home Rule bill measure acceptable to both Ulster and South Ireland is not anticipated by the best informed men here. The excitement over conscription and the deportation of scores of Sinn Fein leaders, including women, makes it most difficult to compromise the differences between the North and the South. The middle ground seems to have been cut from under both factions, and there is scant hope of adjusting the Irish tangle while the war lasts.

Ambassador Gerard's statement that anti-British agitators are enemies of the United States was printed here today and caused a profound effect, as the leaders appreciate that his voice is potent in the United States. His advice that Mrs. Skeffington be sent home to Ireland and that the Lord Mayor of Dublin remain at home is affording the intellectuals a new vision of the American viewpoint.

The almost impossible task of dissociating, in the eyes of the world, the constitutionalist demand for home rule from anti-British feeling throughout Ireland and the consequent hindrance to the war aims of the Allies is realized by the Nationalist spokesmen. Their only hope of carrying on the old campaign of Redmond, they understand, lies in the support of American opinion. If that is lost they will become hopeless.

In such an emergency many are turning their attention to the international tribunal scheme. A modest announcement of this plan was made the same morning that the Government swooped down on the Sinn Fein leaders, but the two events had no connection. During the last few days, however, leading professional and business men in Ireland who are not identified with the political strife have been signing a petition which carries a dignified and friendly appeal to England to accept this way out.

Among the signers of the petition are Douglas Hyde, the well-known Chicago historian; Professors Robert Donovan and William Magennis of the National University, bankers, merchants, and Protestant and Catholic prelates in all the provinces. Thousands of names of men who carry weight are already on the petition, and if the Nationalist leaders now swing to this program, which is not unlikely, the Irish demand may be lifted out of the welter of the old political scrap gang at once.

This is one of the documents which the Lord Mayor refuses to submit to the British censor. The proposal opens with this statement:

"The conflict between the British Cabinet and the Irish people on the enforcement of conscription threatens to imperil the future of both Ireland and democracy, and no one capable of serious thought and effort can remain an idle looker-on while public affairs drift into irremedible chaos."

After setting forth the conflict between Britain and Ireland and suggesting the United States and neutral nations of Europe as a temporary court, the proposal appeals to England as follows:

"Unless British statesmanship is wholly bankrupt, the difficulty is not insuperable. The spirit of the proposal is that spirit which animates all who desire an early world peace based on the enduring foundation of public law. It is true that for England to figure thus as a litigant in a foreign court inflicts a certain measure of humiliation to her pride. But the ultimate gain to her prestige is inestimably great.

"To have set the other great powers among the belligerents so fine an example of magnanimity by choosing the way of justice in preference to the easier way of force will be acclaimed by future historians as her most superb achievement. To lift the Irish claim out of the welter of British party politics and sectarian animosities will be a service to Ireland. The method adopted will be a service to mankind as well. The result will ennoble Ireland and place her in her due position among the nations of Europe and enable her to discharge more effectively her appointed mission in the world."

The proposal also quotes striking epigrams from President Wilson's recent speeches.

Things are quiet on the Irish front today. It is expected that arrests of the Sinn Feiners and alleged plotters will continue in all the provinces.

WOMEN ENROLL TODAY.

Women who wish to vote in the primaries next September must enroll today. Enrollment places will be open from 8 A. M. to 10 P. M. A list of all these places was printed in The Times last Sunday.

GOV. WHITMAN PRAISES NEW YORK SOLDIERS

Reviews Ninth Coast Artillery Corps and Tells of Guardsmen's Good Work in War.

Governor Charles S. Whitman, speaking last night after the review of the 9th Coast Artillery Corps, New York Guard, at its armory in West Fourteenth Street, paid a tribute to the old National Guard, now in the Federal service, and to the new State Militia which has replaced it.

"Next to West Point, the New York Guard is the best officers' training school in the United States," he said. "We know that in the training of the guardsmen is to be found the best things in American life and in American citizenship.

"Not many months ago the National Guard of this State, trained at great expense, was taken into the service of the Federal Government, and we were indeed tremendously proud that we were able to give the country the splendidly trained army which has earned for the 27th Division the admiration of the entire country."

Governor Whitman spoke from the bridge of a huge ten-inch gun in a background of waving color, while the entire regiment was massed before him and every available foot of space in the balconies was packed with enthusiastic spectators.

Honors at the drill, which included every phase of manoeuvre from the manual of arms to the street riot and machine gun drill were shared by the artillerymen with the battalion of the Woman's Motor Corps, under the command of Captain Helen Bastedo, who executed a drill of their own and drew cheer after cheer from the reviewing stand and from the balconies. Colonel John Ross Delafield is commander of the new 9th Coast Artillery Command.

Colonel Edward Duffy, retired, former commander of the 69th Regiment, now in the Federal service, reviewed the new 69th Infantry of the New York Guard last night at the armory in Lexington Avenue and presented a set of colors to the veterans of the organization, some of whom fought in the civil war.

Twelve companies, representing a total enlistment of about 840 men in the new regiment, under the command of Colonel John P. Phelan, impressed a large crowd with their military bearing and the precision with which they executed the various infantry drills, despite the comparatively short period of training.

18,000 TO GO TO CAMPS.

Largest Movement of Draft Men Since the First Mobilization.

The final contingent of selective draft men ordered to Fort Slocum last week left for that post yesterday afternoon. Today the first of the 18,000 men called to the colors two weeks ago and ordered to report for duty at Camp Upton and Camp Wadsworth, S. C., will leave New York. The movement which begins today involves more men than any other single call since the mobilization of the first National Army. Also for the first time men called to the colors from New York City will report for duty at cantonments outside of New York State.

Ex-Vice President Fairbanks Better.

INDIANAPOLIS, May 24.—Reports from the bedside of Charles Warren Fairbanks, formerly Vice President of the United States, were that his condition was somewhat better than yesterday, and that, all things considered, it was satisfactory. Mr. Fairbanks has been seriously ill for some time.

Miss Brady Wed to Lieut. Keifer.

The marriage is announced of Miss Kathleen Cecilia Brady, secretary to the Surveyor General, Department of Interior, and Mrs. Brady of Ottawa, Canada, and Lieutenant Percy William Keifer, C. E., of Victoria, British Columbia, which took place in St. Stephen's Church, this city, on May 17. The bride is a graduate nurse of Roosevelt Hospital. Lieutenant Keifer is attached to the 1st Battalion, Suffolk Regiment, of the British Army, and was married while on a furlough to this country.

Miss Chappell to Wed Lieut. Cutler.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard F. Chappell announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Jeannette Chappell, to Lieutenant Gifford Cutler. Miss Chappell is a member of this year's graduating class from Miss Spence's School. Lieutenant Gifford is a grandson of the late General Louis H. Pelouse and a son of Captain William G. Cutler, U. S. N., and Mrs. Cutler. No date has been mentioned for the marriage.

Magistrate's Chambers Robbed.

It was not the loss of a raincoat, but his fountain pen, that worried Magistrate House when he discovered they had been stolen from his chambers when he arrived yesterday morning at the Traffic Court. With this large-sized pen, well known to every one who ever appeared before Magistrate House, all offenders had their fines or a jail sentence recorded. Every speeder knew that spurting the ink twice on the wet sponge meant a straight jail sentence of five days. But Magistrate House is puzzled to know just why the raincoat and fountain pen were stolen, and not several valuable relief bronzes and a gavel with silver mounting, which were not disturbed.

Germans Plan World News Agency.

AMSTERDAM, May 24.—The Handelsblad says it learns that preparations are being made in Germany to establish a pan-German news organization. The organization will cover the entire world. One of the first steps in this direction, according to the newspaper, has been the founding of a national Dutch news agency at The Hague.

IRISH ARE AGITATED OVER LONG'S VISIT

Chairman of Committee Drafting the Home Rule Bill Arrives in Dublin.

FEAR OF NEW REPRESSION

London Announces Possession of Documents Showing Sinn Fein Scheming.

LONDON, May 24.—Walter Hume Long, Secretary for the Colonies, who is Chairman of the committee drafting the Irish Home Rule bill, arrived last night in Dublin and is staying at the Viceregal Lodge, according to a Press Association dispatch from the Irish capital.

Several more arrests have been made in the country districts of Ireland. Two of the men arrested Sunday, Collins and Mullins, will be courtmartialed on charges of having illegal possession of explosives.

The official Press Bureau has issued a statement regarding the Irish arrests and the revolutionary movement in Ireland. The story of the active connection between the leaders of the Sinn Fein movement and the Germans, as disclosed by documents in the possession of the British Government, falls into two parts—the period prior to and that since the abortive Irish rebellion of Easter, 1916.

The events of the first period are dwelt upon in some detail, but those of the second period permit of no more than a summary, as a full statement of the facts and documents in the possession of the Government would disclose the names of persons who were loyal to Great Britain and the channels of communication through which the German Government acted and which it is not in the public interest to reveal.

The story of the period before Easter, 1916, takes up in detail the work of German agents, prominent among whom was Count von Bernstorff, former German Ambassador to the United States.

Long's Presence Causes Commotion.

DUBLIN, May 24.—The arrival of Walter Hume Long in Dublin caused a great commotion in political circles here today. As a member of the War Cabinet and a high adviser of the Government on Irish affairs, Mr. Long's presence here is regarded as an event of the highest significance and importance.

The Nationalists are openly hostile and their official organ, The Freeman's Journal, says:

"The arrival of Walter Hume Long suggests that the drama is rapidly developing and we make bold to say that that development will be along lines of coercion and melodrama. When the recent proclamation was published we suggested that, although it was signed by Field Marshal French and Edward Shortt, Chief Secretary for Ireland, its real inspirer was Walter Hume Long. Mr. Long has proved himself to be a sturdy henchman of Sir Edward Carson."

Gossip in political circles here has also been stimulated by the arrival of Herbert L. Samuel, former Home Secretary and one of the chief supporters of former Premier Asquith. He has conferred with a number of prominent Irish Liberals.

Sinn Fein Press Sardonic.

The entire "mosquito press," some half dozen Sinn Fein weekly newspapers of diminutive size, but with plenty of sting, appeared as usual yesterday. The articles are cleverly and ably written, and many of them are of high literary quality.

The articles are framed very carefully and without excessive violence of language which might provoke suppression. The editors often display great ingenuity in conveying their propaganda under a disguise easily penetrated by an Irish reader, who likes nothing better than this game of hide and seek.

The paper called Nationality, which was edited by Arthur Griffith until his arrest, treats the situation with a light touch, saucy and flippant, and full of sardonic humor.

"The Government will soon realize," it says, "that the shipment of Sinn Feiners out of Ireland will make excessive demands on the limited supply of tonnage. The Sinn Fein is a sort of tree that thrives on pruning."

In a discussion of the sentiment in America, Nationality says:

"The British-owned press of the United States and France is calling on these war-obsessed peoples to scorn and repudiate the Irish leaders who plot with their enemies. If we ask for evidence of the plot, they say, 'Read the proclamation, listen to the stories, and look at the pictures.'"

A paper called The Voice of Labor, whose principal writer, T. Barry, has just been deported, says:

"Ireland's efforts to defeat conscription have for the moment succeeded, but only for the moment. The kidnapping of popular leaders on charges of treasonable communication with Germany obviously was designed to prejudice the friends of Ireland in America and other countries."

Threatened Split Over Fund.

The anti-conscription fund, which in less than a month has grown to nearly $1,000,000, bids fair to become one of the most important factors in the development of the internal political situation. It is the largest fund ever raised in Ireland for a political purpose, and, being in control of the Mansion House conference, that body finds itself in a position of greater financial power than any political organization in Ireland today.

Thus the conference, unless managed scrupulously, would be able to influence tremendously the action of any Nationalist political organization. This opens many dangerous possibilities to which the moderate leaders in Dublin have devoted anxious attention during the last forty-eight hours.

A considerable proportion of the subscribers to the fund are moderate Irish men and women who, while objecting to the forcible application of conscription, are firm supporters of the war, and equally firm opponents of the Sinn Fein and everything for which it stands. Should the representatives of this moderate opinion attempt to restrain their extremist colleagues, it is evident that a situation might arise where the resignation of the moderates would be inevitable. Serious problems regarding the control of the fund might then be presented.

Dillon's Position Difficult.

The resignation of the moderate delegates to the conference would be regarded as a tremendous victory for the Sinn Fein, and Sinn Feiners may do all in their power to embarrass their Nationalist opponents. This is the reason why the situation in which John Dillon and Joseph Devlin find themselves is one of the most delicate in the history of Irish politics.

Unionist critics are quite alive to the situation, and are doing their utmost to make capital for themselves by pointing out a moral to the Irish. The Irish Times, in an editorial referring to the decision of the conference to use the fund for aiding the dependents of "men whose activities are gravely incompatible with the safety of the nation," asks if Dillon and Devlin were content to sit silent while the conference "resolved away Ireland's honor," and asks if the Bishops have nothing to say about the use of the fund.

An American club smoker and dance in aid of the Red Cross drive was attended by a majority of the allied foreigners. The Allies celebrated the third anniversary of the entrance of Italy into the war by decorating their stores and private homes with the allied colors.

Started for Fort Oglethorpe Pending His Appeal.

CHICAGO, May 24.—Count James Minotto, son-in-law of Louis F. Swift, the packer, tonight was started in the custody of army officers for Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., for internment.

The Count, who had been denied freedom from a presidential warrant in habeas corpus proceedings yesterday, today was ordered held by Federal Judge Carpenter, who granted him an appeal, and set the hearing for June 12.

Judges Baker and Evans in the United States Court of Appeals refused to allow the Count his liberty on bond pending hearing of the appeal.

Mr. Swift in a statement referred to the Count's "accident of birth in Germany," and added:

"All of us who know James Minotto know him as a loyal American in spirit, if not by naturalization."

FRENCH REGRET BENNETT.

Report That Eugene Higgins Is His Executor Under the Will.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, May 24.—This city and all France have been paying a remarkable tribute to the memory of James Gordon Bennett. The European edition of the Herald has given the first place to expressions of appreciation and regret, and its readers have been gratified to turn from the war to another subject for a few days.

People here feel that Mr. Bennett was like a peak in the world landscape. Although the public saw little of him, his picturesque personality was widely known and admired. He lived in two worlds in close proximity, but impenetrably separated.

When I asked one of his best friends, a well-known French nobleman, about office affairs, he replied that he had never known the name of a single man on The Herald; but he received a telegram every day during Mr. Bennett's last sickness, advising him of the patient's condition.

There is much interest and speculation here about the future of the newspaper properties, especially the Paris edition. While this paper is much commented upon for its idiosyncracies, it has become an institution here, and its disappearance—which, of course, is not considered—would be universally regretted.

Mrs. Bennett, who was the Baroness de Reuter, has always been in touch with journalism, her first husband having been one of the proprietors of the Reuter Telegram Company, in which she retains a heavy interest. Her two grown sons were favorites with Mr. Bennett.

I hear that Eugene Higgins is executor under the will, the provisions of which have not yet been announced. If the will bequeaths the newspapers to Mrs. Bennett, her friends believe that she will give them capable direction until such time as her sons can take charge.

EVAN WILLIAMS DIES.

Famous Oratorio Tenor Was a Coal Miner in His Youth.

AKRON, Ohio, May 24.—Evan Williams, a noted tenor, died this morning at the City Hospital after an illness of one week. Death was due to blood poisoning. Mr. Williams was a national figure in the musical world. For twenty-seven years the singer taught and sang and stood for better music throughout the nation. Recently his work had been among the soldiers, who will remember him always for the way he sang "Tim Rooney's at the Fightin'."

Evan Williams was probably the most distinguished oratorio tenor, a singer of the old school. He was born in Mineral Ridge, Ohio, of Welsh parents, on Sept. 7, 1867, and as a young man was employed in the coal mines near his home. His rise from poor circumstances to a high place in the musical profession was considered one of the most remarkable achievements in American musical history. Mr. Williams made his first concert appearance with a Welsh choir in Galion, Ohio, in 1891, and five years later he distinguished himself in an appearance with noted soloists at the music festival in Worcester, Mass. He appeared in England in 1894, and sang at many important concerts in London, returning to this country in 1897.

His fame grew rapidly and he was the soloist with leading choral societies both in England and the United States.

FORBID NEW GERMAN CLASSES IN SCHOOLS

Associate Superintendents Vote 7 to 2 Against Teaching Language.

BOARD EXPECTED TO AGREE

Students Who Have Begun Study of German Will Be Permitted to Finish Course.

The Board of Superintendents decided at its meeting yesterday that beginning with the Fall term of 1918 no new classes in German shall be formed in the intermediate and high schols of this city. All the associate Superintendents were present, as was also City Superintendent Ettinger. The vote in favor of this action was 7 to 2. William McAndrew and John H. Walsh voting against it. The matter will now go before the Board of Education, which will probably approve of it.

This means that the teaching of German in these schools will be eliminated, except for those who have begun the study of the language, and who will be permitted to finish it. There are at present 12,954 pupils studying German in the high schools. There are 17,210 studying French, and 21,971 studying Spanish.

Previous to taking this action the Superintendents gave a hearing to those opposed to the teaching of German in the high schools. Professor Robert McNutt McElroy, representing the National Security League, said that there was no commercial value at the present time in teaching pupils German. He admitted that his former attitude regarding the teaching of German had been changed by the fact that America was at war with Germany, for he felt that the German language would have a tendency to divert the minds of the pupils from true Americanization.

Henry C. Quinby, representing the American Defense Society, based his objections solely upon the fact that the United States is at war with Germany. He said that the economical and commercial value of the German language to people in the Western Hemisphere is gone. He spoke at some length on the value of substituting French and Spanish for German.

Professor L. A. Wilkins, Chairman of the Modern Language Division of the High Schools, read several letters into the record in opposition to the teaching of German. Among these was one from Elihu Root, who wrote:

"Our country is engaged in a life and death struggle with the great German-speaking powers of the world, and we have suddenly come to realize that vast numbers of our population receive their ideas, both as to facts and opinions, exclusively or chiefly through the language of our enemies. To be a strong and united nation we must be a one-language people. The prevailing language of the United States happens to be English and our institutions are inherited from men using that language. Our liberties were won by men using that language.

"In English are to be found the records of our past, our laws, the decisions of our courts, the expositions of principles and policies by the statesmen and leaders who for centuries had been trusted and followed by the American people. That is the language through which the body of our people discuss their political problems and reach their conclusions. It is almost impossible that men, cut off from this field of common knowledge, can really understand and appreciate the vital elements of spirit and purpose which are the life of the American democracy. It is of the highest importance, affecting not merely the curriculum of our schools, that all the people of the United States shall read and speak and think in the one prevailing language.

"This should be the controlling consideration. In view of it every effort should be made to promote the universal use of English and to discourage the common use of German by any part of our population. Nothing ought to be done which will make it easier for anybody living in the United States to read and speak the German language instead of reading and speaking the English language. Everything done in that direction will tend to retard and, if carried far enough, to prevent the process of Americanization which is so essential. To use the public money raised by taxation to facilitate and promote the use of German instead of the use of English seems to me on public grounds to be wholly indefensible."

Letters were also read from Gideon A. Lyon of Washington, D. C.; Professor Raymond Weeks of Columbia University, who has just returned from France; William Tilly of the Tilly Institute of Marburg, Germany, who was interned for about two years and a half; Gaston Liebert, French Consul General, and from the University Club, St. Nicholas Society, Union League Club, and Women's Republican Club.

Clement G. Elmer, in charge of modern languages of the Stuyvesant High School, said he would like to cut out German. He thought that the teachers in that language should be put to some useful occupation. He said he did not believe that public moneys should be expended upon subjects, sciences, or languages that were not essential to a fair education. Communications were also received along the same lines from Horace Mann Snyder, Principal of the Manual Training High School, Brooklyn, and from Mrs. Oliver Cromwell Field, President of the American Relief Legion.

HELD AS FORTUNE TELLER.

Pastor of Spiritualist Church Called a Disorderly Person.

John Hill, pastor of the Spiritual Church of the Advanced Thought, at 10 West Ninety-first Street, was found guilty of being disorderly under a warrant signed by Chief Magistrate McAdoo in the West Side Court yesterday. The allegation was that he had violated the Criminal Code forbidding the telling of fortunes. Magistrate Healy deferred sentence until June 3 to allow counsel time to appeal.

Evidence was obtained by Mrs. Mary A. Sullivan and Mrs. Ada Brady, attached to the office of Mrs. Ellen A. O'Grady, Fifth Deputy Police Commissioner.

Deputy Assistant District Attorney Barger contended that when Hill acted as a medium at the services opening the church on May 3 and foretold events in spirit messages he was violating the law. William H. Burr, counsel for the New York State General Assembly of Spiritualists, defended the pastor.

Hudson Day Line Service Begins.

The Summer service of the Hudson River Day Line began yesterday morning with the departure of the Albany from the foot of Desbrosses Street with a large passenger list for Albany. A service flag with forty-nine stars was unfurled, that being the number of employes of the company now in service, and President Olcott of the line made a brief speech. The Washington Irving will make a special trip up the river today with a party of guests of the company.

SENATORS INSISTING ON DUAL AIR INQUIRY

Military Committee Likely to Go Ahead, Despite Objection Voiced by Hughes.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—At a conference tomorrow between Charles E. Hughes and Senator Thomas, Chairman of the Sub-committee on Aircraft Production of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, a decision is expected to be reached whereby the Senate sub-committee will investigate aircraft production.

In spite of Mr. Hughes's clearly expressed wish that the Department of Justice investigation, in which he is assisting, be not hampered by any parallel inquiry, most members of the Senate sub-committee favor going ahead with a phase of investigation which, they assert, could not possibly interfere with Mr. Hughes's work.

The sub-committee members said today that Mr. Hughes's inquiry was to be corrective, while theirs would be constructive. It would remedy deficiences in productive equipment, or at least point the way to remedy them, they said.

The full Committee on Military Affairs discussed this morning the question of going ahead with the aircraft inquiry, or yielding to Mr. Hughes's expressed wish. As at a former meeting the divergence in views was so sharp that no definite action was taken. The committee left the matter entirely in the sub-committee's hands.

Sub-committee members expressed themselves as confident that after all there would be a Congressional inquiry. If Senator Thomas and Mr. Hughes agree that no harm could come to the Department of Justice inquiry by reason of the Senate investigation, the first step probably will be a swing around the various aircraft factories in the country. Data gathered in trips to these places are expected to form the ground work of formal hearings later.

ORDNANCE INQUIRY ON.

Senators Hear That One Contract Is Ahead of Time Schedule.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—The Senate Military Committee started the first of its war inquiries today with a sub-committee holding hearings on the production of heavy ordnance. W. H. Morgan, a manufacturer of Alliance, Ohio, told the committee his plant would fill its $15,000,000 contract for heavy ordnance long before the time limit expired. He said his concern saved $800,000 for the Government by making an improved wheel for gun carriages.

Mr. Morgan complained that inspectors employed by the War Department had not had technical training. The Labor Commission, he said, was satisfactory, although housing problems were causing some concern.

McCABE GETS ARMY POST.

To be Athletic Director in Camp at San Juan, Porto Rico.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Joseph H. McCabe, former President of the Amateur Athletic Union, was appointed Army Athletic Director at the Las Casas (San Juan, P. R.) camp. Mr. McCabe will leave immediately for Porto Rico. The appointment is the result of a survey of conditions surrounding the Porto Rican training camp made at the instance of Secretary Baker by W. Prentice Sanger, Executive Secretary of the War Department's Commission on Training Camp Activities. A supervisor or director of mass singing will next be appointed by the commission. McCabe will instruct the men in athletics.

The camp is now being constructed. It will be permanent and will contain every convenience for soldiers. The Y. M. C. A. and the Knights of Columbus are establishing welfare huts in the camp.

Discussing today the situation in Porto Rico, Mr. Sanger said that upward of 13,000 Porto Ricans were fitting themselves for active service in France. He spoke highly of the patriotism of the people of the island. They have oversubscribed their quota in the Liberty Loan and the entire population is working with animation to assist the great drive for Red Cross funds.

5,804 RIVETS IN 9 HOURS.

British Workman Sets New Record and Wins Three Prizes.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 24.—William Moses, a workman at the Vickers Naval Construction Works at Barrow, yesterday established a new riveting record, driving 5,804 rivets in nine hours.

LONDON, May 24, (Associated Press.)—A new riveting record for the United Kingdom was made yesterday at Barrow by William Moses, an employe of Vickers, Limited. Using a 28½-pound riveting hammer on firing beams for 9.2-inch howitzers, Moses drove 5,804 rivets in nine hours. The rivets were of two kinds, countersunk and snaphead, and the tools employed had been in use for twelve months.

Moses made a slow beginning owing to defective heating arrangement, and at noon, which was half-time, the score stood at 2,620. At 1 o'clock it was 3,285.

Mr. Mackenzie, one of the Directors of Vickers, had offered £25 if 5,000 rivets were driven, £10 if Moses beat the mark of 4,422 made by Thomas Devine on the Clyde last week, and £5 if Devine's mark was equaled.

When time was called, Moses wiped the sweat from his brow and jumped down from the platform amid the enthusiastic cheers of thousands of fellow-workers. The Mayor of Barrow, who had been an interested onlooker, stepped forward and warmly congratulated Moses upon his achievement.

MOVES TO HELP ITALIANS.

Gen. Scott Would Protect Recruits from Italy's Government Tax.

CAMP DIX, WRIGHTSTOWN, N. J., May 24.—The Italian Government will no longer collect the military tax from the parents of so-called "deserters" from the Italian Army who at the present time are serving in the National Army, if Major Gen. Hugh L. Scott has his way. There are 250 or more Italian-born young men at Camp Dix, having been drafted from various parts of New Jersey, Delaware, and New York. Many of these were unable to get back to their own country, though willing to join the Italian Army, and they are classed as "deserters" in that country now, and their parents forced to pay the military tax.

General Scott has ordered officers of the various regiments here to obtain the names of all the Italian-born soldiers in their commands, also designating the present address of their parents. These names will be forwarded to the Adjutant General's office at Washington and then to the Italian Government, which will be urged to change "deserters" to "patriots" and cancel the military tax.

ASKS SERVICE BOARD FOR SUBWAY DATA

Board of Estimate Wants to Know What Work, if Any, Should Be Stopped.

HEAR ABOUT LABOR CRISIS

Whitney Says Interborough Seeks to Delay New Subway Until Its Fiscal Year Ends.

The Board of Estimate yesterday took up the question of appropriating $800,000 in order to finish work on the Seventh Avenue and Lexington Avenue subways, as requested by the Public Service Commission, and also heard representatives of the General Contractors Association and labor men respecting the demands of labor for an increase of wages. Representatives of the contractors told the board that the contractors were unable to meet the demands of the laborers and that the workmen were leaving them because they were able to get higher wages elsewhere. The contractors offered to do the remainder of the work without profit to themselves, provided the board would meet the demands of the laborers who have threatened to go on strike on June 1.

Under the Lockwood bill the Public Service Commission and the Board of Estimate must decide jointly just what should be done to relieve the situation. The board yesterday adopted a report of Controller Craig providing that the Public Service Commission should make a report as to what the commission thought should be done, giving the board data as to how near the work is completed, just what work must be completed, and what work, if any, should be stopped. Previous to the board meeting there was a division in an executive meeting over the question of whether the board should appoint a committee to confer with a committee of the Public Service Commission. President Smith of the Board of Aldermen, President Dowling of Manhattan, and President Connolly of Queens, were in favor of the committee plan, but at the board meeting the vote to adopt the report of the Controller was unanimous.

Tells of Threatened Strike.

Counsel for the General Contractors Association explained that the workmen had served notice on the association that unless an increase in wages was granted by June 1 they would strike on all subway work.

"How many men are there now working on the job?" asked President Dowling.

"From 5,000 to 6,000," was the answer. "These are the big contract jobs on both the B. R. T. and the Interborough, and there are a smaller number of men on the smaller contracts, such as station finish, &c."

Some of the workmen are engaged on the Seventh Avenue and the Lexington Avenue subways, although both these contracts are nearly finished. Mayor Hylan thought it would cost the city from $8,300,000 to $10,000,000 if the extra pay was granted, but counsel for the contractors explained that the cost would be lessened because with the lines in operation the city would begin to profit.

"Why don't you pay the rate demanded?" asked President Connolly.

"We can't do it," was the reply. "We haven't the money. Every contractor who desires to proceed with his contract under the provisions of the Lockwood bill and pay to labor a just demand—for it is a just demand—should be allowed to do to. We have applied for relief and are willing to finish the work without any profit to ourselves, but if the men get away we do not know when we will be able to get them back."

William L. Ransom, counsel for the Public Service Commission, suggested that the commission and the board hold a conference to find just how matters stood.

"I am not going into any conference," said the Mayor, "until I know what has been going on and I can argue for the other side. Why doesn't the Public Service Commission give us a statement of the lines it thinks should be completed and what work could be stopped?"

"Don't you remember that two members of the commission more than a month ago spent a whole evening explaining why certain lines should be completed?" asked Mr. Ransom.

"Why don't you put it in writing?" demanded the Mayor.

"The next morning we did put it in writing, and you have had it before you for a month," said Mr. Ransom.

The board then took up the request of the commission to approve a proposed agreement between the city and the Interborough, modifying the contract of March 19, 1913, so as to provide that the Interborough shall complete the connections between the present subway and the new subway at Times Square, Park Avenue and Forty-second Street, and Borough Hall and Atlantic Avenue, Brooklyn. The commission wanted an appropriation of corporate stock in order to carry out the agreement. The communication was first received on March 1, and it was referred to the Controller on March 25. Several times since the commission has written urging that action be taken and asserting that if the agreement was made the new subways at these points could probably be opened for operation by June 15.

On Oct. 5, 1917, a resolution was adopted approving the agreement, providing for the continuance of the work, the cost of which was to be paid by the Interborough out of its contribution of $58,000,000 toward the cost of construction under the original contract. After considerable discussion, Controller Craig insisted that the resolution of Oct. 5 should be rescinded before any action was taken by the board. He then presented his report, made public on Thursday, in which he said that the delay in completing the Seventh and Lexington Avenue subways was the fault of the Public Service Commission and that the commission had for two years permitted the Interborough Company to disregard its obligations to the city and to injure the traveling public because the delay was worth $200,000 a month to the company, and that an attempt was now being made by the commission to conceal its friendship for the company by accusing the Board of Estimate of unwarranted delay.

Questions Controller's Report.

Mr. Ransom replied that he thought the Controller's report was wrong, and that he did not believe there was any culpability on the part of the commission.

"Will you explain why you did not send us the second agreement, the one under discussion?" asked the Controller.

"Because," replied Mr. Ransom, "the Interborough neither signed the agreement of the Board of Estimate of Oct. 5, 1917, nor agreed to sign it."

"When did you discover this?" asked the Controller.

"I will explain that later," replied Mr. Ransom.

Mr. Ransom said he did not know when the Interborough had announced that it would not sign the agreement, but it was explained that the company had given a verbal refusal. Commissioner Travis H. Whitney, who arrived at this point, said:

"I admire the Controller's courage in exposing the Interborough's delay. They are now bringing forward other matters to cause further delays. They now have a modified agreement regarding ticket sales at Times Square and the diagonal station at Grand Central Station which will cause further delay. There is no question but that the Interborough is doing its best to delay the completion and beginning operation of the new subways until July 1, which completes their fiscal year."

The board will hold a special meeting on Monday, by which time it hopes to obtain all the data necessary from the Public Service Commission.

WOMEN ENROLL TODAY.

Women who wish to vote in the primaries next September must enroll today. Enrollment places will be open from 8 A. M. to 10 P. M. A list of all these places was printed in The Times last Sunday.

COMMERCIAL PAPER.

Yesterday ....6 p. c. for the best names

The quotations are for six months' paper.

Fewer Models This Year.

Several manufacturers of coats and suits for women report that they intend to make up fewer models this year than they have been in the habit of doing in the past. And all are reported to be exercising greater care in the selection of style drawings to work on than has been their custom formerly. "Instead of going ahead," said one manufacturer, "and making up a countless variety of suits, including many that we 'hope' will sell, we are going to confine ourselves pretty closely to those few which we have reason to believe are fairly sure to sell."

Used Whisky Barrels Scarce.

Manufacturers and exporters who require tight barrels for certain of their products and who have depended on the supply of used whisky barrels to fill their requirements are now finding it increasingly difficult to obtain these in anything like sufficient quantities to meet their needs. When the distilling of whisky was stopped the supply of used whisky barrels was, of course, cut off. Prices on those still remaining are said to have mounted to unheard-of figures, and users of these barrels are now seeking some other way out of the difficulty.

Men's Suit Sales Are Good.

Local manufacturers of men's suits say that early reports from their customers indicate that sales of Spring suits have been very good so far. In spite of the fact that there are 2,000,000 men wearing uniforms who last year were buying civilian clothes, a comparison of this season's record with sales made in the same period a year ago is said to be by no means discouraging. It is reported, also, that men generally are paying even more attention to quality and workmanship than they used to do, while style seems to be of less importance than in former times. Extreme styles are not very popular this year.

Men's Shoes Sought.

There has been quite a substantial late demand from retailers for certain of the more popular lines of men's shoes for filling in purposes, according to reports from local wholesalers. In all grades of shoes, high, medium, and low-priced, with the exception of cordovan shoes, there seems to be a growing tendency toward black rather than the various tan shades. In cordovan, however, dark tan, which has gained such favor during the last year or two, is still favored. Oxfords for this season of the year are, of course, the big sellers. There are some dancing slippers wanted also.

Wash Waists in Demand.

Washable waists, particularly in the medium-priced lines, are having a great run of popularity just now, according to reports from several local manufacturers. Organdies and other lightweight cotton fabrics are wanted. It is said that pure white is very much in favor this season. Some of the best selling models, however, are beautifully embroidered in blended colors, and frequently trimmings of the shade which predominates in the embroidered design are used. Though high collars are still selling in certain sections, it seems that low necks, some square, some V shaped, and quite a few perfectly round, are generally preferred

Need Style and Quality.

"Style gets orders, but it requires quality to get reorders," said one of the largest dress manufacturers of this city yesterday. "It is true that a garment of an appealing style will sell and perhaps bring a fairly good price, even though its quality is not of the best. A woman will sometimes buy a dress because it looks nice and at the time pay very little attention to its quality. But, after she has used it a few times, if it begins to show signs of wear she is going to very much dissatisfied. The merchant and the manufacturer alike depend on their steady customers and their reorders for success. They will lose both if their customers are dissatisfied."

Bleached Cottons Advance Again.

On Tuesday a price list was issued by Taylor, Clapp & Beall of this city, which covered several grades of bleached cotton goods sold by them and which showed advances of 2 cents a yard over previously current quotations. Yesterday a second list was issued by the same firm, covering some of the same goods, which showed increases of 1 to 2 cents a yard over the Tuesday list. These goods and the new prices follow: Berkeley extra cambric, 33c.; Berkeley No. 150 cambric, 36½c.; No. 180, 38½c., and No. 300, 39½c. Berkeley English longcloths were re-priced this way: No. 3,000, 33½c.; No. 4,000, 36½c.; No. 5,000, 39c., and No. 6,000, 40c. Berkeley Coronet, No. 60 and No. 100 cambrics, and Berkeley No. 500, No. 1,000, No. 2,000, and No. 2,500 English longcloths continue on the price bases established by the Tuesday list. All prices, however, are subject to further advance without notice.

Men's Hosiery Demand Uneven.

Reports from various handlers of the better grades of hosiery for men indicate a rather uneven demand for these goods for Fall. Though the dollars and cents value of the advance orders placed by buyers in some cases shows larger than the corresponding figures of last year, due to the higher selling prices, the actual number of dozens of hosiery sold is considerably smaller. The falling off in the quantity demand for these goods appears to be more marked outside of the metropolitan district than in it, for leading local retailers of the higher-priced lines of men's silk, silk and wool, and all-wool hose are said to have placed larger advance orders, both in number of dozens and money, than they did for last Fall at this time. All-wool hose, which are very scarce and high in the finer grades, appear to be most actively sought, while as for the colors wanted, cordovan brown, navy, gray and black lead.

Buying Cloths for Gas Masks.

One of the reasons why civilian buyers of unfinished cotton goods are having so much trouble in finding 39-inch 80-square printcloths for anything like nearby deliveries was said yesterday to be due to the fact that, following recent heavy purchases of these cloths by the United States Government, one of the allied Governments is now buying them, through official American purchasing agents, for delivery in the next sixty days. While the goods bought for American account were said to be wanted for hospital purposes, it is understood that the allied Government in question will employ them in the making of a new type of gas mask. While the mill price to civilians for these goods is 25 cents a yard, or $1 a pound, the sales to both Governments have been made at the fixed price of 78 cents a pound, or 19½ cents a yard.

Printcloths Were More Active.

Printcloths were somewhat more in demand in the local gray goods market yesterday than for the last several days, but the same could hardly be said of sheetings and other coarse goods. In the printcloths, sales were very largely restricted to goods wanted for shipment in the next sixty days or so, neither the mills nor the buyers apparently being willing to "talk turkey" in regard to contracts. Among the day's sales were 39-inch 68-72s at 20¼ cents for May; 56-44s in the same width at 15 cents for June; 38½-inch 60-52s at 16½ cents for June, and 38½-inch 64-56s at 18 cents for July. Closing spot prices were:

Downward Trend of Those of Foodstuffs Was a Feature.

About the same proportion of advances and declines were shown this week by Dun's list of wholesale commodities prices as last, when there was a slight excess of the latter for the first time in several months. There were more fluctuations this week than last, however, 65 of the 325 commodities quoted on showing change. Of these 34 were declines. Last week, out of 48 revisions, 26 were downward. The outstanding feature was the downward trend of foodstuffs prices.

The following list gives the minimum wholesale prices quoted on forty-one standard commodities this week at this city, unless otherwise specified. They are corrected to yesterday, and with them are given comparative prices for last week and for the corresponding week a year ago:

*Nominal. †Government basis.

This week's list showed slightly more than two declines for every advance in the foodstuffs, and most of the advances were in spices and other minor items. Fancy nearby eggs suffered a drop for the second week in succession, and the same was true of the best Westerns. The former fell off a cent a dozen and the latter 2 cents, which left the fancy eggs on a par with last year's figure and the Westerns well below the corresponding 1917 level. There were no changes either way in the listed kinds of cheese, but a general decline in butter prices was shown. Bacon was lower in this city, after two weeks of advances, while in the major provisions market at Chicago live beef and live hogs were the only things to advance. Mess pork, Middle Western lard, short ribs and live sheep all went down.

Potatoes (old) fell off again, this time to a point that is $4.50 a hundred pounds lower than at this time last year. Cabbage was the only vegetable to advance, the other declines shown being choice marrow, choice medium, and choice red and white kidney beans. The only change in the listed fresh fruits was a rise in fancy apples, while in the dried ones an advance in California peaches contrasted with a drop in cleaned currants. Common syrup was quoted lower this week, and other foodstuffs changes included fair Formosa tea and black and white Singapore pepper.

Nearly a third of the week's changes were confined to the combined lists for drugs, chemicals, dyestuffs, and oils, where thirteen advances and seven declines were shown. Among the interesting things was a rise of 15 cents an ounce in the price of quinine, in 100-ounce tins, and a further advance of 10 cents a pound in lump sal ammoniac. Due to the great war demand for ammonia products, this commodity now costs nearly five times as much as it did a year ago. The grains list produced no advances, but showed declines in corn, malt, oats, and malting barley.

In the metals there were declines in ordinary antimony, spelter, and tin, the last quotation, however, being nominal. Resin showed a further advance in the list of naval stores, and this time turpentine also went up. M. F. book paper advanced, but lower prices were quoted on tallow and on Chinese raw silk.

The textile markets were of more interest this week than for some little time. In the woolens, higher market levels were reached by 13-ounce fancy cassimeres and also by 36-inch all-worsted and cotton-warp serges and 36-inch all-worsted Panamas. In the burlaps, only the lack of spot goods kept "heavies" from breaking, while "lights" did lose some ground as a result of the inactive market. Gray printcloths and sheetings took on added strength this week, following the withdrawals of most second-hand sellers, and certain standard bleached cottons went up twice during the week.

PRICES OF OIL TO ALLIES.

Government Fixes Schedule on All Grades for Naval Use.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—The price of gasolene to the Allies was fixed today by the oil division of the Fuel Administration as follows:

Free on board Gulf ports, 21 cents a gallon; free on board Atlantic seaboard, 23½ cents a gallon; United States Navy specifications in both cases.

At the same time the price for aviation naphtha was fixed as follows: Thirty cents a gallon Gulf ports; 32 cents a gallon Atlantic seaboard; British specifications, 302 degrees Fahrenheit, final boiling point in both cases.

Fuel oil prices were fixed at: Gulf ports, 5¾ cents, British Admiralty specifications; 5¾ cents, United States Navy specifications; Atlantic seaboard, 7½ cents, United States Navy specifications.

The price of standard white refined kerosene was fixed at 7½ cents at Gulf ports and 8½ cents at Atlantic seaboard; Mexican reduced oil was fixed at 6 cents, Atlantic seaboard. While these prices apply only to the Allies, it is expected they will stabilize the domestic market. The prices become effective May 20 for sixty days.

BIG DRY GOODS SALES.

CHICAGO, May 24.—Marshall Field & Co. in their weekly review of the dry goods trade say:

"Current wholesale distribution of dry goods for the week is well ahead of the heavy volume of the corresponding week last year, road sales for both immediate and future delivery showing a marked increase over the same period of 1917. The number of customers in the market has been about the same. Collections are very good."

BALTIMORE LIMITS FREIGHT.

Embargoes Inbound Shipments of Less Than a Carload.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Md., May 24.—On account of the vast accumulation of shipments at local terminals the Baltimore Committee for the Eastern railroads today issued an embargo order on inbound less-than-carload freight to go into effect tomorrow morning.

It was stated that the city faced an accumulation of freight which it would require at least eleven days to remove, and that it was now up to the shipping public to co-operate with the railroads in getting their freight away from the terminals promptly.

There are 654 cars of less-than-carload freight reported at all terminals, either set for unloading or held in the yards awaiting placement. There are also 881 cars on the platform and 167 cars on the lines bound for Baltimore. Freight is being removed at the rate of 75 cars a day.

For the first time the Baltimore Committee has decided to resort to the plan of having freight removed from the platforms at the expense of the consignees after the expiration of the free time, forty-eight hours.

98,000,000 Bushels of Kansas Wheat

TOPEKA, Kan., May 24.—A yield of 98,411,822 bushels is the estimate on the Kansas wheat crop to be harvested next month, according to a report issued today by the Board of Agriculture. This estimate is 2,500,000 bushels greater than that forecast by the Federal Department of Agriculture, and is an increase of 137 per cent. over last year's yield. The condition of Spring wheat is given at 90 per cent.

Krafft Appeals to Highest Court.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Frederick Krafft, at one time Socialist candidate for Governor of New Jersey, asked the Supreme Court today to review judgments convicting him of violating the Espionage act and sentencing him to five years' imprisonment and to pay a fine of $1,000. The conviction resulted from a speech made by Krafft at Newark, N. H.

Building a Reserve

The wise investor is regularly investing his surplus above war taxes and Government Bonds in short term securities of industries essential to our nation at war.

He thus secures a fairly liquid and high interest bearing investment that will provide a strong reserve should there be a business depression following the war.

Let us send you our Circular T, describing an issue of this character.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Move Strongly Forward, Only to Break Suddenly on Taxation Report.

The stock market experienced two violently contrasting moods yesterday, prices moving upward with a great display of strength in the early afternoon only to run into a slump near the close which carried most of them back over all of the new ground won. The close was irregular, with some of the most active issues under their previous day's prices, and well below the best figures for the day. Steel, for instance, got up to 110⅝ while bullish talk predominated and fell back to 107⅝ in short order when sentiment changed about. It was very largely a traders' market.

The rise was supported by the understanding that the President had decided against new tax legislation at this session of Congress, and gained momentum on the publication of Lloyd George's speech in Edinburgh, in which he stated that "those who know best what the prospects are feel most confident about the result." Prices made such a response to the good news that public interest in the market, which had been waning, began to show itself in new buying orders. In the late afternoon reported statements by Mr. Kitchin indicated that the Treasury Department would insist upon a revision of the tax schedules at an early date, and the market swung quickly in favor of the sellers.

Just why Wall Street should assume that a postponement of the inevitable upward readjustment of taxes, with all of the uncertainties continued until December, justified higher prices for securities, and why it should have shown its fear of the new discussions now proposed, it is hard to understand. Whether the changes are to be made now, or not for some months, they are expected to apply to apply to 1918 earnings, and it would seem to be desirable to know the basis of the new taxes at as early a date as possible. It was made a matter of general complaint that the present taxes were not decided upon until near the end of 1917, when earnings and income had been largely disposed of.

In many issues the difference between the high and the final prices of the day yesterday ran as high as three points, indicating the extent to which professional operations were making quotations. Renewed talk of pools was heard in the early part of the session and buying on the expectation that a concerted effort was to be made in behalf of certain issues did not serve to steady the market. An extreme illustration of the purely speculative side of many transactions was supplied by American Sumatra, which advanced 12 points and promptly fell back just the same distance toward the close.

While trading was not heavy in the Government issues, the new Liberty 4¼s shaded off and established a new low price at 97.38. Call money was easy, loaning at 4½ per cent., and there was no disposition among bankers to look for any serious stringency in connection with the heavy tax payments soon to be made.

LONDON MARKET IS FIRM.

Derives Its Strength from Smallness of Stocks Available.

LONDON, May 24.—Money was in good supply today. Discounts were quiet.

The Stock Exchange maintains its firmness, deriving its chief strength from the anticipation of dividend reinvestments and the smallness of stocks available. Allied bonds were strong on an expected advance in the Government Blue Book rates.

Trading Firm on Paris Bourse.

PARIS, May 24.—Trading on the Bourse today was firm. Three per cent. rentes were quoted at 59 francs 75 centimes. Exchange on London was at 27 francs 15¼ centimes. The 5 per cent. loan was quoted at 87 francs 80 centimes.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

Call Loan Rates Move Up to 6%—Time Money Unchanged.

The opening and renewal rate for call loans yesterday was 4½ per cent., but later in the day brokers were obliged to pay 6 per cent. The closing quotation was 5¾. Rates for loans secured by industrial collateral were ¼ per cent. higher. The time money situation was unchanged; there appeared to be a considerable demand for funds, with only a limited supply available.

2% Semi-Annual Also Declared on Hocking Valley Stock.

Members of the Executive Committee of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Company declared yesterday the regular semi-annual dividend of 2 per cent. on the capital stock of the company, payable June 29 to stock of record June 7. A similar dividend of 2 per cent. was declared on the stock of the Hocking Valley Railway Company, payable June 29 to stock of record on June 14.

Both dividends would ordinarily have been declared by the Directors on May 17, but the matter was held up pending the approval of the Railroad Administration, to which it had been referred on May 10. Frank Trumbull, Chairman of the board, went to Washington in person this week and was informed, after going over the matter with the Railroad Administration, that there was no objection to the dividend.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Westinghouse's Big Orders.

The Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company entered its current fiscal year with $147,857,580 worth of business on its books, of which about 75 per cent. was in its regular line of products and the balance in munitions. The great expansion over the bookings a year before is reflected in a comparison of the amounts of orders for regular products. On April 1 last they amounted to $110,185,007, compared with $89,776,789 at the same date in 1917, and $22,097,995 on April 1, 1916. In recounting the result of the last year it was incorrectly stated in these pages yesterday that the aggregate of bookings on April 1, 1917, was $110,185,007.

Government Steel Demand.

Steel trade estimates state that the country's plants have been turning out ingots since May 1 at the annual rate of 43,000,000 to 44,000,000 tons. This production of basic material would indicate the manufacture of rolled products at the rate of about 33,000,000 tons a year, or 2,750,000 tons a month. If the estimate of 22,000,000 tons as the probable need this year of the United States and the European allies holds good, the mills have ahead eight months rolling at capacity to fill this demand.

Rapid Swings of Prices.

First, stocks improved yesterday under the feeling that additional taxation would not be considered at Washington at the present session of Congress; then they moved with great irregularity, as comment indicated two sets of opinions in respect to the date for renewed discussion of taxation, and finally the speculative issues dropped sharply when Washington dispatches foretold early action. The swings of quotations in Steel and a few other stocks supplied opportunity for nimble work by the floor traders.

Tobacco Acceptances Renewed.

The $25,000,000 6 per cent. ninety-day notes of the American Tobacco Company, issued under an acceptance credit arrangement, fall due on Monday, and will be renewed.

Liberty 4¼s Sell at 97.38.

The 4¼ per cent. bonds of the Third Liberty Loan made a new low record yesterday when they sold down to 97.38, which was also the closing quotation. The previous low price had been 97.50, established a few days ago. Yesterday's sales of the 4¼s amounted to $2,534,000. The Second 4s closed at 94.68, the low for the day; and the First 4s changed hands at 94.82, which was the low and last price. The Liberty 3½s were quoted at 98.96, but closed at 98.98.

Wall Street and Taxation.

W. J. Wollman & Co., in their fortnightly financial review issued last night, say: "Any legislation directed toward an increase of present taxes would be inopportune and liable to disturb business. The expenses of the United States for the first year of the war amounted to $12,000,000,000. Of this amount, $5,000,000,000 was advances to our allies, leaving $7,000,000,000 for our national war expenses. Out of this $7,000,000,000, according to present estimates, $4,000,000,000 will be paid through taxes. These large taxes and loans to our allies reflect our great national wealth, and in no warring country has the proportion of expenses raised by taxation been so large as here. There is, however, great danger in imposing tax burdens which might result in lessening the activities of the nation's industries and impairing the ability of the public, not only to pay taxes but also to subscribe to bond issues."

Regular A., G. & W. I. Dividend.

Directors of the Atlantic, Gulf & West Indies Steamship Company yesterday declared the regular 5 per cent. semi-annual dividend on the common, payable Aug. 1 to stock of record June 28. Nothing was heard about the 25 per cent. stock dividend, which various individuals possessed of calls on small blocks of the stock have been industriously predicting lately.

Foreign Ownership of Shipping.

One result of the Marine deal has been the revival of discussion among shipping men regarding the extent of international control of shipping; that is, the amount of stock of shipping companies of one country owned in another. There is little, if any, stock of any American shipping corporation outside the I. M. M. owned abroad, and similarly little, if any, stock of any British concern save the I. M. M.'s subsidiaries not in British hands, except concerns which are almost entirely brokerage companies, and only secondarily, if at all, engaged in actual operating. It is the general belief, however, that British holdings in Norwegian shipping are large, and there is a substantial American interest there also. On the other hand, German capital is believed to have a big, and since the war increasing, hold on Danish shipping interests.

Quick Action in Washington.

Frank Trumbull, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Chesapeake & Ohio, in announcing the declaration of the regular dividend yesterday, said he wished the impression corrected that the Railroad Administration had made a definite promise to state its attitude regarding the dividend by May 10, and had failed to do so. As a matter of fact, Mr. Trumbull said, he went to Washington Wednesday night and was able to get matters attended to in time to catch the 4 o'clock train back again. "You couldn't get business done any faster in New York," he declared.

Winding Up the Cotton Crop.

The rise in prices before the final May contracts were closed out on the floor of the New York Cotton Exchange yesterday was just mildly reminiscent of the highly painful experiences of the short interest with October, December, January, and particularly March contracts earlier in the season. It is the quality, more than the quantity, of what is left of the 1917 crop that is worrying the trade now. On the face of the returns there is a comfortable carry-over, but there is an increasing number of whispers that altogether too much of it is "bollies" and "linters," of no particular use except for swelling the ginning returns.

The First Airplane Stock Letter.

N. L. Carpenter & Co., who incidentally are moving at the end of this month from 17 William Street to 42 Exchange Place, are proudly displaying as a souvenir the first stock letter to customers to be sent by airplane post. The letter went from New York to the firm's Washington branch office on May 15, in the first sack of airplane mail ever carried on a regular route. The letter, incidentally, took a very optimistic view of the securities market.

Wins Flag for Singing.

Besides winning a 100 per cent. honor flag for subscriptions to the Third Liberty Loan and making a 100 per cent. record for contributions to the Red Cross, the employes of the Metropolitan Trust Company have received a handsome silk American flag for singing. During the recent loan drive there was organized a Liberty Chorus composed of employes of various banks and trust companies, department stores, &c. A great many rehearsals had to take place and a flag was offered to the group showing the largest percentage in attendance. The Metropolitan Trust Company was the winner.

THE COTTON MARKET

A sharp difference between the remaining old crop contracts and the new crop deliveries developed yesterday on the local cotton market. While the new crop months were fairly steady, and while strong wound up with quotations practically unchanged or only slightly advanced, a considerable demand for July developed, which resulted in that delivery selling at big advances nearly all day and closing 35 points up, with August 30 points over Thursday's close.

This phenomenon appeared to be partly due to apprehensions of the big short interest in July, excited by the fact that during the morning May contracts, which were written off at noon, were not nearly so plentiful as remaining shorts had hoped, and had to be bid for fairly well up. Another factor was a renewed trade demand even at advancing prices, and still another a growing belief that statistics showing a big prospective carry-over are misleading, because they do not show the unusually large proportion of unacceptable cotton in what is left of the crop. There are increasing numbers of stories of difficulties encountered by dealers in obtaining enough grade cotton, out of a mass of billies, to make deliveries, and spot reports yesterday were generally firmer.

The opening was firm, with advances of from 5 to 42 points on overnight buying orders, and at this stage October and December were proportionately as strong as July. The entire list receded on good weather and crop news, but when it did so, the new crop months stayed down while the shorts, covering urgently in May and July, competing with a few trade buyers, brought those positions back rapidly. July at one time was bid at 87 points above Thursday's close, or 24.32, but the new crop did not at any time get much above 50 points net higher. All deliveries sagged back after the May business was out of the way, but October and December went back faster than July, in which there still seemed to be shorts anxious to get out at the close.

There was some speculation as to the reports of seizures of various enemy cotton concerns by the Alien Property Custodian, but the opinion is that relatively little raw cotton is involved. The feature in spot markets was furnished by Houston, where 2,157 bales were sold at an advance of 135 points to 28 cents a pound. Houston had been relatively much lower than other spot markets of late. Several others reported fairly good business at about the same or higher levels. Exports yesterday were 43,503 bales.

QUESTION STOCK SALESMAN

Mahoney Says He Believed the Statements in Emerson Advertising.

The trial of the Emerson Motors Company, its officers, and the brokerage concerns which sold its stock, on a charge of having used the mails to defraud investors, was continued yesterday before Judge Manton of the Federal District Court. Joseph J. Mahoney, sales manager of Robert P. Matches & Co., one of the selling agents of the Emerson Company's stock, testified that he believed all of the statements made in the advertising literature prepared by the Emerson Company.

"I thought it was a good proposition," Mahoney said, "and if I had had money to spare I would have invested in the stock. Mr. Matches was enthusiastic about it."

Asked what prices the stock brought, he replied that the first allotment sold at $4 a share, the second at $5, and the third at $7. The witness said that both he and Mr. Matches had ridden in an Emerson car. Asked if he did not think there was something wrong about the company, he said that he did not, but confessed to feeling some disappointment when he visited the company's plant and found only four or five workmen, when he had been led to believe that the company had orders for 60,000 Emerson "fours." The trial will be continued today.

SELL ENEMY-OWNED SILK.

Bales of Japanese Production Are Disposed Of at Auction.

Horace O. Kilbourn, manager of the General Business Department of the Alien Property Custodian, sold at auction at 110 West Forty-second Street yesterday twenty-nine bales of raw Japanese silk. Nineteen bales, or 2,586 pounds, were sold to two purchasers—Mendlin & Roseman and Vivanti Brothers—at $6.67½ a pound. Vivanti Brothers bought nine bales of this amount and the other firm ten bales.

The remaining ten bales of the total quantity of silk disposed of were what is known in the trade as "thrown" silk; that is, refined from the raw into a partly manufactured state. All of the "thrown" silk was purchased by Vivanti Brothers at $3.12½ a pound.

CALLS FOR SILVER NOTES.

Philadelphia Reserve Bank Aids in Plan to Release Bullion.

The Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia has sent a letter to banks and trust companies in its district directing their attention to the Pittman act, recently passed by Congress, which provides for the melting down of 350,000,000 silver dollars now held in the Treasury, in order that the metal may be released for export and shipped abroad in the place of gold. The bank requests the institutions to send in their silver certificates of $5 denomination and upward.

"The withdrawal of silver certificates from circulation," says the Reserve Bank, "is not intended to be permanent, but is merely a temporary expedient to provide the bullion promptly, as the act provides that the Director of the Mint, as soon as practicable after a sale of silver bullion has been made, shall purchase a like quantity of silver to replace the bullion sold. To provide temporarily the necessary circulating medium during the withdrawal of the silver certificates and their subsequent reissue, when the silver supply has been replenished by purchases of silver, Federal Reserve Banks will issue Federal Reserve banknotes in denominations of $1, $2, $5, and upward. These notes will be obligations of the Federal Reserve Banks, secured by United States certificates of indebtedness, or United States bonds, and similar otherwise to national banknotes.

"We, therefore, request the banks of this district to co-operate with the Government by sending to us their present supply of silver certificates of the denomination of $5 and upward, which can be replaced in circulation at once by Federal Reserve notes, Federal Reserve banknotes, or United States notes. In a few weeks, when Federal Reserve banknotes of the $1 and $2 denominations are ready, a request will also be made for you to send in the silver certificates of these smaller denominations.

"Therefore, we will thank you to sort out your cash and forward to us, at our expense, all silver certificates of $5 denomination and upward which you may have on hand or receive from time to time, in return for which we will either furnish you, free of expense, other currency of the same or larger denomination, as you may prefer, or place the amount to your credit in this bank, or in any designated bank in this city."

The Federal Reserve Bank of New York issued yesterday a supplementary list of subscriptions to the Third Liberty Loan turned in by banks and trust companies of this city. Charles Garrison Meyer, Chairman of the Queens County Liberty Loan Committee, announced yesterday that the final figures showed that 108,111 of the 430,000 inhabitants of Queens had subscribed to $13,491,150 of bonds. This represents 309 per cent. of the county's quota. One out of every four men and women in Queens subscribed to the loan.

In the subscription table published in yesterday's TIMES, the Corn Exchange Bank was credited with $24,835,450, the same being the Federal Reserve Bank's figures for loan applications filed by the branches of the Corn Exchange in Manhattan, Brooklyn, and the Bronx. The actual total for the Corn Exchange Bank for all its branches in all five boroughs, is $27,875,650, which, added to $5,253,700, the par value of Liberty Loan "coupon books" sold by the bank, gives it a grand total of $33,129,350.

The People's Bank of 395 Canal Street advised THE TIMES yesterday that whereas the Federal Reserve Bank's figures credited it with subscriptions totaling $35,000, it had filed subscriptions amounting to $800,000. The People's Bank entered a subscription of $500,000 through the National Bank of Commerce and $300,000 through the United States Mortgage and Trust Company. The $35,000 reported in the Reserve Bank's table represents the People's Bank's initial installment on a participation of $107,000 in the association which issued the coupon books. In cases where one bank files its subscription through another institution, the Reserve Bank has no record of it, and consequently is unable to credit same to the bank supplying the original subscription.

SUMATRA COMMON ERRATIC.

Upward Swing of 10 Points Is Followed by Quick Decline.

The gyrations of American Sumatra Tobacco Company common stock in yesterday's market supplied an unusual contrast with the fairly orderly movements of other issues, and attracted much attention in the Street. Starting off at 135, the price was bid upward rapidly to 145, ignoring at times all but the largest fractions between sales. From the top figure a quick decline occurred, carrying the quotation down through the starting point to 133¼, where the final sale was recorded. At this price the stock showed a gain for the day of only ¼ of a point.

In recording this upward swing of 10 points and subsequent decline, nearly 30,000 of the 68,000 shares of outstanding stock changed hands. Last January the quotation was as low as 60¾, and in 1917 the minimum was 30.

After the close of the market the Stock Exchange firm of Tucker, Anthony & Co., one of whose members, W. A. Tucker, is a Director of the tobacco company, made this statement:

"A Director of the American Sumatra Tobacco Company who is fully conversant with the affairs of the company, states that it is his opinion a lot of people who knew nothing whatever about the merits of the company sold stock which did not belong to them, and are now finding great difficulty in purchasing the stock so that they can make delivery, which means, of course, on account of the appreciation in the price of the stock, that the shorts are in a state of panic.

"The company and its officers very greatly regret this situation, but, of course, it is one for which they are in no wise responsible."

There were rumors in the Street that one or two large lines of short sales in American Sumatra shares had been "covered" during the day at a heavy loss to the sellers. It is understood that the floating supply has always been small, the majority of the shares being in possession of a few wealthy men.

THE CONDITION OF TRADE.

The tightening influences of war demands on commercial lines are noted by the mercantile agencies this week as the paramount factors in the markets. Dun's Review says:

The stimulus imparted by the prospects of large crops, not only of grain but also of cotton, is less than it would be under normal conditions, as wartime economics are being more generally practiced and most branches of trade and industry are now dominated by Governmental necessities.

The effect of these requirements, which in many instances are of greater magnitude than was anticipated, is to cause sharper restrictions on civilian business, and that regular domestic and foreign transactions, measured by quantities, rather than by values, do not attain the previous maximum, current reports and statistics testify. The fact is that strictly commercial activities are being limited by the increasing pressure of needs in Governmental channels, and the centering of energies on war work, with the prospective shifting of men to the more essential occupations, can scarcely fail to impose further restraint on ordinary operations.

Payments through the banks, as reflected in bank exchanges at the principal clearing house centres of the United States, continue extremely heavy, record totals at numerous cities being the outstanding feature in this week's statement, which reveal an aggregate at all points of no less than $5,481,117,977, an increase of 10 per cent. over this week last year and of 51.4 per cent. as contrasted with the corresponding period in 1916.

Bradstreet's says:

Here and there one meets with evidence of conservative buying that is born of the fear that prices have ascended too far, and in connection with final distribution there are indications that the so-called wealthy classes are economizing. While manufacturing is characterized by superactivity, it is largely made up of war work, and more and more are deliveries of orders intended for the usual channels falling behind, and in consequence contracts are being accepted subject to the ability to get raw materials, as well as to turn out the finished product.

GIVES WARNING TO BANKERS

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 24.—Warning that in the matter of financing the nation has made but a "bare beginning," E. F. Passmore, Governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia, told the members of the Pennsylvania Bankers' Association at their closing session here today to prepare for still greater efforts. He hinted at a virtual conscription of banks and bankers who do not lend their full service to the Government in the stupendous task before it.

"The advances made in the concentration of the financial resources of this country since we have entered the world war are almost staggering," he said. "One of the most noticeable features of the Third Liberty Loan campaign was the wide distribution of the loan. It is my belief that when the final payments are made by subscribers the banks will be required to carry only a small part of the loan.

"By July 1 it is quite probable that the proceeds of the third loan and current tax payments will have been exhausted. Then the call for funds will come again, probably in greater amount than before. While the banks as a rule have responded heartily in the past, I cannot too strongly impress upon you the fact that every bank must do its duty to the nation to the utmost. Everything else must give way to the winning of the war. The country must depend upon its banking institutions. There is no group in whose patriotism we have greater reliance.

"But when you stop to think that if the banking system does not measure up to the nation's requirements the country will fail in the war program, you will realize why it may be necessary for the Government to apportion to the banks a fixed share of future loans to be carried or disposed of through their own efforts.

"The Government has no desire to take this step; it would much prefer that the banks should measure up to every emergency requirement through their own voluntary action. There is no more patriotic thing for you to do than to join the Federal Reserve system and thus help mobilize the financial resources of the nation upon a war footing."

UNITED STATES GOVT. BONDS

Inasmuch as most of the trading in the older issues of United States Government bonds is done over the counter, and not on the Stock Exchange, THE TIMES gives the following quotations, obtained from bond dealers:

LOANED $91,865,586.

Only $14,000 Overdue from Advances Made to Farmers.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—The twelve Federal Land banks have made loans to the amount of $91,865,586.20, according to a statement of condition for April 30, 1918, issued today by the Farm Loan Board. This date marks practically the close of the first year's business.

The capital stock of the banks has increased from $9,000,000 to $13,594,895, and farm loan bonds to the amount of $83,750,000 have been issued. The excess of expenses and interest charges over earnings amounted to $411,954.24, which is about 3 per cent of the capital. The loans include $68,675,561 at 5 per cent., and $23,190,025 at 5½ per cent. The total payments by borrowers overdue on April 30, amounted to less than $14,000, and more than half of this amount is only thirty days overdue. The amount ninety days overdue is $2,503.

It is stated that the excess of expenses and charges over earnings has been rapidly reduced during the last four months, as the volume of business increased. The figures represent practically twelve months expenses and six months receipts, as it was not until the banks had been in operation six months that they had any appreciable amount of receipts. The expenses include the cost of appraisal, and part of the costs of determination of title on additional loans to the amount of about $83,000,000, which have been approved but not yet closed.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

Selling pressure, developing in the final hour of an active market yesterday on the Consolidated Stock Exchange, caused a sharp reaction, and closing prices registered substantial declines in the general list. Gains were noted in a few stocks, but even in these the final quotations were far below the high levels of the session. The general course of the market throughout the day was irregular.

OIL DIVIDENDS $25,292,752.

Paid by Standard Group for Second Quarter of 1918.

Cash dividends declared by members of the so-called Standard Oil group of companies for the second quarter of 1918 amount to $25,292,752, compared with $26,483,747 in the first quarter. The Standard Oil Company of New Jersey has voted the largest single dividend, amounting to $4,919,916, or 5 per cent. on the stock, with the Ohio Oil Company second and the Standard Oil Company of California third. The declarations of these concerns are $3,600,000 and $2,494,333, respectively.

The decrease from the first quarter's total resulted from lower dividends by four of the pipe line concerns. In the second quarter last year the dividends of the group amounted to $26,428,232, according to a tabulation by Dow, Jones & Co., while in the first quarter of 1917 the stockholders received $23,097,688. Since the old Standard Oil Company of New Jersey was dissolved in 1912 the constituent members have disbursed $471,997,914.

COMMODITIES MARKETS.

WHEAT.

Recent reports on the condition of the growing wheat crop have been so universally favorable that the trade is beginning to feel that any change in the situation will of necessity be of a less promising nature. If the crop goes through to harvest without more than the usual amount of loss the chances are very bright for a yield such as has seldom been experienced.

RYE.

Market quiet. No 2 Western $2.11, cost and freight New York. Minneapolis market was 9c lower at $1.92.

CORN.

The corn market was steadier, closing ¼@⅜c net higher. The advance was due largely to covering, and was doubtless the result of some overenthusiasm on the selling side on Thursday's sharp break. The local cash market was irregular; kiln dried No. 3 yellow quoted at $1.81½; No. 4 yellow, $1.78½, cost and freight, New York.

The local cash market was quiet and unchanged; standard quoted at 81½@82c. PROVISIONS.

The provision market was weak under continued selling, prompted largely by a decline in the price of live hogs and by the attitude of the Government in regard to values. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 24,000; estimated for Saturday, 14,000; Kansas City received 6,000 and Omaha 10,000 hogs.

COFFEE.

There was further scattering liquidation in the market for coffee futures yesterday, but the offerings were light and prices ruled generally steady on trade buying, supposedly to cover hedges. Opening prices were unchanged to 1 point lower, with the market closing at a net advance of 1 to 3 points. The local spot market was quiet and unchanged at 8⅝c for Rio 7s and 10⅞@11¼c for Santos 4s. SUGAR.

Refiners are now melting sugar actively, and the distribution is more normal from practically all local refiners, the arrivals of raw supplies being more than ample to take care of all orders. Receipts and meltings at all ports last week showed a substantial increase, and with a slack demand stocks are gaining. The International Sugar Committee continues to purchase heavily of raw sugar, and reported 228,400 bags Cubas, late May, first half June shipment, at the fixed price of 4.985c, cost and freight.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 7,415 packages. The market is somewhat steadier on the high grades of fresh creamery, but secondary grades of table butter, ladles, and packing stock are dragging at generally easier prices. Creamery, higher than extras, a pound, 44¼@45c; extras, (92 score,) 44c; firsts, (88 to 91 score,) 41½@43½c; seconds, (83 to 87 score,) 37@41c; thirds, 35@36c; creamery, unsalted, higher than extras, 46@46½c; extras, 45@45½c; firsts, 42½@44½c; seconds, 38@42c; State dairy, tubs, finest, 43@44c; good to prime, 41@43c; common to fair, 35@40c; renovated, extras, 38@38½c; firsts, 36@37½c; lower grades, 32@35c; imitation creamery, firsts, 33@34c; ladles, current make, firsts, 31@32c; seconds, 30c; lower grades, 28@29½c; packing stock, current make, No. 1, 30c; No. 2, 29c; lower grades, 27@28½c.

EGGS.—28,947 cases. The market continues unsettled and irregular. There has been a fair movement under the heavy pressure to sell at easy prices, but there is still a liberal and rather excessive supply of average good and ordinary qualities pressing for sale at unimproved prices, a large part of the business in current packings ranging from 33c down to 30c, with undergrades of Southern lower. There is some scarcity of strictly fine Northern goods showing good, strong body, and suitable for the best class of trade, and there has been rather more demand for such than could be easily supplied at recent top quotations; slightly higher prices have been paid in instances, and quotations are widened to cover these sales. Dirties and checks continue very dull, pressed for sale and prices in buyers' favor. Nearby white eggs in fair demand, and while there is still a wide range in values, the highest qualities are rated steady to firm; much of the supply has to go in range of 37@39c, some seriously defective lots lower, but fine to fancy qualities are meeting a fair demand at 39@41c. Fresh gathered extras, a dozen, 36½@37c; storage packed, firsts, 34½@36c; regular packed, extra firsts, 34½@35½c; regular packed, firsts, 32½@34½c; seconds and poorer, 29@32c; fresh gathered dirties, No. 1, storage packed, 29@29½c; No. 1, regular packed, 29@29c; No. 2, and poorer, 26@28c; fresh gathered checks, good to choice, dry, 26@28c; under grades, 15@25c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby Western, hennery whites, fine to fancy, 39@41c; gathered whites, ordinary to fine, 36@39c; Western and Southern, gathered whites, 35@37c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby hennery browns, 38@39c; gathered browns and mixed colors, 35@37½c; duck eggs, 29@42c.

LABOR MEN ASK POLITICAL PLEDGES

League Will Only Support Candidates Who Agree to Its Demands.

LOYAL TO THE PRESIDENT

Postal Reforms, Increased Taxes, Government Ownership, and Old Age Pensions on List.

Candidates for office this Fall will receive copies of "demands" and will be asked to state their views upon the various questions of the day, as well as upon legislative matters, according to plans put forward yesterday at a meeting of the Labor League of New York in the Aldermanic Chamber at the City Hall. The league promises to support those candidates who favor its program and to work against those who oppose it. The "Federal program" of the league contains these provisions:

"Unconditional loyalty and support to President Wilson and his program for the prosecution of the war. A free press, untrammeled by the zone or district systems of distribution and excessive postal charges, and a pledge that Congressmen will use every effort to bring about a businesslike administration of the entire postal service, keeping in mind the necessity of increased wages for postal employes and a proper and scientific distribution of the proper charges of every branch of the service on a fair and equitable basis.

"Additional war revenues to be derived from income, inheritance, and excess profit taxes which should be graduated and substantially increased and their payment permitted in instalments; establishment of an adequate system of taking care of soldiers and sailors by immediate training of sufficient nurses, nurses' aids, and doctors, and, in addition, the establishment of training schools under the guidance of the Federal Board for Vocational Training, whereby soldiers and sailors will be provided with a training that will give them remunerative employment upon their return to private life.

"The Federal Government to provide a system of life insurance of all kinds; establishment of a nation-wide widows' pension system, and a Federal plan that will secure relief or promptly aid whenever required without dependence on private organized charity; candidates for Congress to pledge themselves to improve the Port of New York; Governors Island, when no loner needed by the army, to be turned over to New York City for a Summer resort and park for the people of this overcrowded city; Government ownership of railroads, telegraph and telephone systems, of the centralized coal mines and water power and other natural resources which by their nature are monopolies.

"Establishment of a universal eight-hour day, only citizens to be employed on public work directly or indirectly. A system of compulsory school attendance for all foreigners for a study of the American language, the American form of Government, American history, and true American ideals."

Among the things demanded in its "State program" are: Election by popular vote of all Judges with a provision for their recall; extension of State employment exchanges to all cities and State control of private employment agencies; immediate acquisition by the State of all transportation lines, electric, gas, and water power resources; extension of workmen's compensation law; establishment of State administered health insurance; erection and maintenance of a tuberculosis sanitarium in each county; old age pensions; election by popular vote of all local school boards and compulsory education; increase in salaries of members of the State Legislature; State supervision and accounting of all war charity subscriptions and expenditures, and active State and municipal co-operation with the Federal Government in providing for the care of dependent soldiers and sailors.

Health Commissioner Copeland pledged the resources of his department to protect labor from occupational diseases, impure sanitation, and to fight tuberculosis. Resolutions were adopted insisting that coal dealers of the city obtain and store coal to meet conditions next Winter. Resolutions were also adopted attacking B. B. Odell for his handling of the ice situation. The Hearst publications were indorsed and resolutions adopted denouncing attacks upon them. A movement for a uniform eight-hour day with an increased scale of wages for municipal department employes was urged, and the meeting ended with the request that all labor unions urge the hearty support of the "Win the War" labor day parade to be held under the auspices of the Central Labor Federation.

TO FEDERALIZE HIGHWAYS.

Automobile Association to Urge Uniform Control as a War Measure.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 24.—Because of the enormous increase of motor truck transportation and passenger car travel on account of war conditions, Directors of the American Automobile Association in session here today voted to urge upon Congress as a war measure a Federal uniform traffic law.

An enactment to harmonize regulations of the States in reference to weight of loads, registration of vehicles and operators and speed limitation is now being drafted for introduction in the near future.

George C. Diehl of Buffalo predicted that a practically universal demand for federalization of the highways of the nation in much the same way that railroads have been brought under Government control and regulation is inevitable as a result of the fact that the present haphazard highway system is breaking down under pressure.

Another committee reported that by Sept. 1 70,000 war trucks would have been delivered to the Atlantic seaboard under their own power from Western factories.

DENIES INTENTION TO KILL.

Miss Lusk Says Her Mind Is a Blank Regarding Shooting of Mrs. Roberts.

WAUKESHA, Wis., May 24.—Grace Lusk, after testifying that she could remember nothing regarding the killing of Mrs. Mary Newman Roberts, for which she is now on trial, was forced to admit on cross-examination today that she had sought to keep her relations with Dr. David Roberts secret for more than two years. During this period she admitted that she had warned the veterinary to be careful in talking with her on the telephone, that she had sent him letters in care of his secretary, that she had urged him to register under a fictitious name with her at a Chicago hotel, and that they had a mutual agreement that their letters should be unsigned and destroyed as soon as they were read.

Although she could remember nothing regarding the actual shooting of Mrs. Roberts and declared that she "never intended" to do it, she admitted that she had a clear recollection of events immediately before and after the tragedy. She declared that Mrs. Roberts had threatened to have her driven out of town, and had likened her to a dog and a woman of the streets.

In one letter Miss Lusk declared that she had not taken Dr. Roberts's pursuit seriously until she was slighted by Mrs. Roberts at a church affair, and "vowed to get even." In answer to questions she said that she had not meant this and had done nothing to "get even."

Miss Lusk will take the stand for the continuation of her cross-examination tomorrow.

AT ODDS OVER WAR CRIPPLES

Some Senators Oppose Rehabilitation Under the Education Board.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Rehabilitation of war-disabled soldiers by the Federal Education Board, as proposed in a bill by Senator Smith of Georgia to appropriate $2,000,000 for the purpose, drew opposition in the Senate today. Senator Ransdell of Louisiana read a letter from Surgeon General Gorgas, saying that there was ample authority for rehabilitation work by the army under laws already passed, and that placing the work in the hands of the Education Board would develop friction if representatives of the board began their work in military hospitals. Other Senators opposed the measure.

Senator Ransdell afterward admitted that the Surgeon General had agreed to withdraw his objection, although he had not changed his opinion.

Senator Kirby's amendment to extend the training to persons disabled in industry was rejected. The bill went over until tomorrow, when an amendment offered by Senator France of Maryland to place the administration of the measure under the Surgeon General will be considered.

A central and unified control for administering rehabilitation work was urged in resolutions adopted today by the National Education Association's Commission on the National Emergency in Education.

"Obviously," said the resolutions, "the War and Navy Departments, each through its Surgeon General's office, form the natural and most effective agencies in which should be concentrated authority * * * but acting under these offices should be representatives of such Federal agencies as the Bureau of Education and the Federal Board for Vocational Education and other agencies."

SUES FOR BEAR'S ATTACK.

Child Whose Scalp Was Clawed Seeks $50,000 Damages.

The New York Zoological Society was sued in the Supreme Court yesterday for 50,000 damages because a bear in the Bronx Zoo tore off part of the scalp of a 13-year-old girl, Blanche Guzzi. The complaint alleges that on Nov. 17 last while the plaintiff and several companions were playing near the bear cage a ball rolled under the cage and the plaintiff reached under to get it.

The bear seized her by the hair and the child could not be released until two sailors rushed up and cut off the bear's claws. The plaintiff was in Fordham Hospital for three months. While her scalp has healed the hair torn out by the bear will not grow again.

MISS STINSON IS DELAYED.

Engine Trouble Prevents Completion of Her Flight from Chicago.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., May 24.—After working all day with mechanics sent from Elmira, Miss Katherine Stinson, who smashed two American records in her flight from Chicago yesterday, had not entirely completed repairs to her machine, which was damaged in making a landing near this city. Engine trouble developed on tests today, due primarily to mud, which worked its way into the mechanism when the nose of the machine hit the field. The broken right wing was repaired and a new propeller was attached.

Miss Stinson hopes to be able to resume her flight to New York at 8 A. M. tomorrow, but until thorough tests are made in the morning the exact hour of her start will not be determined.

High Cost of Living Hits Consuls.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—The high cost of living in Chile recently prompted three Consular officers to offer their resignations, Secretary Lansing informed Congress today in asking for increased allowances for them, and also for officers of the United States court in China. The three Consular officers, Secretary Lansing said, have been persuaded to remain.

AIR MAIL WORKS SMOOTHLY.

Deliveries Made on Time, but Not as Speedily as with Liberty Motors.

The air mail service from Belmont Park yesterday was operated very smoothly and considerable mail was carried. Lieutenant Stephen Bonsal got away at 11:19 A. M. in a machine of the regular type, and though his time on the trip to Philadelphia was not quite so low as was made the day before with one of the new Liberty motors furnishing the power, he delivered his mail to the Washington carrier promptly, and the man from Washington delivered his mail to Lieutenant Culver, who flew with it to Belmont Park, arriving at 3 P. M.

Today it is probable that Liberty motors will again be put to use in the service.

Lieutenant Bonsal on the outgoing trip yesterday carried 158 pounds of mail, and Lieutenant Webb brought 80 pounds from Washington and Philadelphia.

Arizona Ratifies "Dry" Amendment.

The City Man who gained a Country Home and lost nothing

There were all forms of country pleasures at his very door. With the extra daylight saving hour to devote to them.

His apartment covered an entire separate wing—the full privacy of a country house.

Its living, sleeping and servants' quarters were entirely shut off from each other—yet compact and on one floor.

It had large, all outside rooms; 3 tiled baths; all night hall and elevator service; every high-class feature; the finest of construction and finish; select, desirable neighbors.

It was in a beautiful four-story building, surrounded by fine old trees and parked grounds; his children played around, healthy, protected, and contented.

It was 16 minutes from the heart of Manhattan—pleasant, uncrowded travel.

There were all forms of country pleasures at his very door. With the extra daylight saving hour to devote to them.

His apartment covered an entire separate wing—the full privacy of a country house.

Its living, sleeping and servants' quarters were entirely shut off from each other—yet compact and on one floor.

It had large, all outside rooms; 3 tiled baths; all night hall and elevator service; every high-class feature; the finest of construction and finish; select, desirable neighbors.

It was in a beautiful four-story building, surrounded by fine old trees and parked grounds; his children played around, healthy, protected, and contented.

my hope that increasingly, in the days to come, we may be enabled to prove our friendship in every substantial way. Sincerely yours,

WOODROW WILSON.

Hon. Charles E. Hughes, President, Italy-America Society, New York City.

Secretary Baker was introduced by Mr. Hughes as a man who could tell the audience what he himself had seen of the work that was being done by both the American and the Italian Armies. The Secretary in the early part of his speech mentioned the fact that "a transport"—he did not mention the name—had just been sunk, and there was a gasp throughout the auditorium.

From that time on the audience was comparatively quiet, apparently still worrying over the fate of friends and relatives on the high seas, until Mr. Barker's statement that American sanitary and technical troops in Italy were to be followed by fighting men to take their place in the line. Then there was a whirlwind of applause, which came back again and again, when he expressed America's determination for complete victory.

Secretary Baker said in part:

Secretary Baker's Address.

"I tender the greetings of the American Army to their associates and fellows in the army of Italy. I tender, if I may venture, the greeting of the American people to the people of Italy as their fellow-workers in the great task of rescuing civilization from the most menacing assault made upon it within the memory of living man.

"I recently had the high privilege of visiting the entire front from the English Channel to Venice. I saw the superb and veteran armies of Great Britain, France, and Italy; I saw the heroic associates which our own army was to fight with, and I had then, as I have now, a sense of stirring and rising pride in the feeling that this increasing number of ships which cross the sea and carry America's great and splendidly equipped and prepared army, will carry men worthy to be classed with those heroes, and that they will find heroes worthy of their fellowship.

"The American Army must travel 3,000 miles across the sea. It has to court dangers which are peculiar to this war. Even tonight I learn that a transport carrying soldiers has been lost, but I am happy to tell you with slight loss of life. As yet I don't know the exact, but it is said to be slight. And that message calls very vividly to my mind the picture of that submarine infested sea as the American sailor and the American soldier must face it, not only the accustomed perils of the deep, but the unaccustomed perils; no longer the open adversary, but the covert, stealthy, unseen, skulking adversary. And I saw at the other end of that journey the superb behavior of the American Navy, guardian of this transportation. And it fills me with happiness to be able to have Americans appreciate the gallantry, the self-sacrifice, the daring and the success of the American Navy. And it fills me with happiness, too, to be able to say with confidence and assurance that the submarine is growing less and less a peril of the deep; that we are mastering that viper by the ingenuity of our sailors."

Americans Now in Italy.

"Already there are in Italy representatives of America. The Red Cross is there, carrying the message of our heart and of our head to Italy; the Young Men's Christian Association is extending its work there, the American Army is already represented in Italy by a large and important staff of experts, who are studying Italian methods of warfare, and we have sent to Italy a substantial number of our army's Sanitary Corps, so that we have doctors and nurses of the American Army already there. But I see, and it is not a distant future, American infantry, American machine gun units, and American artillery, shoulder to shoulder with the Italians on their front line. [Great applause.]

"And the value of that lies, not so much in any military assistance which we may give; that, of course, will be in proportion to the number there; but the value of it lies in that it will make of that portion of the line what the French portion now is, a composite of the civilized nations of the world. English, French, Italian, and American, fighting together with a community of interests, a community of sacrifice, a common determination and a common courage, in order that they may secure a common victory for the benefit of all mankind.

"Our enemy in this contest, particularly the German Empire, desired to exchange an honorable place in the family of nations for what it impudently called a place in the sun. She has her place in the sun. She is standing out now under the full glare of the analyzing sunlight of civilized opinion, and it exhibits her ugly and detestable in her international vices and relations. [Applause.] It is fortunate for mankind that she has stepped into the sun. We have learned at least one kind of civilization which we must beware of, and we have learned the importance of carrying this great contest through to a place in which we can dictate, not the way the German people shall conduct their lives, nor the forms of government which they may elect to have over themselves, but dictate their behavior in the family of nations, their observance of sacred treaty rights, and the humanitarian consideration which must be observed if civilization is to continue at all.

History's Motives Invariable.

"History probably never repeats itself, but the motives of history are always the same. When Deborah sang her song she said, 'The stars in their courses fought against Sisera.' When the story of this war is written as a completed thing, the poet who sings that epic will repeat that phrase. The German Empire busily engaged itself for forty years in quenching every liberal impulse, in cementing the rule of a tyrannous and autocratic Government upon the minds of its people in cunningly and lavishly accumulating force for the conquest of the world.

"Everybody else seemed to be busy about the things of civilization and light and leading, and trying to make life more beautiful and more equable, more just, more happy; and it looked as though the world had left to Germany alone the task of thus brooding and preparing so terrific a blow. And yet, if one analyzes even with our present knowledge, the things that were going on in the world, it will be found that the stars too were busy preparing in their courses to fight against Germany.

"When Cavour brought about the unification of Italy, it was not merely that Italy might be one, but it was that the forms of parliamentary government and true liberty might be established in that country, and when he was besought to yield something to Austrian aristocratic and autocratic pretensions, he said: 'I cannot go back upon the principles by which I have always lived. If any veil is to be put upon the statute of liberty, my hand cannot put it there.' [Applause.]

"In Italy there was this growth of liberal feeling and love of liberty. In England and France and among ourselves, although we were not conscious of it, yet into our being was being bitten, as though by acid, an appreciation of the fact that all that we have, that we value in our institutions, is based upon the liberty of the people. And so when Germany had thus accumulated this volcanic strength with which she expected to burst upon the rest of the world and conquer it, and she made her stroke, it was found that there was in England, in France, in Italy and in the United States so deep a common love of liberty that their association as allies was easy, and the usual weaknesses of coalitions disappeared. We are not four nations seeking separate national objects; but we are four parts of the civilized world united to preserve the world's highest possession.

"Your Excellency, I must not allow myself to trespass upon the patience of this generous audience longer, but upon this day we celebrate the fact that Italy has for three years bravely faced the sacrifices which this war entails. On behalf of the American people and the American Army, we send you grateful messages, we acclaim you among the preservers of civilization, and we ask no higher privilege for the American Army, which is increasing rapidly in numbers on the shores of Europe, than that it may share the triumph of this occasion with the French, the British, and the Italian veterans, and that when this war is over the same liberal, liberty-loving principles which have animated us as allies in the war may unite us firmly and permanently as the protectors of a just and permanent peace throughout the world."

The Secretary's promise of American troops in Italy met with a dramatic supplement as he finished speaking. There came forward a delegation from "La Giovane Italia"—"Young Italy," a society of Italian-Americans, who presented to him an American flag which the Secretary promised to give to the first fighting unit of American troops to be sent to the Italian front.

The demand for complete victory had been made already by Mr. Hughes in his speech that opened the meeting, and his declaration, "Allies we are and allies we shall remain," brought the audience to its feet in a roaring tumult of cheers, with American and Italian flags waving everywhere. Mr. Hughes said in part:

Mr. Hughes's Speech.

"We are met to celebrate the entrance of Italy into the war. On this anniversary it is the heart of America that speaks to the people of Italy. The entrance of Italy into the war was the victory of the Italian people voicing emphatically and unmistakably the national will. As you well remember, the fate of liberty and of civilization had hung in the balance at the battle of the Marne, and Sept. 9, 1914, will ever be a sacred day in the annals of free peoples.

"Germany thought swiftly to conquer France, when France almost alone was bearing the terrific onslaught of that first great offensive; but the strategy of Joffre and the marvelous intuition and initiative of Foch checked the German drive and gave a breathing spell which enabled the armies of civilization to gather—those armies which Germany has found to be unconquerable. And so France saved the day on Sept. 9, 1914, when France represented the hope of mankind. But that was not a triumph; that was only a check. The enemy was still determined, the enemy recovered himself and stood unvanquished, and there were to be other fateful days. We celebrate tonight the next fateful day of the war after the battle of the Marne. The German military power has been supplemented by German intrigue, and never in the history of the world has there been such devilish ingenuity in intrigue and in the development of military power to the disregard of every honorable and humane sentiment. German intrigue sought its victory, but German intrigue failed in Italy. German intrigue failed in Italy because the Italian people love liberty and unity. When on May 15, 1915, the people thronged the streets of Rome voicing an inflexible determination they decreed the doom of Germany's insane ambition.

Italy's Achievements in War.

"That procession of 150,000 people in the streets of Rome was not a spectacle. It was a message from the spirit world, of Garibaldi and Cavour. It was the voice of the Italian people, liberty loving, intent upon freeing themselves of the menace of an old time oppression. It was the expression of a determination that Italy should take her place alongside of France and Great Britain to rid the world of the menace of brute force, and create and make secure a new international order where public law—public law inspired by the common sentiments of justice and of liberty—should forever be supreme. It is that decision that we celebrate tonight. Three years ago tonight, following the declaration of war, Italian soldiers were climbing the precipices of Dalmatia to make their first assault. And then followed those prodigies of Italian valor amid almost inaccessible heights. Guns were placed at strategic positions, taken and held where formerly only the most expert Alpinists had dared to go. We have appreciated altogether too little in our appraisements of the achievements of this war what Italy has accomplished.

"We give our unstinted praise to France for that indomitable spirit, that unquenchable fire, that great strength which holds France, after her serious losses, along that line that bends and never breaks, and we admire the extraordinary accomplishments of Great Britain, starting with a little, contemptible army and bringing into the field her millions. There, Americans, is the security of our great Republic, in the courage of those men along the frontiers of France and Italy—France, Great Britain, and Italy, and, happily, now joined by the United States, but before so joined there was the security of American liberty.

"We have given our praise to France and Great Britain, we must give the just meed of praise to the extraordinary accomplishments of Italy; for following that fateful day of which this was the anniversary there was achievement after achievement, which must forever hold high place in the records, not only of daring and exploits, but of the most efficient organization in connection with the history of this war. Very fortunately, in the months between August, 1914, and May 24, 1915, there had been very vigorous and efficient preparation under General Cadorna. Italy did not have a plethoric treasury, there were obvious limits to the resources that could be drawn upon, but Italy had skill. Italy had efficiency in engineering—her fortifications, her emplacements—in mountain artillery, in transportation; very rapidly she made great achievements in aviation. There was scarcely any lost motion.

All Have Loved Italy.

"Oh, we have all loved Italy. We dwell in the fondest memory upon her sunny shores and her fruitful slopes, that land of enchantment where nature has been so bountiful of her best. We think of our indebtedness to Roman eloquence, to Roman literature, to Roman law, to Roman art. Oh, we have loved Italy and admired Italy, but today is the best of all Italian days, when the Italian people, ably represented, also very effectively represented by the hardy and intrepid Italian soldier, worthy descendant of the most famous warriors of history. In this day, the best of all is—and therefore it is the best of Italian days—that the Italian people, with unsurpassed fortitude and vigor, are meeting the pressure of this great crisis with absolute determination to see this war through.

"And so tonight, celebrating this anniversary, we send our messages of love, of admiration, of good cheer, of sympathy, and of the highest respect: 'Allies we are and allies we shall remain, God bless you, until the world is rid of the curse of the worship of brute force; allies we are, and allies we shall remain until we have a new world in which treaties are sacred, in which peace is lasting because secured by a sentiment of justice, backed by the force and resources of these united friends and protectors of civilization.'"

The Italian Ambassador was introduced by Mr. Hughes as the honorary President of the Italy-America Society. In a brief speech he pictured the United States and Italy as two nations welded into complete union by mutual admiration and sympathy as well as by fellowship in a great cause. He called America "Italy's great friend" and her "powerful sister in arms," and said that President Wilson's message to the King of Italy would be engraved on the hearts of all Italians. He continued:

"More than once in the history of our countries, our communion of ideals has asserted itself quietly but firmly. We like to think of Benjamin Franklin, envoy extraordinary of the United States of America, to the venerable Republic of Venice in the last years of her millennial existence. We like to think of Abraham Lincoln, who prayed to God that the cause of Italian nationality might triumph over its enemies who were then, as they are now, the enemies of civilization. And we like to think of the assistance which our own Italian Red Cross, soon after its establishment in the early '60s, offered to the United States, then engaged in the civil war; a courtesy which is repaid to us today with touching generosity by the American Red Cross on the common battlefields.

"Three years ago a nation that had been waiting for its hour to strike rose as one man from the Alps to Sicily, from her eastern to her western sea, to vindicate the rights that were being trampled upon, and to claim her unredeemed brothers who were crying for help. Victory smiled for three years on our army which was renewing the deeds of valor of ancient Rome.

"Then the enemy concentrating treason and violence in the offensive on the front brought upon us a reverse, though not a defeat. The army and nation rallied soon after the blow. The army and the nation, united today in a real spirit of sacrifice, take up once more the heritage of national feeling in the solemn promise never to lay down their sword while a bit of Italy remains enslaved, or until the motherland be made one from the Alps to the sea, in political unity as well as in unity of heart, language, and feeling, within the boundaries that nature has assigned to her and the sacrifice of her sons has consecrated.

"We are giving today of our heart and our blood wherever the soldiers of Italy are called upon to co-operate in the liberation of the threatened world. We rejoice in being hailed by you as fellow-workers in this work for civilization and fellow fighters in the fight for which our common battles are being waged and our common victories must be won."

After Count Macchi di Cellere had finished Mr. Hughes read the following telegram from Lord Reading, the British Ambassador:

"I should like on the inspiring occasion of the anniversary of the entrance of Italy into the war to send a message of good-will to your Excellency as the representative of that great country which is sharing the burdens and stresses of the war. We are at one with Italy in the firm resolve to carry on this war to a victorious issue.

"Your soldiers are standing shoulder to shoulder with ours and with those of our gallant allies and of the great Republic whose hospitality we enjoy, all inspired with the same determination to fight on until the world has been freed from the menace of military despotism."

The speeches, however, had merely whetted the temper of the audience and filled it with enthusiasm for the real business of the evening, the songs by some of the foremost artists of the world; and the only thing that marred the program from that time on was the frantic effort of the crowd to make Italy's other Ambassador Extraordinary, Enrico Caruso, break the rule of the evening which decreed that on account of the length of the program there would be no encores. He was called back again and again after finishing his solo, "Una furtive lagrima" from "L'Elisir d'Amore," and his duet with Scotti later on brought almost as much applause. Next to Caruso, Martinelli was perhaps the favorite.

Kathleen Howard gave the first of the musical numbers, "A te questo rosario," from "La Gioconda." Then came Martinelli in "Che gelida manina," from "La Bohème"; Claudia Muzio in the Ballatella from "Pagliacci"; Giuseppe de Luca in the "Largo al factotum" from the "Barber of Seville," and Caruso's solo, the last number before a long intermission.

The second part was opened by the "Garibaldi Hymn," "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," the "Marseillaise," and "God Save the King," done by the Metropolitan orchestra and chorus, with Caruso, Scotti, Martinelli, Amato, and de Luca lined up in the front row of the chorus, singing jovially.

Then came Frances Alda in "In quelle trine morbide" and the gavotte from "Manon Lescaut," followed by Amato in "Eri tu," from Verdi's "Ballo in Maschera."

Anna Case was to have had the next number, but, since she was indisposed, Mme. Alda volunteered to fill the breach. Before singing again, however, she set to work as an auctioneer, and eventually raised $3,000 for the all-star program. Then she sang "Un bel dì," from "Madama Butterfly," and was followed by Caruso and Scotti in the duet, "Solenne 'n quest'ora," from "La Forza del Destino." All of which, according to the compilers, presented a complete cycle of the more famous Italian operas; and it was topped off by Mamelli's Italian Fighting Hymn, by the Metropolitan orchestra and chorus. The conducting during the evening was done by Moranzoni, Papi, and Setti.

During the intermission Italian flags were passed out to everybody in the boxes, but already many in the audience had them and waved them vigorously. American and Italian flags were draped over a portrait of King Victor Emmanuel above the stage and the colors of the two nations were combined in the other decorations. A score of girls sold flowers and programs through the corridors for the benefit of the Italian Red Cross.

Italian Exhibition Opened.

The Italian War Exhibition, which will be on display in the concert hall of Madison Square Garden from 2 to 11 every day through June 7, was formally opened yesterday afternoon to an assemblage of invited guests by Count V. Macchio di Celere, the Italian Ambassador.

One of the most notable features is the collection of relics from the Austrian submarine U-12, sunk in August, 1916, and raised last June. The bow of the submarine, scarred and rusted, is shown, as well as its ensign, its deck guns, and a torpedo which it had vainly fired at an Italian warship before being sunk. Photographs of the submarine after being raised are displayed inside the bow.

Italian guns of all types from anti-aircraft weapons to the heaviest howitzers and siege guns are shown in models, as well as some of the latest types of Italian torpedo craft and submarines. There are photographs of battleships, torpedo boats, and pontoon gunboats in action; floating mines captured from the Austrians, as well as those of the type laid by the Italians. Trench mortars and bombs are well represented, and the effects of artillery fire are shown by the assembled fragments of an Italian field gun on which an Austrian battery scored a direct hit. One of the trench mortars—a captured Austrian piece of 5½ inches calibre—did so much damage to the Italian troops at Pallevo, near Plava, before it was taken that it became known as "the devil of Pallevo." There is a folding bicycle of the type used by the Bersaglieri, and a big display of intrenching tools, models of wire entanglements, machine guns, gas masks, grenades, and other implements of trench fighting.

A distinguished company of military and civilian guests was present yesterday afternoon when the Ambassadorial party appeared to open the exhibition. The Ambassador was welcomed by William Fellowes Morgan, as representative of the Italy-America Society, who spoke of the purpose of the organization to draw the two nations closer together and promote in each a better understanding and appreciation of the other. "The President of the United States," he said, "has called attention in his proclamation to the great services rendered to the cause of the Allies by the great nation which you represent. Today two of the American ships which are being launched to beat the submarine receive the names of Italian heroes—his Majesty Vittorio Emanuele III. and Garibaldi. These official acts merely represent in an official way the love for your great nation which is in the hearts of the hundred million people of America."

"All Italy is touched," said the Ambassador, "by what the President of the United States and the whole American people have expressed. It is a pledge of common action against the common enemy, and we are proud to fight side by side with the glorious American Army. We are fighting today where twenty centuries ago the Roman eagles led the way against the same barbarian foe. Today the American eagles are beside the Roman eagles; Italy, the oldest nation, and America, the youngest, join hands. Some of our troops are already sent to fight beside yours in Picardy and Flanders, and it is to every Italian a source of joy that our armies are fighting with America."

The exhibition is given under the auspices of the Italy-America Society. The committee in charge is Mrs. G. Granata, Chairman; Chevalier J. Di Giorgio, S. Di Giorgio, Commendatore L. Solari, A. Portfolio, and F. L. Frugone. During the fortnight of the exhibition days are to be set aside for organizations and societies and there will be a speaker of prominence each evening. Among those who have been invited to speak are Colonel Roosevelt and President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia University.

Flower Parade in Fifth Avenue.

The ceremonies of the day began with an automobile flower parade down Fifth Avenue, in which some fifty cars, each driven by a chauffeuse of the National League for Women's Service, carrying American and Italian women and loads of flowers contributed by a number of florists and owners of private gardens, drove down the avenue and thence through the Italian quarters, distributing the flowers to persons along the way. Under the command of Captain Adelaide B. Bayliss of the National League for Women's Service the party left Fifth Avenue and Sixty-first Street shortly before noon and drove down to the Washington Arch. As the cars passed along the avenue flowers were thrown out to the crowds along the sidewalks, and many girls went about among the crowds, both in Fifth Avenue and in the financial district, distributing boutonnières.

In the parade one of the most striking displays was that made by two large touring cars belonging to Mrs. S. Carlo Ceribelli, decked with American and Italian flags, twined with carnations, roses, and lilies of the valley. In the centre of each car was a large floral bell, and in the rear a parasol of flowers in the Italian colors. Mrs. Ceribelli and her guests, who included Mrs. W. D. Hutton, Mrs. R. H. Kingston, Mrs. M. L. Everett, Mrs. G. B. Clark, Mrs. Charlotte Koch, Mrs. Howard Holt, and Mrs. Carol Pfeister, all wore Bersaglieri hats.

In the following car were Lina Cavalieri and Lucien Muratore, who flung flowers to the right and left as they went down the Avenue. Others in the parade were Mrs. W. A. Kissam, Mrs. William Taylor, Miss Fayle, Miss M. Frugone, Mrs. J. Robinson Duff, Mrs. H. Curtiss, Mrs. F. Geril, Mrs. J. Di Giorgio, Mrs. Ernest Tyler, Mrs. Dorothy Benjamin, Mrs. Raoul, Mrs. Almeondo Rorificline, Mrs. J. H. Lancashire, Mrs. Kingdon Gould, and Lieutenant C. V. Childs of the National League for Women's Service.

Caproni Drops Message, Autos Scatter Flowers, and Bands Play National Airs.

Italy-America Day was celebrated with much festivity yesterday in the Italian quarters south of Washington Square, in East Harlem, and on the east side. Flags hung everywhere, bands and hurdy-gurdies played the national airs, and the streets were full of people in festal array. The automobiles which passed through the lower west side scattering flowers had many competitors in flower vendors on the sidewalks, and the bright weather gave a general festal air to the scene. For the bulk of the population the demonstration at night in Washington Square was the centre of the celebration, but there were many who participated in impromptu affairs elsewhere.

A huge Caproni biplane, one of the great Italian machines which have done so much work over land and sea, circled the city yesterday and dropped more than 100,000 circulars, which told Italy's position in the war.

The day was celebrated on the lawn of Bellevue Hospital with a May Day fete given by the Social Service Bureau in co-operation with the hospital. About 2,000 persons were present, including many patients who were able to leave their beds; those less fortunate were brought out upon the balconies where they could see the festivities.

Italians and Americans of Italian descent joined in celebrating Italy-America Day at a mass meeting held last night in Washington Square under the auspices of the Italian Section of the Four-Minute Men. Shortly after the meeting began the enthusiasm of the audience rose to such heights that those on the outskirts of the crowd began to shove forward violently toward the hastily constructed grandstand.

Just as the railings of the stand began to break beneath the pressure a part of the floor collapsed with a loud noise, and a slight panic followed, in which persons who had fought to enter the stand appeared equally eager to get out of it. Frederick C. Ackerman of Lyndhurst, N. J., an electrician, was the only one injured. He was taken to St. Vincent Hospital, but his injuries were slight.

General Emilio Guglielmo as special representative of the Italian Embassy, spoke on the close ties of friendship and blood and mutual interests that bound the United States and Italy together in the struggle against autocracy.

"Italy really saved France," General Guglielmo said, "by guaranteeing that she would remain neutral at the time when the battle of the Marne was being fought, thereby relieving France of the necessity of maintaining an army of 500,000 men at the Franco-Italian frontier."

Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, who had been asked to speak, sent a note which was read by Captain Francesco M. Guardabassi of the Italian Army, saying that he regretted he was unable to attend and predicting that Italy would be able to finish the great work of Garibaldi and Cavour and would obtain the Italian-speaking provinces of Austria.

Prince Emanuele Messini-Petruzzelli, who accompanied General Guglielmo, spoke of the great feeling of admiration and friendship of the Italians toward President Wilson. He said that among many Italians President Wilson was considered the greatest living man. E. Paul Yaselli, Chairman of the meeting, said that collections taken up by Red Cross workers among the crowd and contributions handed in by various Italian societies probably amounted to $5,000.

KING OF ITALY SENDS MESSAGE TO PRESIDENT

Rejoices in the Brotherhood in Arms of Italians and Americans.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—President Wilson today received from King Victor Emmanuel of Italy the following message on the occasion of the third anniversary of Italy's entrance into the war:

"On the occasion of Italy's entrance into the war, which your country is commemorating, I have the pleasure of sending to you, Mr. President, and to the American people my warm greetings and those of the Italian nation. It is now three years since Italy unsheathed the sword in the defense of the same ideals to which the mighty North American Republic later brought the powerful aid of its moral and physical support.

"The conscience of the nation rebelling against any attempt to overwhelm, no matter whence it might come, drove Italy to the side of the peoples who are fighting for the sacred principles of right which we want to have embodied in the liberation of our brothers laboring under the foreign yoke and in the vindication of our legitimate right to live in safety, without which no stable peace can be secured for the future.

"On the fields of battle in France the brotherhood of the North American and Italian armies has found its consecration. May this be a happy augury of the ever closer collaboration for the future of the two peoples on the active path of civic progress."

Count Macchi di Cellere, the Italian Ambassador, received today the following cable from Admiral del Bono:

"On this day, when we celebrate the third anniversary of our entry into this terrible war, which has been forced upon the world by the imperialistic aims of our common enemy, I am proud to confirm, in the name of the Italian Navy, our solid sentiments of fraternity and faith to the glorious navy of the United States, coming into the field, as we did, for the defense of national liberty and of the supreme rights of peoples.

"I beg you to address my best wishes to the brave men who are fighting under the flag of the powerful North American fleet, which is allied in the heroic struggle and silently co-operates with the brothers of the allied fleets in order to hasten the victory, protecting the shipping from the insidious warfare of the submarines and conserving to the Entente the dominion of the ocean."

Another telegram from Rome says:

"The Italian newspaper La Tribuna devotes the entire front page to the initiative taken by President Wilson to commemorate Italy's entry into the war. The newspaper says:

"'Wilson does not confine himself to being honorary patron of the celebration, but has taken active part in sending messages in which he expresses the ideals and aims of Italy in the war and calls the attention of the American people to Italy's heavy sacrifice, heroically endured for three long years, and to the brave struggle of her army. He also calls attention to the efforts, not less brave, of the civil population, which has shown great fortitude in defeat, as it has shown modesty in victory.'

"The Tribuna concludes by expressing Italy's great admiration and affection for President Wilson and for the American people and for the loyalty and cordiality with which America has extended her assistance to Italy.

"The commanders of the Czecho-Slovak Corps in the Italian Army replied to the invitation to participate in the Rome celebration as follows:

"'The hearts of the Czecho-Slovak groups in Italy are profoundly moved with joy at the invitation to take part in the demonstration to celebrate Italy's day.'

284,114 WOMEN ENROLL IN CITY; MANY STAY AWAY

MANHATTAN'S AVERAGE LOW

Only Two Recorded to an Election District in Three Hours —Bronx Lower Still.

ARE APATHETIC UP-STATE

Enrollment Lighter Than Expected In All Cities Except Buffalo and Rochester.

Complete returns from yesterday's enrollment of women in this city showed that 284,114 of the newly enfranchised voters had qualified for participation in the primaries of either the Democratic, Republican, Socialist, or Prohibition parties in the five boroughs. The figure was far from encouraging to the leaders of woman suffrage organizations and women who had identified themselves with the work of the political organizations in the capacity of leaders in their women's divisions.

In no district did the number of women enrolled exceed or even equal the number of men enrolled. In a majority of the districts the enrollment was less than one-half that of the men. The grand total of last year's enrollment of men was 625,209. Brooklyn did better than the other boroughs. The totals for the five boroughs in yesterday's enrollment were as follows:

Brooklyn	114,937
Queens	29,636
Richmond	5,493

Miss Mary Garrett Hay, Chairman of the New York City Woman Suffrage Party, said last night after the enrollment had been completed, but before returns had been received, that she was well satisfied with the way the women had taken advantage of their first opportunity to become vital factors in the management and activities of the political parties.

"I feel quite confident that my estimate that 50 per cent. of women enrolled would come out and do so will be verified," said Miss Hay.

Miss Helen Varrick Boswell, head of the Women's Division of the New York County Republican Committee, said she was pleased, too. She expressed the opinion that the number of Republican women enrolling would run as high as 60 per cent. of the total number enrolled.

Samuel S. Koenig, Chairman of the Republican County Committee, said that he thought the Republicans had done very well in yesterday's enrollment. He had no comment to make on the statement made by some of the Republican women leaders that their men associates throughout the districts had not been as helpful in getting women to come out and enroll as had the Tammany leaders in the activities of the women identified with the leadership of Tammany's Woman Division.

Tammany Hall was dark at an early hour last night. Estimates by some of the Tammany leaders placed the number of Democratic women who had enrolled as high as 50 per cent.

The men leaders were anything but displeased with the result. To them the advent of women as factors in primary elections was not welcome. In the first place they held it would materially increase the cost of primaries and the conduct of political organizations in general without affording to the leaders any adequate return.

In the second place it would increase in proportion to the number of women enrolled, the uncertain element in primaries which political leaders in general dread more than anything else, because it would reduce the opportunities for manipulation in which the strength of the political boss lies. In the third place it would mean that women would enter the political arena as contestants with men for places on party committees, affording them opportunities to materially interfere with the smooth working of the political machines.

Republican State Chairman George A. Glynn was in town most of yesterday and watched the progress of the enrollment from the headquarters of the committee in West Thirty-ninth Street. He was in touch with Chairman Koenig of the New York County Republican Committee and Public Service Commissioner F. J. H. Kracke, who is leader of one of the Republican factions in Brooklyn —the one friendly to Governor Whitman, off and on during the day.

He was keenly and visibly disappointed at the light early returns, but would make no comment. Governor Whitman in his aspirations for a third term had built strongly on a big woman vote in the Republican primaries in this city to offset any lead that Attorney General Merton E. Lewis and Speaker Sweet of the Assembly, rivals for the Republican nomination for Governor, may obtain in the primary vote upState.

Up the State the officials refused to give out any figures that showed the enrollment result, insisting that they are prohibited by law from making these figures public before June 15. In this city, however, the election officials say they have found a section of the law which permits them to give the figures.

Enrollment Light Everywhere.

Reports from all sections of the city during the first hours indicated an exceedingly light enrollment everywhere. These reports showed that in the 782

Wrote Roosevelt in Hospital, and Colonel Responded Glowingly—Early Meeting Likely.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—Theodore Roosevelt, ex-President of the United States, and William H. Taft, ex-President of the United States, have buried the hatchet. The particular hatchet has been above ground and waving in the air for the greater part of the last six years, and for about two years prior to that time showed signs of getting into action. The troubles between the two ex-Presidents have not been adjusted in a way to justify the statement that they have resumed, or will resume, their former relations of cordial intimacy, but a basis of understanding has been reached, and it is certain that if they should meet face to face the greeting would be of a mutually happy character.

Colonel Roosevelt and Mr. Taft have not met on cordial terms since the Spring of 1912. They sat near together at the funeral of Whitelaw Reid in New York and are said to have shaken hands in a perfunctory way on that occasion. They met also at a get-together rally at the Union League Club in New York just before the close of the late Presidential campaign, when Charles E. Hughes was the Republican candidate for President. At that time they shook hands, but there was nothing to show that they had done so out of anything more than mere politeness.

Rumors that they had made up their differences are now confirmed. The initiative was taken by Mr. Taft at the time last Winter when Colonel Roosevelt was seriously ill in Roosevelt Hospital. Mr. Taft sent him a telegram expressing hope for his speedy and complete recovery. When he recovered Colonel Roosevelt, it was learned tonight, sent Mr. Taft a telegram of thanks, saying in it that it was the first he had sent to anybody who had expressed sympathy with him in his illness. Colonel Roosevelt followed this with a letter, again thanking Mr. Taft and inclosing the draft of a speech which Colonel Roosevelt was to deliver in the Maine political campaign.

Mr. Roosevelt asked Mr. Taft to read the speech and make suggestions, and expressed the hope that a meeting between them could be arranged. It is understood that this letter to Colonel Roosevelt was of the most cordial character, approaching in its expression of friendship the communications which the Colonel had written to his successor in Presidential office during the days of their close companionship and affectionate regard. Mr. Taft's response is said to have been equally cordial. The meeting between the two men never came about, but it was said tonight that they would get together some day and that there was no doubt that the occasion would prove that each had decided to let bygones be bygones.

No men were closer, politically, socially and personally, than Theodore Roosevelt and William H. Taft. When Colonel Roosevelt was President his letters to Mr. Taft, who served under him as Governor General of the Philippines and Secretary of War, usually began with the familiar "Dear Will." Following established custom, Mr. Taft always addressed Colonel Roosevelt in his letters in those days "Dear Mr. President." During the period when their intimacy continued for a short time after Colonel Roosevelt left the White House the epistolary form of address changed to "Dear Theodore" and "Dear Mr. President."

Mr. Taft became President on March 4, 1909. Colonel Roosevelt sailed from New York for Africa on his hunting expedition on March 23, 1909. When Colonel Roosevelt returned to America in June, 1910, the foundation for the trouble that afterward led to a complete break in the friendship of Roosevelt and Taft was laid. There had been some irritation on Colonel Roosevelt's part over Mr. Taft's attitude in the early days of his term as President, due in a measure, it was understood, to the belief by Colonel Roosevelt that Mr. Taft had slighted some of the Colonel's friends in making appointments to office.

At any rate, gossip was carried back and forth which helped to bring about the break. In Europe, on his way back from Africa, Colonel Roosevelt's ears were filled with stories concerning Mr. Taft that displeased him. It was evident, later in the year, when there was a hot Gubernatorial campaign on in New York State, that friendly relations between Taft and Roosevelt were being subjected to a severe strain.

Friends of Mr. Taft have said that his affection for Colonel Roosevelt was touching. Even in 1910, after Colonel Roosevelt's return from Africa, when stories were being carried back and forth that helped to strain the relations between the two men, President Taft was careful to say nothing that reflected on his former friend and predecessor in office. In 1912, when each was a candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination, there was open enmity between them, and each attacked the other in stumping the country during the pre-convention campaign.

REPUBLICANS SHY AT COMPROMISE ON REVENUE BILL

Decline in Senate to Agree to Rush It Through Early in Next Session.

OFFER MADE BY WILSON

President Willing to Agree to Adjournment if It Can Be Passed by Jan. 15.

HOUSE MEMBERS DISMAYED

Senator Simmons, However, Still Believes All-Summer Session May Be Avoided.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—The plans of the leaders of Congress to postpone revenue legislation until an extraordinary session collapsed today when the Republicans of the Senate declined to enter into an agreement to enact a revenue bill by the first week in January.

President Wilson, in an effort to meet the united Congressional opposition to revenue legislation before the Congressional election, agreed in a conference last night with Senator Simmons, Chairman of the Finance Committee, that he would consent to a postponement until an extraordinary session to be called on Nov. 11, if Congress complied with the following conditions:

1. Members of both parties must agree to the enactment of a revenue bill by the first week in January.

2. The bill suggested was to be framed along the general lines indicated by Representative Kitchin, Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, namely, that the bulk of the tax levy must come from an increase of the excess profits, income and inheritance taxes.

3. Members of the Ways and Means Committee to hold open hearings and be prepared to report a bill when the suggested extraordinary session was to be convened on Nov. 11.

4. The agreement was to include the passage of the bill by the first week in January so that it would be in the hands of the President for his consideration by Jan. 15.

Senator Simmons this morning communicated these terms to Representative Kitchin, who did not attend last night's conference at the White House. The members of the Ways and Means Committee were hastily summoned and agreed without regard to party to the conditions laid down by President Wilson.

Republicans Refuse to Agree.

When the situation was presented to the Senate Committee by Senator Simmons the Republican members sought a recess to confer among themselves. Then the Republicans refused to bind themselves to such terms and Senator Simmons issued a statement explaining the situation. The statement follows:

"Up to the time of the declaration of Secretary McAdoo in favor of a revenue bill at this session there was a general understanding in the Senate on the part of both Democrats and Republicans that there would be no revenue legislation at this session. The suggestion of the Secretary therefore met with very strenuous opposition. This opposition seemed to be as strong on the Republican side as on the Democratic side of the chamber. As Chairman of the Finance Committee I was appealed to by Democratic and Republican Senators to do what I could toward bringing about a postponement of action until the next session of Congress.

"The situation seemed to be practically the same in the House. Mr. Kitchin, as Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, and I, as Chairman of the Committee on Finance, sympathizing with this feeling on the part of our colleagues and believing that the public interest would be subserved and a better bill would be framed and passed at the next session, sought and obtained an interview with the Secretary of the Treasury, and later with the President, in the hope of reaching some arrangement for the postponement of revenue legislation until next session.

"At a conference held by me with the President yesterday afternoon the President expressed the opinion that, if there should be a postponement in response to the wishes of the Congress, the people should be advised in a general way of the principle upon which the bill would be framed and that there should be assurance with respect to its speedy passage during the special session, and asked that Mr. Kitchin and I should ascertain and advise him of the attitude of the membership of the two houses with respect to this matter.

Still Has Hope of Delay.

"This morning I called an informal meeting of the Finance Committee and presented to it a brief memorandum prepared by the President of the several things upon which he wished assurance. There was substantially no opposition on the part of the Republican members in attendance except in one particular, and as to that it was indicated that it, if modified, might be acceptable to them. The committee adjourned for a few hours and upon reassembling it was announced on behalf of the Republicans that after a conference among themselves and their party colleagues in the Senate they had decided that they would enter into no understanding

Would Deprive Kaiser of Power to Make War

LONDON, May 25.—A wireless press dispatch from Berne says that the German Socialist Party has appointed a committee to draw up a revised party program which will be submitted at the next Socialist congress. It will make the following suggestions:

Universal and equal suffrage to both sexes; parliamentary government; the revision of the Constitution, depriving the Emperor of the right to declare war, conclude peace or negotiate treaties, and conferring these rights on the Reichstag; abolition of secret diplomacy; an international tribunal with a view to disarmament; permanent government control of the distribution of raw materials and the nationalization of merchant marine traffic on rivers, canals, and lakes.

URGE CITY TO HOLD UP END

Big Oversubscription by Nation Likely—Committee Hopes for 25% of Total Here.

New York City did not complete yesterday its quota of $25,000,000 in the Red Cross drive for a second war fund of $100,000,000. It was $692,175 behind, according to the figures officially reported, but enough money collected has not yet been counted to make it a certainty that the city is hovering so close to $25,000,000 that any nickel given today may be the one to carry New York over the line.

There was no meeting of teams yesterday, so that the total of money in their hands has not yet been reported. It is certain that their collections will be greatly increased by Monday, because Sunday, in spite of the fact that business places are closed, is to be one of the busiest days of the campaign. The Red Cross drive will be carried on energetically today in practically every church in the city. The legion of women in Red Cross costumes who have been taking in money in every busy spot in the city will be at work today, and all the lively street corners and every religious concert or place of recreation will be thoroughly canvassed.

The name of David Lloyd George, the British Premier, has been added to the list of distinguished men who have lent their voices to the Red Cross appeal.

Approval from Lloyd George.

The following letter to Ambassador Page has been cabled to this country:

My dear Ambassador: I feel sure that I am only echoing the thought of many in this country in writing to you a word of grateful appreciation of what the American Red Cross has done in this war. Not only has it made munificent donations to the fund of our own Red Cross, but it was one of the first American organizations to begin to serve humanity in this war.

The work it has done, not only in succoring wounded, but in sheltering and saving women and children in all countries stricken by war, is beyond all computation. From the moment of the massacre of Serbia its work has grown like the mustard seed until it is now one of the great humane institutions in the world. In now extending its operations to cover new responsibilities which fall upon it through the active participation of the American Army in the war, I wish it all possible success. I am sure that the resources of mercy and generosity will prove inexhaustible.

I am, my dear Ambassador,

Yours sincerely,

D. LLOYD GEORGE.

While New York City is on the verge of its quota, there was less certainty yesterday that it would go over its mark in handsome fashion, although many of the leaders thought that the city would make a great finish, as it did during the late Liberty Loan campaign. The Red Cross yesterday issued a statement on the situation in New York City:

Statement by the Red Cross.

"That the quota allotted to New York, $25,000,000, will be fully subscribed is certain. Nothing more positive than that can be said, and it is also true that those directing the campaign are still greatly worried. They fear that New York will not measure its success alongside of the success of the country at large.

"Some seem to have forgotten that New York's quota of $25,000,000 was regarded as a minimum, just as the country's quota of $100,000,000 was a minimum. The country as a whole will oversubscribe its quota by many million dollars. If New York City does not furnish 25 per cent. of the grand total, it will not meet the estimate of its patriotism made when the Second Red Cross War Fund was planned.

"It is now fairly certain that every borough will meet its quota. The Bronx undertook to raise $400,000, or $1,000,000 including the quota assigned to the Van Cortlandt district. The Bronx campaign was slow in getting under way, but is now moving rapidly. At a meeting held Friday night, $107,283 was pledged. Olin J. Stevens, Chairman of the Bronx Committee, was confident yesterday that after the various reports have been made his district will be well above its quota figure.

"Richmond, at a meeting held last night, carried its grand total to $93,000. Its quota is $100,000. Many interests are still to report and the Richmond Chairman, Norman S. Walker, last night expressed full confidence that his borough will raise at least $125,000.

Queens Results Satisfactory.

"In Queens eleven separate locality campaigns are being run and though the reports are slow in coming in the general results are satisfactory. Queens undertook to raise $400,000. It passed

GERMANS ALMOST WIPED OUT IN THE AIR; GUNFIRE TIMID AND EASILY BROKEN UP; BELIEVED TO BE SCHEMING FOR PEACE

ALARMED ABOUT AMERICA

Germans Now Sense the Way Our War Strength Is Increasing.

WHOLE NATION DEPRESSED

This May Explain the Delay of New Offensive and Inspire a New Peace Move.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, May 25.—"What is delaying the German offensive?" That is the question the asking and answering of which supplies the chief food for conversation.

A doctor who is a Major in the French Army told me today that the accurate fire of the Allies was making the organization of forces behind the German lines very difficult and thus delayed the stroke. The allied gunners have attained a proficiency enabling them to embarrass the German preparations most seriously.

One hears the suggestion that the Germans are waiting to attack Italy simultaneously, or that contingents from Russia have been delayed, or that the allied airmen are postponing the game.

In other quarters one hears hints of deeper-seated causes for the delay. Among such explanations is one, which finds credence largely owing to the increased importance recently given to America's efforts by Washington dispatches, dealing with the transportation of soldiers and the production of ships.

With the vision of American power, swiftly mobilizing in Europe, as a background, the allied optimist is painting roseate prospects. These revised estimates are undoubtedly worrying Germany. From Switzerland and Holland come one set of reports. The prisoners give still another, and the comment in the German papers presents a third. They differ in detail, but all converge on one central fact—German depression.

Chance of a New Peace Move.

Nobody doubts the Germans' military capacity. They are not idling away their time on the western front. But so widespread is the impression of discomfiture in Germany that no great surprise would be created if she made a sudden, magnificent, and, from her viewpoint, magnanimous peace gesture.

A Frenchman, who suggested this view, added:

"The psychological mood for such an action would precede the offensive because, if Germany starts this second show and carries it through with might and main, the America which will then confront her will be a very different antagonist from what she is today. Germany will then be as blood guilty to America as to the other allies. America will be fighting thereafter not only for human freedom in the abstract, but also for thousands of your men, struck down by these wanton murderers, overrunning the civilized world."

And it is just here that many find an explanation in the German spirits and the delay in letting loose the big attack.

"The Germans have been reassessing the American effort and are beginning to entertain a more serious idea regarding our relationship to the war," said a well-posted American. "Ludendorff knows how many and what kind we have in France. Perhaps the Stars and Stripes do not even yet fly over a big enough army in Picardy, Flanders, and Lorraine to turn the scale by guaranteeing to the Allies a superiority of reserves. But the Germans do not like the way the American units are coming, day by day, shipload by shipload, and quietly taking their place behind the Franco-British lines and entering immediately upon a final course of training. They realize how many more there are, whence these came from, and what an irresistible force impels the movement of American youth to the crusade against Hun barbarism."

Ceased to Jeer at America.

That Germany has stopped jeering at America's military effort and begun to rate it as worthy of serious notice comes from many different sources. Evidence of the changed feeling about America is furnished

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 25, (Associated Press.)—An American reconnoitring party, commanded by Lieutenant A. P. Craddock of Lynchburg, Va., had a thrilling hand-to-hand encounter with Germans in No Man's Land in Picardy last night. In the face of a continuous fire from two machine guns they charged the enemy. Although Lieutenant Craddock and several of his men were seriously wounded, they continued fighting and drove off the Germans.

One of the Americans was shot in the head and body and lay upon the ground stunned. When he came to he found a German holding him by the shoulder. He whipped out his gun and killed the German.

Another American detachment in the night penetrated enemy organizations in the Bois Allogne, attacked a German post, and killed five Germans and took one prisoner.

The prisoner told the same story as thousands of others who have been taken by the British and French—that he would give anything to see the war ended. He apparently knew nothing regarding future German movements.

An official statement issued by the American headquarters tonight says:

"Yesterday in Picardy our troops executed a successful silent raid and inflicted a number of losses in killed and prisoners on the enemy. There is nothing else important to report."

HOUSE BILL TAKES LIMIT OFF ARMY

Provides $11,041,681,909 and Authorizes President to Call Any Number of Men.

8 BILLION MORE FOR GUNS

Dent Tells House We Have 1,316 Airplanes in France—323 Are Combat Type.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—President Wilson is authorized to raise an army of unlimited size in the Army Appropriation bill unanimously reported to the House today by the Committee on Military Affairs. Chairman Dent of the committee announced that all opposition to granting of sweeping authority to the President had disappeared, and the committee finished its work on the biggest Army bill yet reported in entire harmony. The bill will be considered in the House next Tuesday.

Under the terms of the measure President Wilson, through the operation of the Selective Draft act, may call out as many men as can be trained, equipped, and transported to Europe. The policy of the Administration will be to place an army of 3,000,000 or more in France within the shortest possible time.

The bill carries in appropriations and authorizations $11,041,681,909, of which amount the War Department is authorized to expend in the next fiscal year $8,583,849,808. In addition to the amount carried in the Army bill, the Fortifications Appropriation bill will carry nearly $8,000,000,000 in cash and authorizations for heavy artillery for the army. Of this amount $4,200,000,000 is provided for expenditure in the next fiscal year.

Army of 2,030,027 Now.

In submitting the bill to the House Chairman Dent said in his report:

"The total estimate, including supplemental estimates for the fiscal year, were approximately $12,000,000,000. The amount of last year's appropriations from all sources was $5,248,654,299.49. The bill carries an appropriation of $9,583,849,808.61, in addition to which $2,458,332,801 is authorized.

"The Aviation Section of the Signal Corps, according to testimony before the committee, is as follows: Officers, 12,107; enlisted men, 136,761; fliers, 4,004; machines in France, 1,316; machines in the United States, 3,760; combat machines in France, 323; aviation training camps in the United States, 27.

"Beginning with a regular army of 127,588 officers and men, we now have, including the draft calls for April and May, an army of 2,030,027.

"The committee has authorized new legislation for the regulation of quarters, for the appointment of further officers in the Reserve Corps and National Army, &c., also provisions regulating the use of funds by army officers.

"The committee also has authorized that the authority conferred upon the President by the Selective Service act of May 18, 1917, be so extended as to authorize him during each fiscal year to raise by draft as provided in the Selective Service act and acts amendatory thereto, the maximum number of men which may be organized, equipped, trained and used during such year for the prosecution of the present war until it shall have been brought to a successful conclusion.

"The appropriation provides during the next fiscal year for an army of practically 3,000,000 men, the pay being based upon an average pay of $2,813 per officer and $893.09 per man.

"Many estimates necessarily in time of war are uncertain. The committee has made as complete an inquiry into the expenditures heretofore made by Congress as it possibly could under the circumstances.

"While some mistakes and delays have occurred, on the whole we think the country is to be congratulated that, after a little more than a year from the date of the declaration of war, our coun-

LOADED TRANSPORT RAMS A SUBMARINE

PICKS UP 18 OF ITS CREW

Rest Went Down with U-Boat —Sleeping American Soldiers Hardly Felt the Shock.

AN ATLANTIC PORT, May 25.—A transport which has carried many troops across the Atlantic and to Mediterranean ports since the war began in 1914 rammed and sank a big German submarine on May —. There was no mistake in the matter, as the liner picked up eighteen of the crew of the submarine and took them into port.

The transport left an Atlantic port with many American soldiers on board. She was steaming rapidly in fine weather, and was not escorted because it was considered improbable that any of the U-boats would take the risk of approaching her.

The Captain was on the bridge at dawn looking out for submarines and mines. Acting under instructions he had deviated considerably from the usual course and was expecting to make port and land the troops during the forenoon.

There was a slight haze on the water which probably prevented the commander of the U-boat from seeing the ship, when he emerged about two points off the starboard bow of the transport. The Captain of the ship saw the submarine first, and, without allowing any time for a torpedo to be got ready, he swung his ship over and bore down on the craft as it started to submerge. The sharp bow of the ship, with her great momentum behind it, cut through the thin plates of the U-boat, and in less than two minutes the latter had disappeared, leaving some of her crew struggling in the water.

The attacking ship circled around and dropped one of the lifeboats hanging at the davits on the port side, which rescued eighteen of the Germans, who were trying to keep afloat and shouting to the ship for help. The remainder of the submarine crew were drowned, going down with their vessel after the collision.

The shock when the ship struck the U-boat was so slight that the American soldiers sleeping on the lower decks did not know anything had happened until they felt the ship swinging around before the lifeboat was lowered.

After the ship had circled around for some minutes a line was thrown to the lifeboat, which was hoisted up to the davits again, and the troopship proceeded on her way to port.

OPEN 30-FOOT WAY INTO OSTEND HARBOR

Germans Shift Hulk of the Vindictive — Zeebrugge Still Tightly Closed.

LONDON, May 25.—The Germans have succeeded in shifting the concrete-laden cruiser Vindictive, which was sunk in the harbor of Ostend on May 10 by British raiding forces.

The Vindictive, according to The Times, is now lying close alongside the eastern pier, leaving a passage about thirty feet wide. This is enough to allow destroyers to go in and out, but the Germans are not using the harbor.

Unsuccessful attempts have been made by the Germans to wedge a passageway between the two old cruisers sunk in the harbor of Zeebrugge. A German destroyer, sunk this week by bombs dropped by British naval airmen, lies close to the cruisers.

The basin at Bruges, which is connected with both Ostend and Zeebrugge, is full of German shipping, but the canal is not being used.

ALLIES WORK UNHAMPERED

Captured Germans Complain of Weakness of Their Own Air Service.

By WALTER DURANTY.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, May 25.—"At the present moment German aviation is smashed flat. They react so little that I can hardly believe that they are not preparing something," said the commander of one of the most important French units, comprising observation planes, battle planes, and bombing planes. He continued:

"In all my experience I have never known the enemy airmen so devoid of energy and aggressiveness as during the last few days. There are scarcely any German planes on this front, and the hardest thing my battle planes have to do is to make the enemy put up a fight. It almost leads me to imagine that they have withdrawn their men to the interior for training with a new type of machine or in new manœuvres. Yet at this moment, with a great battle impending, the work of the air service has particular importance, and it is hardly thinkable that any novelty, however radical, would justify the absence of airmen from active operations.

"I hate to err on the side of optimism, but the only reasonable explanation seems to be that we have literally wiped the boche off the map.

Cannot Induce Germans to Fight.

"Just consider the situation. It is already established that the lack of enterprise of the German aviators and the activity of our fliers had great, perhaps a decisive, effect on the fortunes of the great battle of March. After that, we have reason to believe, the enemy airmen were taken to task pretty severely, and for a time they were fairly active.

"Then came a spell of poor flying weather, and when it terminated we went after them very hard with such success that they seem to have lost their nerve entirely.

"My fighting pilots have never had so easy a time during a period of such importance as regards land operations. For instance, last year they had to work all the time, and at night, after two patrols, they were utterly fagged out. Now they often pass a whole day without having a single fight.

"The same thing applies to the German artillery-registering and reconnoissance planes. They do all their work from two or three miles behind their own lines, and run away at the first sign of danger. Judge how little that helps the artillery registration. Personally, I should not be surprised if the air weakness proved to be the principal reason for the delay in the renewal of the offensive.

"As regards the bombing of points behind our lines, they are equally ineffective and seem to have realized that any attempt at it in the daytime simply invites disaster. At night they are evidently more active, because our fighting planes cannot get at them, but the efficiency of the French anti-aircraft artillery takes heavy toll in almost every raid, and the total amount of bombs dropped by the enemy at night will be less than half the allied figures.

Bomb Foe With Impunity.

"On the other hand, our bombers work almost with immunity all the time, and there are important concentration points that are raided continuously day and night. You can imagine the effect on troops of being bombed without intermission throughout twenty-four hours.

"At first we were more cautious. With the commander of a neighboring group, I organized a big daylight expedition. We sent out seventy-five battle planes to patrol a wide area behind the German front, and large successive squadrons of bombers to act under their protection. The boche reacted very little. Of half a dozen or so of the enemy craft sighted, every one dived for cover like a startled pigeon.

"Since then our bombers have had little to fear, save from the land bat-tories, which are much less efficient than formerly.

"Let me give you one illustration. On May 17 I sent a squadron to bombard Nesle, which they did very thoroughly. Then, finding that the boche fighting planes in the vicinity appeared anxious to give them a wide berth, our fellows actually took the initiative and attacked them. Two of the enemy were sent down in flames and a third was forced to land out of control, after which the French squadron returned triumphant.

"There was one incident in that affair that typifies the spirit of our pilots. Just at the end of the combat the mitrailleur of a French airplane was killed instantly and the pilot was grievously wounded. Rather than let his machine be captured, the latter set himself to fly back with his comrades to the French line, twenty-five kilometers away. He managed to do it, and made a successful landing, but when the men from the trenches reached the machine he was dead in his seat. Had he landed immediately after being hit his life would probably have been saved.

"It is not only in spirit that we are ahead of the enemy. Individually, and especially in teamwork, our pilots are cleverer and our planes better and more numerous.

"Captured German airmen complain bitterly of their material, and declare that neither the Pfalz nor the new tripiane or biplane Fokker is to be compared with our Spad. They say, too, that the period of training is not long enough. New pilots are sent to the front before they are sufficiently competent, with the result that they are simply sacrificed and good teamwork is rendered impossible. The letters and testimony of prisoners bear this out. There is one long series of complaints about the failure of airmen, and this increases from day to day."

GUNFIRE AND RAIDS ALONG ALLIED FRONT

German Artillery Shows Activity on the Lys Salient and South of the Somme.

LONDON, May 25.—Active artillery fire by the Germans at various points on the Lys salient and south of the Somme and some successful raids by British units are the only incidents of the day on the British front as chronicled by the official reports.

Tonight's statement of the War Office says:

The hostile artillery has been active in the Villers-Bretonneux sector, (south of the Somme.)

Otherwise there is nothing of special interest to report.

The day bulletin of the War Office is as follows:

Last night our troops raided the enemy's trenches in the neighborhood of Hamel, north of Albert, and captured over forty prisoners and two machine guns. A successful raid was carried out by us north of Lens, resulting in the capture of a few prisoners by our troops.

The hostile artillery was active yesterday evening with gas shells east of Bethune. During the night it has shown increased activity in the Strasbourg sector.

PARIS, May 25.—French troops last night repulsed German raids south of Hangard Wood and in the Vosges, the French War Office announced today. French detachments penetrated the German lines west of Noyon and returned with some prisoners. The bulletin reads:

In the course of the night the French repulsed two German raids, one south of the Bois Hangard and the other in the Vosges.

French patrolling detachments successfully penetrated the German lines west of Noyon and near Appilly, in the Woevre. The French troops returned with a number of prisoners.

On the remainder of the front there was nothing to report.

The War Office announcement tonight says:

There was intermittent artillery action north and south of the Avre.

ON THE FRENCH FRONT, May 25, (Associated Press.)—Except for heavy artillery firing, south of the Somme in the region of Moreuil and Ailly-sur-Noye, where General von Hutier's strong army faces the Entente Allies, relative calm marked every section of the front up to a late hour last night.

There has been great activity in the last few days in the sector south of the Somme. Enemy troops made several raids, but all were repelled with heavy losses for the Germans. The latest attempt of the Teuton was made early yesterday morning at Mesnil-St. Georges, west of Montdidier. This also was repulsed.

SAYS ALLIES ATTACKED.

Berlin Reports Repulses Near Kemmel, Hamel, and Albert.

BERLIN, May 25, (via London.)—Bad weather along the western front has prevented active operations, according to the statement issued by the War Office tonight. The statement reads:

Owing to the storm and rain, fighting activity of the two artilleries remained throughout the day within moderate limits. It increased intermittently to great intensity in connection with local attacks delivered by the enemy during the night northwest of Kemmel and north and west of Albert. These attacks broke down everywhere with heavy losses.

In the neighborhood of Hamel we threw the enemy back in a counter-attack. His storming troops, however, had already been shot to pieces before our lines.

On May 23 the crew of an observation plane shot down four machines out of a chain of six British one-seater battleplanes.

WORST RAID ON MANNHEIM.

Ducal Palace Bombed by British—Chemical Factory Destroyed.

BASEL, May 24.—The east wing of the Grand Ducal Palace at Mannheim was struck by bombs during the British air raid of Tuesday. The royal family had left for Berlin.

Two tons of bombs were dropped in the city. They destroyed the chemical factory and damaged the railway station.

Incomplete accounts of the raid describe it as the most terrifying of the three that have been carried out there during the war.

427 SOLDIERS SAVED FROM THE MOLDAVIA

Of the 53 Men Lost with the Transport, 2 Brothers Leaped Into Sea and Were Drowned.

ALL ON BOARD REGULARS

Survivors Maintained Fine Discipline and Sang After Leaving the Sinking Ship.

LONDON, May 25.—Fifty-three is now known to be the total loss of life on the Peninsular and Oriental liner Moldavia, which was torpedoed and sunk Thursday morning by a submarine. All the victims were American soldiers, two of them being noncommissioned officers and the rest privates.

The Moldavia, which was carrying American troops, was moving forward steadily on a smooth sea, and was almost within sight of its destination when the torpedo crashed into the boat's side. The vessel listed sharply. Destroyers began rushing alongside and fore and aft in an endeavor to find a trace of the submarine. Although they prevented the U-boat from reappearing, it is not known whether a hit was scored by the depth charges which were dropped in a circle around the point from which the torpedo was sent.

Less than a quarter of an hour after the Moldavia was struck virtually every man had gone over the sides of the vessel into lifeboats.

Edwin and Clyde Bosley of North Troy, Vt., leaped from the deck and were drowned. The two, who were brothers, were on guard when the ship was hit. There was a sharp list, and they evidently believed that she was turning over, so they jumped into the sea, and were not seen afterward. All of the other men lost were probably killed by the explosion.

Captain Johnson, an American infantry officer, who was on the Moldavia, gave a Daily Telegraph representative this account of the sinking:

"The ship was struck just forward of the engines on the port side. All the troops were in their bunks sleeping in their uniforms. There was a loud explosion, and then the ship's whistle was blown, which was a signal for everybody to come on deck.

"The men had been assigned to particular boats, and boat drill had been held every day during the voyage. The men assembled in perfect order. Their discipline was splendid; the best I ever saw.

"The Moldavia listed to port, but righted herself and ran on for about fifteen minutes to avoid being hit again. Then she began to sink steadily. Orders were given to lower the boats and rafts, and we got off.

"Destroyers had been circling around us all the time, and as soon as the Moldavia was struck they dropped several depth charges. No second torpedo was fired, and we saw nothing of the submarine. We remained in the lifeboats until the ship sank, when we were taken on board the destroyers.

"As soon as the men got aboard the boats and rafts they began laughing and singing, and when the ship sank they gave three cheers."

The Moldavia was off the southeast coast when attacked, according to the correspondent of The Daily Mail at a southeast coast port.

DIEHL AN ARMY VETERAN.

Mrs. F. Diehl of 445 East Ninety-first Street, mother of Private Herman Diehl, one of the fifty-three men reported missing as a result of the torpedoing of the Moldavia, said last night that she saw her son three weeks ago, when he came home on a short furlough just before sailing for Europe. She had not previously seen him for five years.

Diehl, who was 30 years old, was a veteran of the regular army. He leaves a wife and baby, who are now in Oklahoma.

SOLDIERS IN HALIFAX TRY TO BURN CITY HALL

Riot of Returned Troops Only Quelled When Garrison and Marines Charge Them.

HALIFAX, N. S., May 25.—The wildest riot in the history of this city occurred tonight, when returned soldiers attempted to rescue other soldiers who had been arrested by the police. The mob tried to wreck and burn the City Hall and the Police Headquarters, cut the hose when the Fire Department arrived, and forced the firemen to retreat.

The mob held sway until the garrison regiment arrived with loaded rifles. Hundreds of marines with loaded rifles and fixed bayonets, landed from warships, succeeded in dispersing the crowds. Several persons were injured, including three police officers.

The damage to the City Hall will amount to several thousand dollars.

The soldiers in storming the City Hall used bricks, boards, and anything that came to hand. Hundreds of panes of glass in the lower floor were smashed. Other groups tried to batter down the doors, behind which police with loaded revolvers stood guard over their prisoners. The heavy oaken barriers, however, stood firm against the assault.

Howling with rage, the crowds then set fire to the building. The Fire Department was prompt to respond, but the mob promptly turned on them. After cutting the hose, they attempted to wreck the apparatus, and in order to save their equipment the firemen retreated. While the attention of the mob was thus diverted, those inside the City Hall put out the flames.

Calls for help were sent to the military authorities when it was seen the municipal authorities were powerless, and the garrison regiment arrived with rifles loaded and surrounded the beleagured building. At the same time hundreds of marines were landed from warships. Marching through the streets with loaded rifles and bayonets fixed they finally disposed the rioters.

Before being scattered, however, the crowd took revenge on the Police Department. Breaking into the patrol house they ran out the police patrol wagon and automobile and wrecked them. Two police motorcycles were thrown into the harbor.

All business houses on the principal streets where the trouble centred hurriedly closed their doors for the night.

U-BOAT CHIEF SENT BOAST TO PREMIER

Having a "Nice Time" in Irish Sea, He Said, But Missed Lloyd George's Speeches.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 25.—The commander of the German submarine which torpedoed the Irish steamer Inniscarra handed a packet of letters to one of the survivors with the order to post them to Premier Lloyd George when he got ashore.

One of these letters reached Downing Street on its way to "Lloyd George, Esq., Prime Minister," in a very official German envelope, signed, countersigned, and German stamped.

According to The Evening Standard, the writer attempts to exploit a gift of irony of a heavy-handed Teutonic variety that is enough to make a light-handed Frenchman weep.

"We have been having a nice and interesting time in the Irish Sea," he informs the Prime Minister. "All we have missed is some of your speeches to laugh over."

The writer then expresses his high personal regard for the Prime Minister of England and his schemes to secure the future of Europe. With some further remarks in the same strain he signs it with his name and his rank as Second Lieutenant and the descriptive inscription, "Hun and Baby Killer."

The letter, which is on two folios, is written in indelible blue ink, and has on it what resembles the stains of sea water.

HAILS PREMIER'S SPEECH.

British Press Welcomes Lloyd George's Assurances About U-Boats.

LONDON, May 25.—Newspapers commenting on Premier Lloyd George's Edinburgh speech welcome his definite statements with regard to submarine measures and the Entente allied war policy.

The Daily Telegraph says the Premier stated the truth, which is understood today in enemy empires as well as outside them, when he said the peace of Brest-Litovsk was a complete revelation of the functions assigned by the military caste to the statesmen of their countries. The newspaper adds:

"We regard American intervention as an event destined to change the course of the world's history."

The Daily Chronicle notes that the Premier does not disguise his satisfaction at the bringing about of unity of command on the western front, and it adds: "He is one of the first of our public men to realize the necessity for this change."

The Daily Mail says:

"Lloyd George spoke words of confidence on the eve of the great attack. The Allies are in a strong position. Unity of command has been achieved and the greatest allied soldier of the war will direct the armies of freedom. In the race which President Wilson is running with von Hindenburg, American energy is beginning to tell. The American troops are pouring into France. The Prime Minister had every reason to congratulate the nation on the signal improvement in the conditions at sea. * * * In declaring that there can be no peace without victory, Lloyd George is in perfect sympathy with President Wilson. * * * Only great and decisive allied victories can end Kaiserism and the hell which it brings."

The Daily Express says the Government has had truly amazing success at meeting the submarine danger.

Some of the windows are said to have been broken.

GERMANS ALARMED ABOUT AMERICA

by German newspapers, which, in what they have stopped saying as well as what they say, reflect their growing fear of the swift development of transatlantic potentialities. Editorials show America as the death's head at the feast of Oriental spoliation and occidental victory.

Additional testimony is contained in the reports from neutral countries indicating the trend of German thought on the subject. Until now the Germans have been thinking not what was true, but what suited their interests and hopes. They are apt at all times to measure things according to their own bushel.

For months it pleased their mood to sponge America off the military slate. Germans coming back from America told Berlin the truth, but Berlin would not listen. Even Count von Bernstorff rudely reminded them that they could not safely play America for a coward or an imbecile, but they sent him to Constantinople to get rid of him.

The unbroken record of successes in the east created a feeling that militarism could put its jackboot on the neck of the other 90 per cent. of the German population.

During the few months of intoxication over Russia and Rumania, and when the western offensive was swinging along merrily, the German was openly contemptuous of America. Between our own deficiencies and the German U-boat, we would never figure seriously in the European fighting. Germany would whip France and then deal with the helpless transatlantic giant separately and at his expense.

"There is a reaction from the former view that is decidedly panicky," said a neutral who has just arrived from Switzerland. "The Germans now see the oncoming American tide that they cannot stop. They see America putting aside pride and throwing her whole naval and military strength into the allied melting pot. They see her deaf to every form of peace buncombe. They are beginning to visualize Uncle Sam differently. The smile has faded from his face, and the Germans see instead a stern, even vindictive, expression.

Realize Our Seriousness.

The Germans in their recent intensive study of psychology have been belittling the danger of British and American reprisals after the war. They are now said to be talking anxiously of other possibilities. Good-natured, magnanimous Uncle Sam, it is now recalled, showed a very ugly mood toward Germany once before. When von Diederichs became perniciously active against Dewey in Manila Bay, Germany suddenly lost her popularity in America and never did regain it.

In Germany the people are discussing very seriously this disquieting view of the American temperament. It is realized that at the bottom there is a fighting spirit hard to quiet when once it is aroused. A nation having such characteristics, besides such stupendous resources of men, energy, and wealth of every kind, has been challenged to mortal combat. There is no backing out, certainly not after this new offensive has been launched directly against America's youth. It is a battle then to the death.

"Germany is considering all this and taking home the possible consequences to the German people of this American war, added to the European war—a war that must be fought, once it is fairly begun, with this peculiar North American race until one side or the other is absolutely conquered. For the Germans are now quoting their kinsmen in America as warning them that with the killing of Americans by tens of thousands savage instincts will be aroused and peace by negotiations will be no longer a possibility. Germany is counting present numbers and realizes that what America now has in France is only a sample. What she may have six months or a year hence will be but a beginning.

"America alone is fresh in this struggle. She alone has her whole youth and resources untouched. All this is now being discussed and considered by Germany.

"All reports coming across the Swiss border," added my informant, "agree in representing Germany as thoroughly alarmed, and America will have to hustle hard to justify the fears of her now entertained across the Rhine."

PARIS MYSTIFIED BY FOE'S DELAY

Theory of a Shift Eastward to Attack the French Alone Has Some Support.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, May 25.—The long delay in the resumption of the German offensive continues to excite intense interest here, but most experts tacitly confess they are absolutely at a loss for convincing reasons. Close attention is paid today to the statement of the Swiss military critic, Stegeman, who suggested yesterday the possibility of an entire change in the direction and objective of the expected German assault, and hinted that as Foch's reserves are massed between Compiègne and Ypres, the attack on this occasion may be located further east against the French alone.

There are two sound reasons against the acceptance of this theory. The first is that Stegeman, although a naturalized Swiss, was born a German, and therefore remains German at heart, and is known already to have been several times used by the boche for the purpose of misleading the Allies.

The second reason is advanced by Major de Civrieux, military expert of the Matin, who points out that the colossal preparations for a modern offensive in the way of materials would render such a change of plan practically impossible. Civrieux is convinced that Ludendorff's real preparations have all been against the British wing, and that all preparatory steps on the French wing are merely camouflage, intended to mislead the Allies. This view is supported by other generally sound critics, who regard the strange absence of all the usual preliminary operations on the German side as due to the enemy's desire to keep his real intentions secret if possible in order to be able when the chosen moment comes to launch a surprise assault.

It is believed that the attack, when it comes, will be preceded by the usual artillery preparation, but that this will be very brief in order to give Ludendorff the opportunity to reap the benefit of a surprise similar to that which enabled him on March 21 to secure such a substantial advance at one stroke. At the same time it is pointed out that the mass of the German assault forces are concentrated equidistant from the fronts of Amiens and Rheims and would be able theoretically to attack either front.

A striking new suggestion is advanced today, however, that the delay and all the other factors of the situation justify the belief that Ludendorff very possibly has decided to revert to his old, original plan, which postulated simultaneous attacks on the Saloniki and Italian fronts. Color is lent to this view by the belief that the British and French are now so strong on the western French front that the Germans not only have decided to delay the resumption of battle there, but, perhaps, even to abandon it altogether, at least for the time being.

Supporters of the change of plan theory, however, incline most strongly to the belief that the new German plan would be to attack the line from Soissons to Compiègne which, if successful, would greatly enlarge the pocket they have made toward Amiens and bring them much nearer to Paris. The French capital, then, would become the main objective.

The possibility of the Allies attacking in turn is not regarded here as great. "What," it is asked, "would they have to gain? They are at present established on a very favorable line, and can afford to rest there until the daily growing strength of the Americans justifies them in taking the initiative. After that the end will certainly be in sight."

The Allies, in fact, are benefiting every day the renewal of the German attack is delayed, and the enemy knows it. He, however, as cabled a month ago, has fallen a victim of his own great, unexpected success in the beginning of the battle, and unless some new factor unknown to the Allies has been brought into the situation, which is very unlikely, his strategic position is as bad now as it was at the end of the first month of the battle. Confidence here in Foch and his ability to meet whatever the Germans may have is absolutely firm.

STILL TAKE HEAVY TOLL OF GERMAN AIRCRAFT

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, May 25, (Associated Press.)—Although the lull in infantry fighting continues along the front, there has been intensified activity on the part of the air services in the last week, and, as usual, the British have shown themselves masters of the situation. Yesterday and today were not suitable for aerial work, but the previous days of fine weather brought out the aviators in force.

The recent official figures that 1,000 tons of bombs had been dropped since the German offensive began two months ago, have been largely increased, and many more hostile planes have been added to the total of 1,000 machines recorded as having fallen to earth or having been sent down out of control.

Numerous raids have been conducted by the Germans over British territory, but for the most part the British airmen have forced the Germans to remain well in the rear of their lines. The fighting has been taking place further and further eastward, until the British observation and photographing machines have been able to work with little molestation for long distances back of the German lines.

On Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday British planes were constantly besieging the enemy with bombs. Tons of these explosives were unloaded on military objectives by relays of machines, working day and night. Numerous German air raids were nipped in the bud, when the British swarmed over the hostile airdromes and dumped their cargoes of bombs just as the enemy was getting ready to start out.

Aerial battles have been numerous, and some have been marked by unusual incidents.

On May 19 a British aviator dived on an enemy plane, and in coming up struck the top plane of the enemy machine with his right wing. The German rolled over and dropped. The Britisher swooped down on the enemy and fired a hundred rounds with the result that the German's wings fell off and the aviator crashed to his death. The British plane fell in an attempt to land because of the damage to the machine, but the pilot was unhurt.

It is not often that there is a real collision in the air, but one occurred on May 19 between two German machines during a battle and both were destroyed. They crashed together when a British plane dived at them and they were trying to avoid the attacking machine.

On the same day a British machine engaged a German at 10,000 feet and rendered the latter virtually helpless by a volley at close range. The German observer's gun jammed as he was trying to use it, and he faced about with his hands raised in token of surrender. The Britisher immediately ceased firing, but the German machine dived sharply and then rolled over and fell to earth.

On May 17 a British aviator, who was chasing a German plane, saw another British machine attacked by fifteen Germans. He went to the rescue, and after a hot fight, in which two of the German craft were driven down out of control, he and his companion got safely away.

SINN FEIN RISING PLANNED FOR MAY

British Press Bureau Says Munitions Were Shipped from Germany Early This Month.

PROOFS ARE WITHHELD

Secrecy Maintained "in Public Interest," but Earlier Intrigues Told in Detail.

JOHN DEVOY IS MENTIONED

Named as Setting Date for Easter Revolt—Denies Any Relations with Germany.

LONDON, May 25.—Germany's untiring efforts to foment revolution in Ireland with the aid of the Sinn Fein are laid bare in a statement from the official Press Bureau, reviewing this phase of the Irish political situation since the beginning of the war.

After the abortive rebellion of Easter week, 1916, plans were made for a revolt in 1917, but this miscarried because of America's entry into the war and Germany's inability to send troops to Ireland. An uprising in Ireland was planned for this year after the German offensive in the west had been successful and when Great Britain presumably would be stripped of troops.

The discovery of a German-Sinn Fein plot for landing arms in Ireland was made about April of this year, and even after the capture, on April 12, of the German agent who reached Ireland by submarine, munitions were shipped from Cuxhaven in the early part of this month.

Concerning the recent arrests in Ireland, the statement says that facts and documents, for obvious reasons, cannot be disclosed at this time, nor can the means of communication between Germany and Ireland.

Planned for Irish U-Boat Bases.

One phase of every plan called for the establishment of submarine bases in Ireland. In the present circumstances, it is added, no other course was open to the government, "if useless bloodshed was to be avoided and its duties to its allies fulfilled, but to intern the authors and abettors of this criminal intrigue."

The statement from the Press Bureau follows:

"The revolutionary movement in Ireland which culminated in the arrest of a considerable number of persons last week consisted of two closely related series of activities: (a) Attempts by the German Government to foment rebellion in Ireland, and (b) preparations made in Ireland to carry these attempts into action. The story of the active connection between the leaders of the Sinn Fein movement and the Germans, as disclosed by documents in possession of the British Government, falls into two parts—the period prior to and the period since the abortive Irish rebellion of Easter, 1916.

"The events of the first period can be told in some detail, but the second period, which concerns recent events, permits of no more than a summary, as a full statement of the facts and documents in possession of the Government would disclose the names of persons who stood by the Government, and also the channels of communication through which the German Government was acting, and which it would not be in the public interest to reveal at present.

Plots Begun in November, 1914.

"The story begins as early in the war as Nov. 6, 1914, when Herr Zimmermann transmitted through Count von Bernstorff a message from Sir Roger Casement, (later captured in Ireland and executed,) asking that a messenger, a native-born American if possible, be sent to Ireland with word that everything was favorable. He was to carry no letter, for fear of arrest. Casement also asked that an Irish priest should be sent to Germany, with the assistance of the German Legation in Norway, to work in prison camps to corrupt Irish prisoners of war. This priest was a certain Father John T. Nicholson, an American citizen of Irish birth. He reached Germany safely, and we find him in January, 1915, transmitting messages to America.

"According to a report of Captain von Papen, (German Military Attaché in Washington,) dated Dec. 5, 1914, verbal assurances were sent, in response to Casement's request, that an excellent impression had been produced in Ireland. In the beginning of 1916 the plot ripened, and on Feb. 10 of that year Count von Bernstorff sent to a covering address in Rotterdam a dispatch signed with the name of Skal, one of his principal American agents.

"The dispatch included an extract from the report of John Devoy, head of the Clan-na-Gael, to the effect that action in Ireland could not be postponed much longer, since he feared the arrest of the leaders. It had been decided, he said, to begin action on Easter Saturday, and he urged that arms and munitions be in Limerick by that date.

"Later in the same month von Bernstorff, following his usual practice, surreptitiously attached to a message to Berlin, passed by the American Government, a note fixing Easter Saturday for the rising, and urging the dispatch of munitions in time. On March 4 von Jagow (German Foreign Minister) replied that the arms would be landed in Tralee Bay, and asked that the necessary arrangements be made in Ireland through Devoy. On March 14 von Bernstorff replied that the Irish agreed, and that full details were being sent to Ireland by messenger.

"The next day von Bernstorff telegraphed the code to be used between the Germans and the rebels while the arms were in transit, and explained that a submarine might safely enter Dublin Bay and go as far as Pigeon House without encountering nets.

"On March 20 von Jagow replied that the arms would be sent, and that a special code word would be used every night as the introduction to the German Wireless Press Service. In a message from von Bernstorff to Berlin the Germans were assured that there were numerous private wireless receiving stations in Ireland.

Easter Revolt Timed from Here.

"On April 18 and April 19 urgent messages were sent from America to Berlin, fixing the delivery of arms for the evening of Easter Sunday, pressing for the landing of German troops, and asking for an air raid on England and a naval attack on the English coast. These attacks actually took place between April 24 and 26.

"It was declared to be the hope of the rebels and their German and American friends to blockade Irish ports against England, and establish bases in Ireland for German submarines.

"The rebellion broke out a day later than scheduled, on Easter Monday, April 24, but, as the world is aware, German support miscarried, and it ended in complete failure. The report of the Royal Commission on the Rebellion in Ireland states:

"'It is now a matter of common notoriety that the Irish Volunteers had been in communication with the authorities in Germany, and were for a long time known to have been supplied with money through Irish-American societies. This was so stated in public by John MacNeill, (former President of the Sinn Fein,) on Nov. 8, 1914. It was suspected long before the outbreak that some of the money came from German sources.'

"The evidence on this subject in possession of the British Government provides the clearest proof of these suspicions.

"It became clear very soon after the rising that the Sinn Fein leaders again were asking Germany for help. On June 17 there was a message from Berlin to Washington, referring to 'A 279 of May 6,' a message which is missing, and saying that Germany was perfectly ready to give further help if the Irish only would say what sort of help they required.

"On June 16 von Bernstorff already had sent a dispatch giving an account of the rebellion as far as his information went and stating that £1,000 had been provided for the defense of Casement. On July 25 he sent a long message, giving further news from Ireland and explaining that the work of reorganizing the rebels was making good progress, and that their lack of money had been remedied by him.

"Revolution Director" in America.

"On Sept. 8 in a dispatch to Berlin he inclosed a memorandum from a person called 'the Irish Revolution Director resident in America,' which contained detailed proposals for a fresh rising. Any rising, said the Irish Revolution Director, must be contingent upon the sending by Germany of an 'expedition with sufficient military force to cover a landing.'

"On this occasion the German Government was to fix the time, and, as an inducement, the advantage of having submarine and Zeppelin bases in West Ireland was insisted upon.

"Von Bernstorff evidently was having difficulty with his tools, for on Oct. 24 he warned his Government not to allow a certain Captain Boohm, then a resident of Rotterdam, to write to Irishmen in America, since his letters were apt to go to the wrong people. Later Captain Boohm was arrested by us in British waters.

"We again find von Bernstorff on Dec. 4 attaching a note surreptitiously to a message, passed by the American Government, in which he mentioned that the Irish leaders in America were pressing for an answer to their proposal of Sept. 8. He seems to have followed this on Christmas Day with a message which is missing, for on the last day of 1916 Foreign Secretary Zimmerman informed him of quantities of munitions which it was proposed to land between Feb. 21 and 28, 1917. He added that it was impossible to send German troops.

On Jan 16, 1917, Bernstorff replied that the Irish committee declined the proposal as without German troops a rising would be useless.

"After America's entrance into the war, in April, 1917, the line of communication between the German Government and the leaders of the Sinn Fein Party was broken temporarily, though there was no reason to believe that the messenger service between America and Ireland, devised by John Devoy, was affected.

Plots Here After We Entered War.

"A clue to the new line of communication was obtained subsequently, and has been followed up actively. The effect of this new line in Ireland is visible in the speeches of the Sinn Fein leaders during this period.

"For example, Professor de Valera, addressing the convention of the Irish Volunteers on Oct. 27, 1917, said:

"'By proper organization and recruiting we could have 500,000 fighting volunteers in Ireland. That would be a big army, but without the opportunity and means for fighting it could only be used as a menace. There already has been too much bloodshed without success, and I would never advocate another rebellion without hopeful chances of success. We can see no hope of that in the near future, except through a German invasion of England and the landing of troops and munitions in Ireland. We should be prepared to leave nothing undone toward that end.'

"On another occasion in January of this year de Valera said:

"'As long as Germany is the enemy of England, and England is the enemy of Ireland, so long will Ireland be a friend of Germany.'

"For some considerable time it was difficult to obtain accurate information as to German-Sinn Fein plans, but about April, 1918, it was ascertained definitely that a plan for landing arms in Ireland was ripe for execution, and that the Germans only awaited definite information from Ireland as to the time, place, and date.

"The British authorities were able to warn the Irish command regarding the probable landing of an agent from Germany from a submarine. The agent actually landed on April 12 and was arrested.

"The new rising depended largely upon the landing of munitions from submarines, and there is evidence to show that it was planned to follow a successful German offensive in the west and was to take place at a time when Great Britain presumably would be stripped of troops.

Hoped to Muster 500,000 Rebels.

"According to documents found on his person, de Valera had worked out in great detail the constitution of his rebel army. He noped to be able to muster 500,000 trained men. There is evidence that German munitions actually had been shipped on submarines from Cuxhaven in the beginning of May, and that for some time German submarines have been busy off the west coast of Ireland on other errands than the destruction of allied shipping.

"It will thus be seen that the negotiations between the executive of the Sinn Fein organization and Germany have been virtually continuous for three and a half years. At first a section of Irish-Americans was the intermediary for most of the discussions, but since America's entrance into the war the communication with the enemy has tended to be more direct. A second rising in Ireland was planned for last year, and the scheme broke down only because Germany was unable to send troops.

"This year plans for another rising in connection with the German offensive on the Western front were maturing, and a new shipment of arms from Germany was imminent.

"An important feature of every plan was the establishment of submarine bases in Ireland to menace the shipping of all nations.

"In the circumstances no other course was open to the Government if useless bloodshed was to be avoided and its duty to its allies fulfilled but to intern the authors and abettors of this criminal intrigue."

AWAIT DILLON'S SPEECH.

Irish Expect Him to Give Nationalists' View of Charges Today.

DUBLIN, May 25.—Members of the Nationalist Party are in the position of quietly awaiting an authoritative expression of opinion from John Dillon, Chairman of the party, and Joseph Devlin, Nationalist member of Parliament, as to what line of action will be taken by the party toward the Government's "revelations." Both leaders will speak on Sunday—Mr. Dillon at Bailleborough and Mr. Devlin at Dungannon—and these speeches are likely to prove among the most important in recent Irish history.

Mr. Dillon's visit to Bailleborough is primarily to attend a conference of local Nationalists of East Cavan, where an election is impending. The election is a close fight between the Nationalists and Sinn Feiners. The latter's candidate, Arthur Griffith, was one of the first men arrested last week. Mr. Dillon has been urged to withdraw the Nationalist candidate and allow Griffith to be elected without opposition.

The Chairman is willing to withdraw his candidate if Griffith will also withdraw and leave the seat to a neutral, but the Sinn Feiners refuse to accept such a compromise.

Mr. Dillon has written a letter to The Nationalist of Limerick, in which he says:

"Large masses of the youth of Ireland have passed under the influence of leaders who appear to have no well-thought-out policy and no sense of responsibility. In the face of such conditions young Irishmen who can keep their heads and are determined to resist both stupid coercion and the policy of the Sinn Fein are capable of doing incalculable service to Ireland at this moment of terrible need. Your society at Limerick has passed a resolution refusing the introduction of party strife into Ireland during the present crisis. I did everything in my power, even to the extent of incurring blame and censure from some of my best supporters, to avert strife and secure true unity on the basis of a party truce till the conscription menace has been defeated."

Two varying schools of opinion respecting the Government's revelations are illustrated by editorials in the Unionist Irish Times and the Nationalist Irish Independent. The former thinks the evidence is conclusive, and that the Sinn Fein stands convicted on a treasonable conspiracy. The latter declares the Government's evidence is almost purely negative.

"The Government's revelations," says the Irish Times, "must satisfy all impartial men that Germany has been in association with disaffected persons in Ireland since the beginning of the war."

Speculating on the attitude of the Nationalist leaders, this newspaper expresses the opinion that Mr. Dillon must dissociate himself from the Sinn Fein or that otherwise his party will lose the support of all moderates, dealing a deadly blow to the cause of Home Rule.

The Irish Independent considers that the Government, like the public, takes a good deal for granted as to the authenticity of the evidence of a German plot. It says that the Government has made an ex parte statement, and that the accused have not been heard in their own defense, continuing:

"The vague general charge is met by the Sinn Feiners with an emphatic denial of the existence of any plot. It is thus made a question in regard to which British and Irish opinion may reach widely diverse conclusions."

The Freeman's Journal, Mr. Dillon's organ, after careful examination of the Government's statement, says:

"No one could truthfully describe it as evidence and no impartial mind will accept it as justification for the extreme action which the Government has taken."

THINK SINN FEINERS GUILTY.

Most London Papers Satisfied with the Press Bureau Statement.

LONDON, May 25.—The bulk of newspaper opinion in London accepts the statement on the Irish situation issued by the Press Bureau as convincing proof of the guilt of the Sinn Fein leaders and of the probable guilty knowledge by their followers of the progress of the conspiracy.

Accordingly, the Government's action is indorsed as wholly justified. Some regret is expressed that evidence of the latest incidents cannot be divulged as fully as in the matter of Sir Roger Casement's plot, but this is not held to invalidate the case against any of the men under arrest.

The Daily Telegraph thinks the explanation will satisfy any reasonable person, adding:

"The proof is complete—not only complete, but continuous. * * * The Government did their duty, and public opinion will now demand that the ringleaders of the conspiracy be tried and punished without delay, and that there shall be no more pitiful surrender to sentimental clamor for amnesty for the others. The feeling which will be aroused in Great Britain and America by the exposure of this black treachery will be one of angry and contemptuous disgust."

The Telegraph wonders what the Nationalist attitude in Ireland will be, and says that if the Nationalists are sincere in disowning sympathy with treason, they will not hesitate to swell the chorus of detestation over Sinn Fein's "infamous treachery."

The official statement, The Daily Mail says, is convincing by its very moderation. The paper emphasizes the assertion that plotting continues in America, and adds:

"This, we are perfectly confident, is the state of affairs which American opinion will immediately pronounce intolerable, and which the United States Government will do its utmost to eradicate, for the Sinn Feiners were aiming at the establishment of German submarine bases on the west coast of Ireland, whence they might prey on the lives of American soldiers crossing the Atlantic to the battlefields of Flanders. They are aiding the enemy of the United States to use the most deadly weapon against the American Army and Navy—the weapon which, if it succeeded, would paralyze America's effort and strew the ocean with America's dead."

The Press Bureau's statement, says The Morning Post, tells nothing but what might have been anticipated from the public declarations of the Sinn Fein leaders, and the acts of those leaders themselves and their followers.

"A Government which had foreborne to act as the Government has at last acted," continues this newspaper, "would have betrayed its trust." The Post argues that what really needs justification is not the arrests, but the action of the Government in releasing the persons arrested in 1916 and allowing them to continue "their fell work."

The Daily Express says that the Government was more than justified in arresting the Sinn Feiners. "Now they should be tried," the newspaper declares, "and the trial should be as public as the circumstances permit. Prove these people guilty in open court, and Ireland will listen to them no more. Keep the interned without trial, and half of Ireland will believe them libelled innocents."

Two Dissenting Editorials.

A note of dissatisfaction is struck by The Daily Chronicle and The Daily News. The former, after saying that the most startling part of the statement is the proof that the Easer rebellion was directly inspired by Germany, contends that more substantial justification of the recent arrests ought to be given.

"If there are reasons of state against a full disclosure," adds The Chronicle, "not less are there reasons of state for revealing sufficient evidence to justify the strong action taken. It is not enough to say that there is a plot. So deep seated is the suspicion of the Government that Irish public opinion will want more than this to convince it of the reality of the conspiracy."

The Daily News also calls for the evidence, saying that it is irrelevant and profoundly misleading to recapitulate the evidence of 1916 as proof of Irish complicity in the alleged plot of 1918.

"Evidence much more specific than mere proof of German and German-American machinations is needed if the Government's action is to be vindicated," The Daily News insists. "As far as the present document is concerned such evidence is clearly not forthcoming. * * * If the evidence cannot be published the least that can be demanded is that it should be examined by competent, impartial judges, in whose findings the public would have implicit confidence."

It suggests that the evidence be submitted to former Premier Asquith, Arthur Henderson, the Labor Party leader, and John Dillon or Joseph Devlin. "Confirmation by such a panel," The Daily News says, "would convince every section in Parliament and the country, and Parliament must insist upon some such investigation. * * * To issue such evidence as is now published is not a compliment to the intelligence of the public."

MORE TO BE ARRESTED HERE.

Washington Has Additional Evidence of Sinn Fein Plotting.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—More evidence than that disclosed in the British Press Bureau's charges of the close connection between the Irish Sinn Fein and German influence is in the hands of the British and American Governments, according to an official statement made here today. Arrests are to be made soon in this country, and possibly additional arrests in Ireland.

A number of prominent Irish-Americans, including several heretofore known as Irish patriots, are under surveillance. In most cases, it is said, arrests will be made on technical charges of seditious utterances, most of the facts being concealed until the trial.

Department of Justice officials today pointed to the disappearance of Jeremiah O'Leary, former editor of the suppressed publication Bull and organizer of the American Truth Society, on the eve of his trial on charges of publishing seditious matter, as a strong indication that O'Leary and others were informed of other charges which might be brought against them.

The espionage law provides a basis for prosecuting persons fomenting rebellion here against Great Britain or other allies of the United States. The acts referred to in the British statement, however, were committed before that law became effective, and punishment can be inflicted only if they were renewed after its passage.

JOHN DEVOY DENIES DEALING WITH GERMANS

John Devoy, editor of The Gaelic American, which is the organ of the Sinn Fein in this country, issued a statement last night in which he denied that he had ever had any dealings, directly or indirectly, with German agents or emissaries. Devoy also denounced as "an outrageous lie" the British Press Bureau statement that Count von Bernstorff reported to his Government that he had supplied a fund of $5,000 to be used in the defense of Sir Roger Casement at the time when Casement, who was subsequently executed, was awaiting trial for treason in the Tower of London. Devoy says that the $5,000 was contributed entirely by Irishmen and was taken to London by John F. Doyle, an American lawyer.

Devoy also makes the significant statement that "Irish leaders in America have had no dealings with Germany since America entered the war." Whether or not he means to infer that these leaders did deal with Germany before the United States entered the war he does not say.

"Founded on Chief Flynn's Frameup."

His statement follows:

"The statement issued by the English Official Press Bureau, published in the New York papers today, is a rehash of old stories previously published and brought up to date by the addition of later inventions. It is founded mainly on Chief Flynn's frameup of a few months ago about the 'plot' to start another rebellion in Ireland last Easter. That statement was a lie made out of whole cloth, and the story of another plot for an insurrection now is also an impudent falsehood.

"Lloyd George's statement in Edinburgh yesterday that 'there was no doubt there had been a conspiracy for a great rising in Ireland;' that he had seen the evidence, but that 'no taunts would drive the Government to give away the sources of its information,' is an admission that the evidence will not stand the test of an examination in court. We are to take Lloyd George's word for it and to condone his arresting of the Sinn Fein leaders and holding them in prison without bringing them to trial. And in face of this admission the Irish people, over whom he is riding roughshod, are also to take his word that England is fighting for the freedom of the small nationalities. His statement that 'it is not relevant to assert that England had treated Ireland badly in the dim past' simply evades the question. Ireland is unitedly protesting against his action in the living present and saying nothing of the dim past.

"The English Press Bureau begins with an assertion that 'a German submarine cruised off the west coast of Ireland at a certain date during the present month ready to unload (word deleted) for a new Irish rebellion.' So we are to believe that one submarine could carry enough of arms and ammunition to start a rebellion that would have required a large English army to suppress and create a big diversion in favor of Germany. It is too ridiculous to discuss, and it is no wonder that Lloyd George refuses to give out the evidence. The story is an impudent fake, supplied probably by a man who has long been under suspicion, who is not in the confidence of anybody at either side of the Atlantic, but who had been 'pulling the leg' of the Secret Service for some time.

"The 'arch plotter,' who is said to be known as the 'Irish Revolutionary Director,' does not exist now and never has existed.

Ancient History with New Trimmings.

"Then the statement proceeds to relate ancient history, with new trimmings, coupling John Devoy, Father John T. Nicholson, Captain von Papen, and Count Bernstorff with the plans for the Easter week rebellion and other things. The English claim to have possession of several of Count Bernstorff's confidential dispatches, but they do not say that they received them from the United States Government. All these relate to things that happened before America entered the war. There is an outrageous lie among them to the effect that Count Bernstorff reported to his Government that he had sent £1,000 for the defense of Sir Roger Casement. The English equivalent of $5,000, contributed entirely by Irishmen for the defense of Casement, was brought to London by Michael Francis Doyle, the American lawyer who was associated with the defense, and the receipt for it, signed by Sir Roger Casement himself, with other evidence, is still in existence. No German money whatever was ever received by any Irish leader, either in Ireland or America, and the statement to the contrary is the repetition of a falsehood without a shadow of foundation or a single scrap of evidence to support it.

"All this ancient history, even if correctly stated, has no relevancy to the charges made by the English Government and by alleged Federal officials in Washington a few days ago, that Irishmen in America were plotting with the Sinn Fein leaders on the other side of the Atlantic and with the support of Germany to start another insurrection in Ireland. No such plot exists, and the best proof that there is no evidence to support the charge is the British Government's refusal to produce it in court. The whole purpose of the charge is to create antipathy to Ireland in America. Irish leaders in America have had no dealings with Germany since America entered the war.

"For myself, personally, I have never had any dealings, directly or indirectly, with any agent or emissary, official or unofficial, of the German Government since the United States entered the war, and there is not a scintilla of evidence of any kind to prove the contrary. I repeat, there is no plot on either side of the Atlantic to bring about another insurrection in Ireland, but there is an open and avowed movement to resist conscription, participated in by all the political parties, including large numbers of Orangemen."

The Committee on Public Information in Washington made public on Sept. 22 of last year a long statement regarding German intrigue in the United States, in which statement Devoy was several times referred to. In issuing the statement the Government, through the Committee on Public Information, characterized the statement as "the most important revelation of Germany's lawless depredations and spying in America that has been made since the first declaration of war in August, 1914," and added that "it is based upon official documents in the possession of the Government."

The statement contained these two transcripts of letters to Count von Bernstorff:

New York, April 8, 1916.

The following communication from confidential man John Devoy was duly transmitted:

"Letter dated March 22, delayed by censor, seems conclusive that first messenger arrived safe with proposal to send supplies and that cable was suppressed. Second also safe. Third, with change of plans, due about April 15."

John Devoy further requests that the following telegram be dispatched to Sir Roger Casement:

"No letter now possible. All funds sent home. Slater and M.'s family well."

Should Sir Roger be absent or ill, then J. D. requests that the telegram be delivered to John Monteith.

Evidence Obtained by Flynn.

Devoy's statement that the evidence in possession of the British was obtained by William J. Flynn, former Chief of the United States Secret Service, and that Flynn "framed up" the Sinn Fein, is a reference to the disclosures made by Chief Flynn in November of last year. These disclosures were based on certain official Sinn Fein documents which came into the hands of the Secret Service after the arrest of Liam Mellows and Thomas Welsh, both Irishmen and both of them identified with the Sinn Fein organization in Ireland. Mellows is now under indictment in the Federal Courts charged with attempting to procure, by fraudulent means, an American passport.

At the time Devoy refers to the Secret Service announced that the United States Government was in possession of evidence which showed that the Sinn Fein organization in this country was of equal importance with the headquarters organization in Ireland, and that the two headquarters were in regular communication through transatlantic messengers. Welsh was one of these messengers, on whose person was found a long communication from Sinn Fein officials in Ireland to one of the leaders in this country.

Another document made public by Chief Flynn was found among Liam Mellows's papers. This document was, it was announced, an official report of the Sinn Fein uprising of Easter week, 1916. In that document Mellows wrote that "I know that there was an existing agreement with Germany that, if the course of the war allowed it, they (the Germans) would set up an independent Ireland. Knowing this, I was willing to wait to see would the course of war allow it—even to wait until the end of the war."

Mellows is now one of the most outspoken Sinn Fein agitators in this country. Despite the fact that he is a British subject and is under indictment, he does not hesitate to denounce not only the British, but also the United States Government, whenever he speaks in public.

WOULD INTERN SINN FEINERS.

Either Do That or Deport Them, Colonel Roosevelt Advises.

SPRINGFIELD, Ohio, May 25.—"At this time no good American should sleep easily if during the day he has not done everything in his power to put this country back of the armed men who in France are fighting for our own national honor and interest and for the future of the free peoples of civilized mankind," declared Theodore Roosevelt here tonight in an address on "Americanism" in behalf of a local war chest campaign.

"The peril is faced by and the honor is rightly due to those at the front," he said, "but the rest of us, who cannot get to the front, must at least back up our men in every possible way, and the way to back them up is every day, every week, every month to do the thing that is next. At this moment the thing that is next is the Red Cross drive. Last month it was the Liberty Loan. And all the time the biggest thing that is next is to back up the men who wear our uniform by insisting that we at home tolerate absolutely no division on the great question of Americanism."

The war chest, which brought Colonel Roosevelt to Springfield, is a fund being raised by the people of Springfield and Clark County out of which donations can be made this next year for war purposes, without the necessity of holding numerous money-raising campaigns. The former President came at the invitation of President Heckert of Wittenberg College of this city.

"The first essential here in the United States," Colonel Roosevelt said, "is that we shall be one nation, and that the American nation. We are a new nation, by blood akin to, but different from every one of the nations of Europe.

"In such a nation there can be no fifty-fifty allegiance. There is no such thing as being loyal to the United States and also loyal to any other power. It is just as impossible as for a man to be loyal to his wife and equally loyal to some other woman. If any man dilutes his loyalty to America by any degree of loyalty to any other country whatsoever, he ought instantly to be sent out of this country and back to the country where he belongs. And of course the case is even worse if he sacrifices his loyalty for America to his hatred for some other country.

"The German-American alliance put the interests of Germany above the interests of the United States. It showed itself the implacable foe of America and tried to run our politics with reference not to our own honor and interests, but to the needs of Germany and of the Hohenzollerns. The Sinn Feiners have put the honor and interest of America second to their hatred of England.

"The German-American alliance is dissolved, but Congress ought by law to make the dissolution permanent, and to render forever impossible its revival or the creation of any similar anti-American and semi-traitorous organization. In just the same way, any Sinn Feiner who directly or indirectly seeks to discredit America's allies in this war and thereby to give aid and comfort to Germany should be interned as an enemy alien or sent out of the country. The same thing is true of the Russian Bolsheviki. All these men are allies of Germany."

WILSON'S WORDS THRILL BRITISH LABOR CHIEF

LONDON, May 25.—President Wilson's speech in New York last Saturday is welcomed warmly by Arthur Henderson, leader of the Labor Party and former member of the War Cabinet.

"I welcome the President's speech," said Mr. Henderson in an interview with Reuters, Limited, "mainly for two reasons, because it reaffirms in ringing words democracy's resolute refusal to desert Russia in her hour of agony and humiliation, and because it proclaims the doctrine to which organised workers themselves stand pledged, that peace, when it comes, must conform to the principles of international right and essential justice.

"President Wilson's greatest contribution to the effort of the free nations in this world struggle is the moral idealism he has brought to bear upon the problem of world peace. He has refused to treat the question of peace as a matter for political bargaining between belligerents or as a question of territorial compromises and concessions by one side or the other.

"In all of his speeches since America entered the war, he has approached the question from the point of view of democracy itself and has insisted with every variety of emphasis and inflection that what is morally wrong cannot be politically right.

"President Wilson rightly regards the whole situation in the east as a test of Germany's sincerity in talking peace. If there is any possibility that the Allies might be persuaded to accept a cynical peace based upon concessions by Germany in the west at the price of leaving Germany a free hand in the east, the President's firm repudiation of any such bargain will, I hope, finally dispose of it.

"Organized democracy stands by Russia in her agonised effort to work out her national destiny and the war cannot end while Russia lies under the heel of a new tyranny more monstrous, because more methodical and ruthless, than the corrupt and criminal bureaucracy that the revolution has destroyed. Freedom for Russia is a democratic war aim.

"It is because the treaties the Central Powers have made with Russia and Rumania violate the conscience of democracy, of which President Wilson is pre-eminently the custodian and interpreter, that proposals for peace which imply a German triumph in the east cannot and must not be considered as a possible basis of negotiation.

"We of the working class movement in allied countries look to the President of the United States to maintain this high standard of statesmanship and to bring our Governments to see the issues of this struggle with his clear vision and to defend the cause of international freedom with the same exalted enthusiasm and in the same disinterested spirit.

"Having secured unity of control, it is essential that we should now secure complete unity of political policy, without which no world settlement can be obtained."

GERMANS STIRRING HATRED IN RUSSIA

UKRAINE IN A FERMENT

Still Necessary to Keep Large German Forces There—Soviets Declared to be Strongly Anti-German.

By ARTHUR RANSOME.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MOSCOW, May 25.—There are two marked tendencies in Eastern Europe. The masses are becoming more definitely anti-German, while the privileged classes are looking more and more eagerly to Germany to save them from the masses. Thus no amount of words from individual cadets will alter the fact that the Cadet Party in the Ukraine is providing active assistance to the German-appointed bread collector, the Hetman Skoropausky, or, an even more significant fact, that the leading cadets in Moscow had a consultation with Count Mirbach. Class interest, as could long ago have been foreseen, has overruled all others. The following words were used by a cadet who only a month ago was the loudest supporter of the Allies:

"The Hetman, Skoropausky, is getting to be well liked. He is strong and honest and is putting things back on a firm basis. We need something like that in Russia."

To the objection that the Hetman was pro-German and supported by Germans, he replied:

"No matter. He may be a German, may be a German-Russian, or may be a Russian patriot so long as he will restore our rights and property."

If the Germans come they undoubtedly will find a welcome from the very classes, the very parties which we politely suppose to be pro-English. The only definitely anti-German force in Russia is that of the Soviets. Class interests just as inevitably make the Soviets anti-German as they make the bourgeois pro-German. This is not a question of sympathy but of logic. The Germans every day provide fresh fuel to the fire of anti-German hatred, which is burning as red as the revolutionary flag that waves over the Russian Embassy in Berlin. The Germans' action in the Ukraine, while pleasing to a few, is setting the many violently against them.

It is some small satisfaction to us to see that the Germans make the same mistakes as the Allies in overestimating the value and strength of the privileged classes. Thus the appointment of the Hetman in Kiev has increased instead of decreased German difficulties. The Germans conquered the Ukraine with the help of the Ukrainians and Heldamaks who supported the bourgeoise Rada. They had to use just over 500,000 men. Now they are forced to disarm the Ukrainian troops because of their newly reared hatred of the Germans. They bribed the privileged classes by announcing through the Hetman the restoration of land and other property, and the result is that without Ukrainian support the Germans have now to take from the nation of peasants the land which the peasants will not voluntarily surrender. From all parts of the occupied territory come fresh tales of resentment against the German strictness and greed.

A small thing, but one that well illustrates the way in which the Germans exasperate the peasantry, is the general registration of hens. For every hen her owner is to produce three eggs weekly. Any hen that dies must be brought in, to satisfy the German commandant that it no longer is able to lay eggs.

Thousands of similar stories are told, and every day peasant risings, now here, now there, are causing perpetual conflict not only between the Germans and peasants but also between the Germans and the classes they have appointed to rule.

Polish legionaries and the Germans are fighting pitched battles, 15,000 on each side. All this tends to increase the number of forces needed by the Germans in the east. The Allies should realize that peace with revolution keeps many German troops permanently employed. Revolution and the Soviet power in Russia are still an important factor in the war. Non-recognition definitely weakens that factor.

Redfern Corsets

It is also to strengthen and support the figure and give it poise as well.

One feels better in a Redfern Corset because it is scientifically designed.

URGES THAT BRITAIN EXCHANGE CAPTIVES

PICTURES THEIR SUFFERING

Declares No Argument Holds Against Seeking Their Release—Points to What France Has Done.

By ARNOLD BENNETT.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 25.—"I wish I could go back and fight those Germans, although I would rather kill myself than be taken prisoner again."

Those are the words of a British sailor, and they express the feelings of tens of thousands of prisoners in Germany. Facts about the treatment of prisoners in Germany are well known, and they are known to be appalling. All prisoners are disgracefully humiliated, and those who have kept any sort of health have lived on food sent from Britain.

Conditions in the regular camps have varied from tolerable to horrible. The conditions under which prisoners have been set to industrial work away from the camps are proved to have been worse than the worst conditions in the regular camps. For mere cruelty the German war prison system has easily beaten the mediaeval system of the Spanish Inquisition.

It has killed thousands of our men. It has completely ruined the health of thousands of others, and has left a mark on every one of its victims without exception. At this very moment tens of thousands of Englishmen, men whom we used to meet in the streets and chat with, men who did the same daily things as we did, and lived the same orderly and comfortable lives as we live and still do live—these men are suffering most frightful mental and physical torture. They are being turned into the likeness of slaves, only a few hundred miles away.

This is truth understated, and I say it is known. It has been known for a long time. The Government knows it. We all know it.

Private enterprise did everything that private enterprise could do to alleviate the sufferings of the prisoners in Germany. The Central Prisoners of War Committee worked thoroughly well and all the minor allied organizations worked well. Whenever I have had occasion to make inquiry on behalf of any particular prisoner I have been impressed by the efficiency and eagerness of these committees and societies whose activities reach the smallest hamlets in Britain.

I was much struck the other day when a request came to the village which I inhabited to adopt a certain prisoner of war in Germany. I could see at once that that particular tiny detail affecting one man in Germany and one village in England had been well thought of on practical lines. Private enterprise has been really enterprising, and it has been successful, but it could do little beyond sending food and a few other necessaries, and it could do nothing to prevent its consignments being stolen by officials in Germany. Our efforts on behalf of our bankers in Germany practically stopped there. The State Department, though they did not actually tell us so, allowed us to understand that nothing more could be done. We accepted the dreadful situation upon the surface; at least we grew callous.

Then on the 9th of this month came the question to Mr. Balfour in the House of Commons about a treaty just concluded between France and Germany for an exchange of all prisoners of war who had been in captivity for more than eighteen months. Mr. Balfour knew nothing about it, and he asked for time so that the Foreign Office might make inquiries. Four days of inquiry by the Foreign Office resulted in absolutely nothing, and the House was then informed that the Government did not know the terms of the French treaty. That is as far as we have officially got, but we do know that a treaty exists and that Italy has arranged or is arranging a similar treaty with Austria.

So much for officialdom. Surprise was expressed that the French should have entered into a treaty without informing us of what they were doing. I mentioned this point to a very high French official in London, and he replied:

"It is possible to argue that we ought to have informed you, but may I remind you that when your Lord Newton went over to Holland to make certain arrangements with Germany as to British prisoners the French Government was not informed, and the news of Lord Newton's mission caused exactly the same kind of surprise in France as the news of the French treaty has caused in England."

I considered that the high French official had distinctly scored off me.

Blame for the Delay.

I am convinced that we have not yet heard the whole truth about the matter, and I doubt if we ever shall. In any case, departmentalism is to blame. It is no exaggeration to say that the disclosures of the French treaty for the exchange of all prisoners who have been in captivity for more than eighteen months and of the fact that we have done nothing to the same end has caused a prodigious stir of emotion throughout the country. All is changed. We see now that that which was deemed impossible is quite possible. We see that our officialdom lacked initiative and that it lacked even curiosity. We see it has been asleep.

To assert this is to assert that our officialdom has been extraordinarily callous, and that its callousness grossly misled us as to the situation, and we are determined that something drastic, immediate, and effective shall be done.

But let us not blind ourselves to the probability that officialdom will move slowly and cumberously, that it will seek to justify its shortcomings, and that it will bring forward all kinds of arguments against taking the course which the French have so successfully taken. As for those arguments there are only two. The first is that an exchange of prisoners will tend to lengthen the war, because it will increase once again the man power on both sides. It may tend to lengthen, but if it does lengthen the war the prolongation will be so trifling as to be negligible.

I do not know the precise number of prisoners affected, but it surely cannot be more than a hundred thousand. I venture to guess that it must be well under a quarter of a million. It might conceivably be less than a hundred thousand. Will a hundred thousand or even a quarter of a million men have any appreciable effect in comparison with the millions of men which America is now actually bringing into the war? They will not. They cannot.

I confess I was unable to understand the attitude of the Government toward our whole man-power system, and when I see, as I have seen, Britons of 43 and 44, settled in life and quite unfitted by long habit for the existence of soldiers, being dragged into the army at the very moment when for every such British soldier America is putting in literally hundreds of young and suitable men, I am amazed. I am filled with compassion for my fellow-countrymen past the prime of life, and I regret that our authorities should produce so much suffering, dislocation, and actual loss for so little cause. It shows lack of imagination on somebody's part, and the general consequences can only be harmful.

A second argument is that the exchange, besides tending to lengthen the war, would operate favorably to Germany and unfavorably to ourselves, a correspondent of The Times the other day vouched that a certain Minister had used the following words:

"It would be most unfortunate to exchange thousands of well-fed Germans in the very best of health for the skeletons, invalids, and cripples our men have become in Germany."

There, indeed, you have the characteristic official attitude, the attitude of bargaining, of peddling, and you see that this attitude is not changed even when the bargaining is about human lives, human misery, and human anguish. I should feel differently if I thought there was the slightest chance of improving the lot of our fellow-countrymen so long as they remain in Germany, but there is no chance of improvement. Reprisals are useless.

The French at first were strong advocates of reprisals, but the French have been driven to exchange, and even if reprisals were effective, we could not employ reprisals. No Briton could bring himself or could be brought to murder, maltreat, humiliate, and starve German prisoners as Germans have murdered, maltreated, humiliated, and starved British prisoners. He simply could not do it. Not that he has a soft heart for the Germans, not a bit, but he has some regards for his own self-respect, his sense of decency of what is due not to the Germans, but to himself.

No, if our men in Germany are to be lifted from the rack upon which they are now stretched in torture there is no alternative to a general exchange. A general exchange has been proved possible and the arguments against it are merely trivial.

Hope of Action Now.

They will not bear a moment's serious examination. A general exchange must be brought about. The whole country is deeply interested in the affair, and just as I finish this article the news comes through that the Government, moved at last by the example of France, is ready to enter into negotiations with Germany for an exchange of prisoners on the lines of the French treaty. It is good news. It shows that certain people in Whitehall have realized the immense debt and duty which the nation owes to those fellow-countrymen of ours in Germany, a debt that we can never repay and a duty which we can never completely fulfill.

ITALIANS DOWN TEN AIRPLANES IN TWO DAYS

Artillery Engagements Between the Brenta and Piave—Successful Italian Raids.

ROME, May 25.—The official statement issued by the War Office today reads:

Between the Brenta and the Piave both artilleries have been fairly active. On the southern slopes of Sasso Rosso repeated enemy attacks led to lively hand-grenade fighting.

In the Monte Asolone region our patrols destroyed an advanced post and captured arms and war material.

On the Asiago Plateau British aviators bombed enemy lines of communication. Five hostile machines were brought down and a sixth was forced to land.

Following is the text of yesterday's official report:

On Costa de Salo our patrols penetrated to a portion of the enemy line, destroyed the garrisons and captured eleven prisoners, several rifles, and other material. An enemy counter-attack in the Zagnatorta region was repulsed and ten prisoners captured. Attempted hostile raids and attacks on Monte Vies, Monte Trappolo, (in the Asiago basin,) between the Brenta and the Piave, on Monte Pertica and at Porte di Salton failed.

Five enemy airplanes were brought down. We successfully bombarded aviation camps at Feltre and Motta di Livenza.

FIRST CRUISER U-BOAT DESTROYED BY BRITISH

LONDON, May 25.—German submarine of the cruiser type was sunk on May 11 in the latitude of Cape St. Vincent by a British Atlantic escort submarine. The Admiralty made this official announcement tonight. The statement says:

"One of our Atlantic escort submarines, returning to its base, reports that on May 11, in the latitude of Cape St. Vincent, while proceeding to meet a convoy, she sighted and sank a German submarine of the scout cruiser type. A heavy sea was running at the time. There were no survivors.

"Shortly afterward another enemy submarine was sighted, but by swift diving she escaped the fate of her consort.

"This being the first cruiser submarine destroyed, it has been decided to depart from the usual rule of not announcing the destruction of individual enemy submarines."

FRANCE SAVES SWISS FROM GERMAN GRIP

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

GENEVA, May 25.—France has distinctly won a diplomatic victory over Germany over the Swiss coaling question. The Federal Council has published its decision to accept the German terms, which, however, now have been considerably modified as a result of France's offer.

If Switzerland gets 85,000 tons monthly from France, at 150 francs per ton, with carriage free to the Swiss frontier, practically unconditionally, then clearly Germany would be placing herself in a most invidious position if she insisted upon her original terms. German control, therefore, disappears from the convention and its place is taken by purely Swiss control, intended to prevent German coal from being utilized in the manufacture of war material for the Allies. This, of course, is perfectly legitimate.

At the present time a similar form of control exists in Switzerland. For example, the Allies supply that country with a considerable proportion of its fats and oils and the Committee of Control sees that no lubricant from these sources is used in connection with machines employed in making war material for Germany. The agreement signed with Germany makes no reference to coal supplied by France, which is forthcoming quite unconditionally. This solution of a serious difficulty is gladly welcomed and apparently is causing strong pro-Ally feeling. It is generally realized by thinking Swiss that France's generous action freed their country from falling into the economic thralldom of Germany.

GERMAN-DUTCH ACCORD.

Together on Old Agreements, and Now Negotiating a New.

THE HAGUE, May 25.—The discussions between the Dutch and German negotiators on pending questions relative to the carrying out of former agreements have led to a complete accord, according to official announcement today.

Negotiations for a new agreement between the two countries were begun yesterday.

GERMANS FOMENT RUSSIAN DISPUTES

Pursue a Settled Policy of Inciting New Governments to Quarrels.

EXPLOITING THE UKRAINE

Central Powers Are Financing Big Companies to Insure Their Economic Control.

By JULIUS WEST.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

GENEVA, May 25.—Since the conclusion of the treaty of Brest-Litovsk German policy as regards the nationalities of Western Russia has been extremely simple. It consists of carrying out two injunctions, to get everything possible out of them and to keep them quarreling.

In Switzerland there are plentiful representatives of all parties in these nationalities, to say nothing of ubiquitous German propagandists, so that one gets all sides. During the last few days the Ukrainians have been realizing that German penetration and preparations for trade conquests in their country are by no means inconsistent with a carefully engineered project to maintain a perpetual instability of government.

New plans for the exploitation of Southern Russia are daily forthcoming. Already a whole series of companies have been brought into existence for the purpose of enabling Germany to make the most of her success. Herr Lehmann, a millionaire of Bremen, is Chairman of a company formed to import timber and wood products into Germany, which country subscribes half of the capital, the other half coming in equal parts from Vienna and Budapest. But the real controller will be the Imperial Economic Bureau in Berlin. Another company will organize Black Sea and river communications, for the purposes of a trade organization formed in Vienna and backed by the Austrian Government, called the International General Export and Import Company, which is also intended to exploit the Ukraine. It has a capital of £625,000.

On the other hand, it is obvious that the Central Powers propose to keep the Ukraine Government's attention off the exploitation policy. Already, before the Ukraine frontiers have been actually fixed, the people find themselves engaged in a whole series of disputes, all bearing signs of German origin. Take, for instance, the Crimea. Here the population is mainly Tartar, but it is economically dependent on South Russia. Turkey, Germany's faithful ally, has been lately putting in a claim for the Crimea, proposing to make Sebastopol a Turkish naval base, and openly declaring her intention of shortly converting the Black Sea into a Turkish lake. Ukrainians living in Switzerland, and in close touch with Kiev and Vienna, say Turkey already has gone so far as to land a couple of regiments in the Crimea. So the thousand-year-old struggle between Kiev and Constantinople appears about to revive at the instigation of the Germans.

The treaty of Bucharest contains clauses drafted with the similar object of keeping Rumania and Ukraine at loggerheads. Parts of Bessarabia, annexed to Rumania, are apparently inhabited by a population of which the Ukrainians form a majority. Nor is this all. The Province of Cholm, with its mixed Polish and Ukrainian population, provides, as at present divided, an admirable bone of contention. With these difficulties forced upon her, Ukraine is bound to remain a marionette State, with the Central Empires pulling the strings.

Peasant Uprisings in the Ukraine.

MOSCOW, May 18, (Associated Press.)—Peasant uprisings against the new Government in the Ukraine are reported in the evening papers. In the Tchernigov Government the peasants drove out the new officials and defeated German-Ukrainian troops sent to suppress the movement. In Poltava the peasants were victorious in a battle with the troops which lasted three days and resulted in heavy losses.

Peasant opposition and a strike by railroad men as a protest against the new régime are greatly interefering with the export of grain to Germany from the Ukraine, and the special commission in charge of exports is temporarily inactive.

General von Eichorn, the German commander in the Ukraine, has urgently requested that a large number of railroad men be sent there from Germany.

ITALIANS NOW FAVOR MOVE TO AID RUSSIA

Change Their Attitude and See Hope of Organizing Resistance to the Germans.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, May 25.—Italian public opinion is gradually changing with regard to the Russian situation. After the peace of Brest-Litovsk the Italians entirely abandoned hope of the Russians ever pulling themselves together to resist German invasion. Therefore they thought it was best to make plans without taking Russia into consideration.

When President Wilson sent his message of encouragement and sympathy to the Russian people the Italians considered it a mistake. Now, however, the press here upholds allied intervention in Russia. It is pointed out that the Russians only need good officers to organize and lead them against the Germans, whom they now realize desire to dominate the whole of Russia, enslaving her.

Another point strongly upheld here in all quarters is intervention by Japan in Siberia, especially since China has joined her, showing her disinterestedness. Deputy Colainnai, leader of the Radical Party, speaking on the subject, said: "There can be only one way to help Russia—that of encouraging intervention by Japan. Russians should be the first to ask for it. If an invitation to Japan came from them, apprehensions and suspicions would certainly cease."

PLANS FINANCIAL REFORMS.

Lenine Tires of Fiat Currency and Urges a Monthly Income Tax.

MOSCOW, May 20, (Associated Press.)—Addressing the representatives of the financial sections of the All-Russian Soviets, assembled in Moscow for the solution of financial problems, Premier Lenine declared that the temporary plan of raising money by means of the printing press and by levying contributions must be abandoned and a centralized taxation system be devised.

The Socialists, said the Premier, favored a property and income tax rather than indirect taxation, and he expressed expectation that the Soviet Government would adopt a general income tax, collected monthly.

The present currency, the Premier announced, would soon be replaced by new money. Persons holding small sums would be paid ruble for ruble, but large holdings would be refunded at a discount. The Premier predicted that the Bourgeoisie, who, he said, were hoarding large sums of money, would resist the plan, but he urged the Socialists to unite "in this final battle necessary to economic reforms."

SOVIETS REPORT SUCCESSES.

By ARTHUR RANSOME.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MOSCOW, May 16, (Delayed.)—The latest news from Siberia is that the Irkutsk-Vladivostok Railway is clear, and that the forces of Colonel Semenoff, the Cossack leader, are held in check by the newly formed troops of the Soviets. Infantry and Cossacks of these forces are said to have had complete success. One of Semenoff's bands, sent in the direction of Troitzkohavsk, has been disposed of by them, the rank and file either surrendering their arms or joining the Soviet troops.

In the Orenburg district, another centre of counter-revolutionary activity connected with the Semenoff movement, the Bolshevist authorities report satisfactory developments, traffic on the Orenburg-Samara Railway having been resumed. The Soviet official statement says: "No foreign intervention for us. We are convinced that we shall destroy every one of these counter-revolutionary bands."

ROMANOFFS TO QUIT RUSSIA.

German Report That Grand Duke Nicholas Will Go to Montenegro.

LONDON, May 25.—According to information received from the German Embassy at Moscow, says an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from that city under date of May 18, the members of the Romanoff family now in Kiev have received permission to leave Russia by way of Germany. Grand Duke Nicholas, the dispatch says, will go to Montenegro, and the Dowager Empress to Copenhagen.

NEW RUSSIAN OVERTURES.

Northern Committee Invites Trade Co-operation of America.

The American-Russian Chamber of Commerce, with headquarters in this city, announced yesterday that it had received a communication from the Russian Embassy in Washington announcing the formation of the northern section of the Russian-American Committee at the port of Archangel.

This Russian-American Committee has identical aims with those of the Russian-American Committee of Petrograd, which was formed a year ago, and it will be very glad indeed to do everything in its power to assist American firms in the development of Russian-American relationships in Northern Russia.

The northern section consists of prominent Russian commercial men, including I. I. Danishevsky, Chairman; F. F. Landman, and A. S. Tchoudinoff, together with Felix Cole, American Vice Consul.

The American-Russian Chamber of Commerce, in commenting upon the formation of the committee, said:

"The formation of this section of the Russian-American Committee, taken in connection with the formation of the Far Eastern Russian-American Committee, is an additional indication of the growing influences in Russia which we hope will make it possible to bring about the development of an effective co-operation between Russia and the United States."

Swiss Admit a Bolshevist Mission.

GENEVA, May 24.—The Swiss Government has admitted a mission of Bolsheviki, headed by M. Bersine, a Lithuanian, on condition that it will not attempt to provoke disorder. As Switzerland has not recognized the Bolshevist Government, the mission is unofficial. M. Bersine formerly lived in Paris, and was active in organising the Bolsheviki at Riga.

Finnish Cabinet Resigns.

STOCKHOLM, May 25.—The Finnish Cabinet has resigned as a result of the appointment of former Premier Zvinhufvud as temporary Dictator. M. Paasikivi, a member of the Old Finnish Party and a former Senator, has been asked by the Dictator to form a Cabinet.

AMERICAN HOSPITAL SAVES MANY LIVES

AMERICAN GRAVES SHELLED

Germans Deliberately Tear Up Cemetery—Baseball Teams Play In Their Gas Masks.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 24, (Associated Press.)—The work of the American hospital units in Picardy has won high praise from both French and British officials. By the establishment of a non-transportable field hospital only a short distance from the front line, the first of its kind to be introduced, it has been possible to perform operations which seem to be little short of miraculous.

Of 155 cases recently admitted, operations were performed on 118 men, and the mortality was only 30 per cent. The doctors say that had it not been for this hospital so near the scene of action the mortality undoubtedly would have been 80 or 90 per cent.

This hospital is situated in a picturesque bit of country. It is surrounded by wild flowers. The principal building formerly was the country home of a French Count, who now lives in the stable with the Countess. It is said this hospital is one of the most complete in Europe. It is equipped with every necessity.

Near the hospital is a cemetery in which nearly 100 Americans are buried. When all is quiet along the front and the hospital attendants have some spare time they pick wild flowers and decorate the graves. Many aged French women also spend much time in this way. They say this is little enough for them to do to show their appreciation of what American mothers are doing for France.

The Germans have been deliberately shelling an American cemetery near the front in Picardy. Recently one grave was torn up four times. It may be cited in contrast that the Americans in this sector a few days ago took a German prisoner who was mortally wounded. He died and received a Christian funeral and burial in the American cemetery near the front. His grave was marked in the same manner as the others.

Except artillery activity, the American front in Picardy has been quiet for several days. There are signs behind the German lines of slight movements, but nothing further to indicate that the enemy is preparing to launch an attack here.

The recent enemy air raids over French villages in the rear of our lines have only served to incense the Americans and make them more determined when they see women, children, and old men needlessly killed by bombs, and the lives of American wounded and sick in the hospitals endangered.

The Bavarian troops which have just arrived opposite the American sector northwest of Toul suffered casualties of 50 per cent. of their effectives while they were engaged in the north of France in the recent offensive, according to reliable information received today. Virtually all these losses were in killed and wounded, as the Bavarians, it is declared, lost only one man taken prisoner.

These Germans are apparently celebrating their arrival in a comparatively quiet sector, as for the last two nights loud singing and other sounds of jubilation have been heard in the enemy lines.

Leaves of absence again are being granted in the American expeditionary forces to troops serving elsewhere than on the northern battlefronts of the Somme and Flanders. In the case of organizations which may leave for that zone all leaves will be automatically discontinued on receipt of orders to proceed northward.

An innovation in training recently put in practice back of the American lines is to have the men while playing baseball in their recreation periods wear their gas masks throughout the game the idea being to get them accustomed to breathing properly in these protective devices under all conditions.

Tomorrow an exhibition game will be played with Hank Gowdy, the former Boston star, and other soldiers with big reputations on the baseball field participating. Gowdy, wearing his gas mask, will catch for one of the teams, and all the other players will be similarly equipped. It was freely predicted tonight that the umpires would have an easy time of it during this contest.

Quiet Along the Toul Sector.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 25, (Associated Press.)—The last forty-eight hours have been the quietest in the Toul sector since the Americans took it over. In that period only ninety enemy shells fell within the whole sector. The American artillery was somewhat more active, the American shells fired numbering into the hundreds.

Americans this morning watching German Archies shelling a plane suddenly observed one smoke-puff burst directly underneath the machine, which dived earthward. A few hundred yards above the ground, however, the pilot seemed to gain momentary control, for the machine straightened out. It only remained straight for a moment, when it sideslipped and crashed to the earth between the Quart de Reserve and La Hayville.

The American patrols continue their work nightly. Last night one entered the German positions and proceeded as far back as the second line southwest of Sonnard Wood without encountering a single German, although several work parties were heard.

One of the American patrols in the Luneville sector this morning found the body of a dead German in No Man's Land. Apparently the man had been killed by shell fire, and the patrol brought in much valuable information obtained from papers in his pockets.

MEXICO RECALLS ENVOY TO CUBA

Relations Severed to Serve the "Highest Interests" of Both Nations, Aguilar Says.

TALKS OF LATE FRIENDSHIP

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, May 25.—Explaining the retirement of the Mexican Minister to Cuba, General Candido Aguilar, Secretary of Foreign Relations, made this statement:

"In order to avoid wrong impressions it is made known to the public that the Government of Mexico, by agreement of the President and Cabinet, has decided to recall the Mexican diplomat accredited to the Government of Cuba and to suspend for an indefinite time the sending of a new representative, considering it indispensable to take these measures for the highest interests of both countries in the actual moments of the world's crisis. Guided by the state of war in which Cuba is now engaged, the Cuban Government has been obliged to pass measures which in many cases hurt the interests of the Mexican Government's citizens. For this reason the Mexican Legation has in duty made frequent representations before the Cuban Government which were useless and shortened the liberty of action of a friendly republic which found itself in an afflicted situation.

"Consequently our diplomatic efforts could not produce in these critical moments appreciable practical results, but only friction which it would be necessary to treat with later to maintain fraternal sentiments of solidarity which always have bound us with Cuba and all Spanish-American countries. The retiring diplomatic representative from Cuba of the Government of Mexico gives eloquent proof of the consideration and respect of the sovereignty of a friendly Government which is passing through critical moments. At the same time he gives proof of confidence, as a result of which the Government of Mexico expects its citizens will be treated with all the benevolence permitted by its laws and institutions under which protection they remain in that republic.

"Working in this manner the Government of Mexico does nothing more than faithfully comply with the form of conduct that Citizen Venustiano Carranza, President of the Republic of Mexico, has proclaimed uncountable times as the highest ideal of the society of nations, equality of nationals and foreigners, complete submission of all to the sovereignty of a nation. After passing the crisis like that, which originated in the revolution in our country, Mexico and Cuba will be in a state to renew diplomatic relations on a basis of justice and equality only, and the great aspiration of the Mexican Government in her international relations. "AGUILAR."

MEXICO CITY, May 24.—That Mexico had severed diplomatic relations with Cuba was learned officially late today after a report that the Mexican Chargé d'Affaires at Havana and the Cuban Minister here had been recalled from their respective posts had been confirmed at the Foreign Office.

The Cuban Minister to Mexico, Dr. Esequiel Garcia Ensenat, has not yet arrived in Mexico City, having been appointed only recently. During the interval Dr. Luis Santamaris y Calvo has been acting as Chargé. It was reported recently that he would leave for Cuba on a vacation and would return with the new Minister. The Mexican Chargé at Havana is Alberto C. Franco.

HAVANA OPINIONS VARY.

Divergent Views of Situation Between Cuba and Mexico.

HAVANA, May 25.—The exact situation with reference to the diplomatic relations between the Cuban and Mexican republics is difficult to define in view of the wide divergence of interpretations placed upon the departure of the Mexican Chargé d'Affaires from Havana, who, before sailing, paid a courteous and friendly visit to President Menocal.

Apparently his departure had no more significance than that of any other diplomat returning home to make a report to his Government. That the Cuban Chargé in Mexico has been recalled recently is merely a coincidence and not connected with any question pending with Mexico.

Sub-Secretary of State Patterson stated to the press that the reports that the diplomatic relations had been broken off were groundless, and showed a dispatch from the Cuban Chargé in Mexico, Senor Santamaria, stating that the latter had been informed by the Mexican Minister of Foreign Relations that the recall of the Mexican Chargé did not constitute a rupture of diplomatic relations.

STEP PUZZLES WASHINGTON.

No Diplomatic Parallel for Mexico's Action Against Cuba.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—While officials of the State Department, the Mexican Embassy, and the Cuban Legation profess ignorance of what has happened, the official statement given to the press in Mexico City that the Mexican Government had broken diplomatic relations with Cuba left no doubt in the minds of those concerned that the break had taken place.

The whole incident is puzzling to Washington, however. As the situation is understood here after study of the official statement, Mexico has severed diplomatic relations with Cuba in the fear that if the two Governments continued to do business they would become engaged in a violent quarrel. This is a unique occurrence in diplomacy and officials and others have been trying today to give it understandable form.

The explanation suggested by some acquainted with what has been passing between Mexico and Cuba is that protests directed against Cuba by Mexico have not been heeded and Mexico has taken the unusual course announced on the ground that if more protests were made and unheeded Mexico would have no other recourse than to undertake reprisals. Mexico's main grievance against Cuba is said to be that, according to the Mexican contention, Havana is the centre of conspiracy designed to force General Carranza out of office as President of Mexico.

The Cubans, who have joined the Allies in the war against Germany, have their own grievance against Mexico voiced in the charge or suspicion that Mexico is the centre of German propaganda in the West Indies and that the propagandists are active in Cuba.

As an ally and close friend of the United States, Cuba has taken action along the lines of this Government in doing everything possible to aid the allied nations in winning the war. She has followed the lead of this country in food conservation and in curtailing exports, and this is supposed to have irritated Mexico, which is dependent on Cuba for certain products.

Another possible cause of irritation in Mexico is found in the report that a Mexican official bound for the Argentine by way of Havana lost his baggage in Havana, and believed that it had been sequestrated by Cuban officials for the purpose of examination to ascertain if his mission to South America was in the interest of Germany.

Even in these days of quick telegraphic service the action of the Mexican Government lacks explanation, and officials of the United States Government decline to comment on it. They profess ignorance of what has occurred to strain the relations of the two Latin American republics.

SEES HAND OF GERMANY.

Cuban Diplomat Here Thinks Mexico Strikes at America.

Juan L. Montalvo, Cuban Minister of the Interior, who came to New York recently for his health, expressed surprise yesterday when informed that Mexico had announced the breaking off of diplomatic relations with Cuba. As head of the army, navy, and secret police of the island republic, he said he had received no advices from Havana on the subject. He added that he would cable President Menocal at once.

After reading the statement of General Aguilar, Mexican Minister of Foreign Affairs, explaining the recall of the Mexican diplomatic representative in Cuba, Mr. Montalvo expressed the belief that Mexico was "striking at the United States through Cuba."

"Mexico," he said, "is actuated without a doubt by hostility toward the United States and is striking at it through Cuba. President Carranza has said privately, I am informed, that he favored the German cause in this war, although he has never admitted it officially.

"General Aguilar's protestations of Mexico's friendship for Cuba are in my opinion insincere. He well knows that Cuba is acting in co-operation with the Allies and at the request of the United States, to whom Cuba owes so much, in handling her exports.

"I believe this severance of diplomatic relations is simply a manoeuvre on the part of the Mexican Government to obtain a greater amount of food and other products from Cuba, well knowing that in the case of sugar, at least, our output for many months has been contracted for by the United States and her allies, excepting a small surplus which has been available to Mexico and other countries not in the war. It is untrue that Cuba at any time has withheld sugar from Mexico, except as the exigencies of war and the obligations growing out of it have forced us to limit our exports."

The effect of Mexico's possibly cutting off its exports of peas, beans, and petroleum to Cuba, Mr. Montalvo said would not be serious. The gravity of the situation for the Allies, he thought, rested more upon what disposition the Carranza Government might show toward them in regard to the supply of oil from the Tampico fields for the allied navies.

"Cuba is prepared, however, for anything the Mexican Government may be planning to do," continued Mr. Montalvo. "I shall lose no time in getting back home when officially apprised of the new turn that affairs have taken.

"Two days before I left Havana, for New York a Mexican gunboat appeared in the harbor and was rigidly searched by my orders. Aboard her we found a German spy and Señor Yaldro Fabela, Mexican Minister to Argentina. We made no arrests, however, and, after a short delay, allowed them to proceed.

"The report that we had confiscated or stolen Fabela's baggage is untrue; we seized nothing. But this incident, I suppose, has been exaggerated by the pro-German propagandists in Mexico and made to inflame Mexican sentiment against us.

"On account of this war Cuba has been obliged to maintain a strict censorship, and many suspects from Mexico have been taken into custody. We have no internment camps, so all we do is to send them back to Mexico as undesirables.

"Much mail in furtherance of German designs has also been intercepted. The nature of the letters seized by us aboard Mexican and Spanish steamers proved, beyond a doubt, the intense pro-German sentiment of the Mexican Government and people and that Carranza is endeavoring to aid the Central Powers in every way. I see only the hand of Germany in this new development of affairs."

ROME CHEERS WILSON.

Applause Greets Every Mention of His Name at War Celebration.

ROME, Friday, May 24.—President Wilson's message to Italy on the occasion of the third anniversary of this country's entrance into the war was published in all the newspapers today, and was read in public by Hamilton Holt, representing the United States, before an immense crowd, which included Cabinet Ministers and diplomats. The Prince of Wales, in the name of England, also addressed the assembled throng. Ambassador Page was another speaker.

An immense procession of several hundred thousand persons with music and banners marched through the main thoroughfares of the city, which was gay with the bunting of the allied nations and the national colors. The multitude was addressed from the steps of the Capitol by Prince Colonna, the Mayor of Rome, whose every mention of America and President Wilson was greeted with applause.

DISCUSS AIRCRAFT INQUIRY.

Hughes and Thomas Confer on Proposed Senate Investigation.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—The scope of the proposed inquiry into aircraft production to be undertaken by the Senate Military Committee was discussed at a conference today between Charles E. Hughes, who is to conduct the Department of Justice's aircraft investigation, and Senator Thomas of Colorado, Chairman of the Military Committee's aircraft sub-committee.

At the conclusion of the conference it was announced that nothing would be determined as to the sub-committee's investigation until members of the committee had conferred. Mr. Hughes, who recently objected to the committee's going into phases of the aircraft matter which might give immunity to witnesses, issued this statement after the conference:

"Of course I assume that the Senate committee will act according to its own views with respect to the advisability of proceeding with the inquiry into aircraft matters. I have no desire to make any suggestions, and I have nothing to add to what I said in my letter to the Attorney General."

LANSING AT COLUMBIA.

Lord Reading Will Also Speak on Commencement Day.

It was announced at Columbia University yesterday that Secretary of State Lansing and Lord Reading would be the speakers at the university luncheon to be held on Commencement Day, June 5. After the luncheon the alumni will attend the baseball game with the team from the University of Pennsylvania and the dedication of the memorial to Dean Van Amringe on South Field.

The usual campus night celebration that has been held on the eve of commencement in other years has been omitted because of the war and the alumni will be asked to gather at the Columbia University Club. The class day exercises of the Columbia College graduates will be held on June 3, and the presentation of the service flag by the Trustees will be made immediately after the dedication of the memorial.

Hawaiian Prohibition Bill Signed.

EXEMPTS HONEST CRITICS.

Gregory Warns Attorneys About Enforcement of New Spy Act.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—United States Attorneys have been instructed by Attorney General Gregory to enforce aggressively the recent amendment to the Espionage act directed at disloyal utterances, but to take special care not to prevent "honest, legitimate criticism of the Administration or discussion of Government policies."

"The prompt and aggressive enforcement of this act is of the highest importance in suppressing disloyal utterances and preventing breaches of peace," said the Attorney General in letters to the District Attorneys. "It is also of great importance that this statute be administered with discretion. It should not be permitted to become the medium whereby efforts are made to suppress honest, legitimate criticism of the Administration or discussion of Government policies, nor should it be permitted to become a medium for personal feuds or persecution. The wide scope of the act and powers conferred increase the importance of discretion in administering it. Protection of loyal persons from unjust suspicion and prosecution is quite as important as the suppression of actual disloyalty.

"All cases which clearly violate this law should be promptly and vigorously prosecuted, but care should be exercised to avoid unjustified arrests and prosecution."

PREDICTS DOOM OF KAISER.

British Minister of Pensions Says War Lords Must Pay Penalty.

LONDON, May 25.—"I believe this war will have been fought in vain if at its conclusion the Kaiser and his war lords do not find their heads in a noose," said John Hodge, Minister of Pensions and a Labor Party leader, in an address today.

"An inconclusive peace would be a greater disaster than continuance of the war. No matter what the sacrifice, we have got to fight to the finish."

SAYS 'FREE BALKANS' OR NO WORLD PEACE

Dr. Masaryk, Leader of Suppressed Nationalities in Austria, Speaks Here.

SEES 10,000 SLAVS PARADE

The nineteen nations in the Balkans must be free and independent because the German push toward the East is directed toward the smaller nations of the Balkans, which it desires to use as a bridge to Asia and Africa; therefore, only the organization and freedom of these nations will give lasting peace to Europe and to mankind.

This was the declaration made last night by Dr. Thomas G. Masaryk, head of the Czechoslovak revolutionary movement against Austria-Hungary. Dr. Masaryk spoke at a meeting in Carnegie Hill held in his honor by the Bohemian National Alliance and the Slovak League. He received an ovation when he took the platform and was greeted with cries of "Nech Zye!" (Long live!) and "Na Zdar." (Success!)

Dr. Masaryk first reviewed a parade of about 10,000 members representing all the Slavic societies in New York. When he arose to speak, following an enthusiastic reception, his voice vibrated with emotion as he thanked his countrymen for their appreciation, which he accepted in behalf of their common land.

He denounced Austria-Hungary as "an organization of violence," where the minority of two nations ruled a majority of seven nations. Speaking of Russia, from which he has just come, he said that the aim of the United States and its Allies ought to be the organization of a democratic Russia.

"A nation of 180,000,000 must not be allowed to become a prey to Germany," he declared. "Your President says you must be generous. I say that, with respect to Russia, you must be generous." Every mention by the speaker and by the Chairman, Nicholas Murray Butler, of the name of President Wilson was loudly cheered.

Professor Masaryk told proudly of the Slavs, who at the first opportunity deserted from the armies of the Central Powers and enrolled under the banners of France and of Italy. In Russia, he said, 50,000 Slav prisoners of war had been organized to fight against the country where they were oppressed, and he hoped that as many more would soon be ready for the same purpose.

Must Get Rid of Hapsburgs.

"We are forced—we must get rid of Austria-Hungary and the Hapsburgs," asserted the speaker to a roar of applause. "A leader of the Polish Socialists in the Austria-Hungary Reichsrat said that at least 30,000, and perhaps 40,000 civilians alone, and many more thousands of soldiers, all slavs, had been executed in the first year of the war. In the face of such Austrian atrocities, we not only have the right but the duty to sever all our connections with the Austrian House of Hapsburg.

"We will not be satisfied if Austria-Hungary grants us national autonomy. No, we will be independent. We must be independent.

"We nations of the east of Europe are bound together for life and death against the Germans," he said. "Bohemia, if she is free, will have the South Slav nation as its ally. Not only the Slavs in Austria, but the Rumanians and the Italians must be free. Count Czernin at Brest-Litovsk accepted the Russia formula of no annexations. We now see Austria annexing part of Rumania. Germany is trying to subjugate the nations of the east. The plan involves the absolute absorption of Austria, which today is only independent nominally. In fact it is governed by Berlin. Germany calls Austria the bridge to Asia. The German plan is to unite the old world, Europe, Asia, and Africa. The expression Berlin to Bagdad should now read, Berlin to Cairo."

QUOTA FOR THE NATION ALREADY SUBSCRIBED

WASHINGTON, May 25.—With subscriptions to the American Red Cross Second War Mercy Fund now estimated at more than the minimum quota of $100,000,000, workers in the campaign rested tonight in preparation for a strenuous closing day Monday. Officials expect a big outpouring of dollars at the finish, and expressed confidence tonight that the fund would be heavily over-subscribed.

Atlantic, including Greater New York	$35,819,518
Northwestern	2,374,723
Foreign	900,000

A message from King Albert of Belgium to President Wilson, thanking the nation for its aid to his stricken people, and another from General Pershing commending the Red Cross work in France, were received today, and were expected to give impetus to the War Fund drive. General Pershing's message follows:

Our people may well be proud of the record of the Red Cross. The wonderful story can hardly be told in words. It could best be told by the widows and orphans of our gallant allies, and by the mutilated soldiers to whom it has ministered. In giving prompt and efficient relief the Red Cross has won the eternal gratitude of millions of people. The armies of France, from commanders down, testify to the great good it has accomplished. With our rapidly increasing forces in France, the care of our own men now becomes the most important object of our solicitude. In this great work the Red Cross is indispensable.

Headquarters of the Red Cross here were flooded today with messages from all over the country giving subscriptions for districts, cities, and counties, and it was impossible to tabulate all returns. Those counted showed that $97,021,803 had been raised, but it was estimated that many millions in addition had been subscribed.

Western cities are reporting totals far in excess of their quotas. St. Paul, Spokane, Portland, Tacoma, and Kansas City are among the cities which have surpassed their allotments.

Auto Owners Urged to Make Repairs

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 25.—The Associated Automobile Clubs of New Jersey, meeting here today, issued a request that motor owners drive their own cars and make repairs, thereby releasing men for war work. A resolution also was adopted urging the Government to employ enemy aliens and prisoners of war on road construction. Walter J. Busby of the State Highway Commission, said that New Jersey had planned 625 miles of new roads next year, but that war conditions had made it necessary to cut the State's program by two-thirds. He added that it now cost $40,000 to build a mile of road where it used to cost only $25,000.

the quarter of a million mark before noon yesterday. At that time account had not been taken of contributions from its corporations and industrial divisions. Its teams were still working industriously and efficiently. A total of not less than $500,000 was predicted by C. G. N. Thomas, Chairman of the Queens Borough Campaign Committee.

"Darwin R. James, Jr., Chairman of the Second Red Cross War Fund Committee of Brooklyn, was too busy, he said yesterday, to make predictions. The Brooklyn quota of $2,000,000 which Mr. James accepted when he took the committee Chairmanship, was generally recognized as a difficult undertaking. The half-way mark was passed in Brooklyn yesterday morning, and reports had not then been received in any adequate form from the Industrial Division, the Profit-Sharing Division, nor from the House-to-House Division. Brooklyn as yet has had reports from only a very small number of the corporations located in that borough. Its campaign will close tomorrow evening, at which time there certainly will be in its treasury cash and pledges amounting to more than $2,000,000.

"Continued good reports are being received from the Corporations Division. More particularly were the campaigners pleased because of the growth of that division out of the city. This growth will not materially increase the New York reports, but will swell the grand total of the whole fund."

The following table was issued on yesterday's results:

Borough President Issues Appeal.

Borough President Edward Reigelmann of Brooklyn issued yesterday a call to the people living there to make liberal contributions in the last two days of the campaign.

The miniature theatre booth on the Public Library steps, which is under the direction of Mrs. Joseph R. Grismer, was the centre of a throng of willing contributors all yesterday afternoon. James Montgomery Flagg drew portraits of several persons among the crowd for $1,000 each. Among those who posed for the artist were Elsie Ferguson and Mrs. Mitchel Hall.

Among the singers and actors who assisted in obtaining contributions were David Bispham, Marguerite Sylva, Frances Starr, Grace George, Elsie Ferguson, and Edmund Breese. The Grace Church Choir and the Commonwealth Chorus also assisted. By far the most successful at obtaining contributions were H. H. Holden, a sailor, who threw his hat into the crowd and refused to take it back unless some one put a dollar in it, and Tozart, the vagabond artist who has been appearing at the Hippodrome, and who drew rapid sketches of persons in the audience and sold them to them for whatever they cared to give to the Red Cross. Mrs. Grismer said that about $3,000 was collected at the booth yesterday, and that between $12,000 and $15,000 had been raised there since the beginning of the drive.

Collect $7,028 in One Building.

One of the liveliest Red Cross campaigns in the downtown district was planned and carried through successfully in the Federal Exports Building, 42 Broadway, by Mrs. Maurice Jacques Sturm as Captain, assisted by Miss Isabelle Wotherspoon, Mrs. Harry Koster, Mrs. Louis Lackenbach, Miss Edith Williams, Miss Katherine Orley, and Miss Alice Fox. These seven collected $7,028 from the building for the fund, and of this $1,800 was collected in the ground floor corridor, $1,495 of it by Mrs. Sturm in person, who held an impromptu auction. Mrs. Sturm made and enforced one rigid rule for her company—no soliciting, no clutching of sleeves or coat lapels, and no thrusting of deposit boxes into the faces of passersby.

Ball at Hotel Astor a Success.

More than 5,000 persons gathered in the cause of mercy at the Hotel Astor last night. The affair, which swelled the funds of the Red Cross by many thousands of dollars, was arranged by the Allied Theatrical and Motion Picture Team, and many prominent men and women in the theatrical world and society attended. It was the first real ball since war was declared, and with anxiety to foster such a worthy cause, all put aside their aversion to frivolity in wartime.

Every available room on the first floor of the Astor was opened to accommodate the ever-increasing numbers. All the boxes and tickets were sold several days ago, but many who were unsuccessful in obtaining tickets clamored for admittance at the door. So by midnight there was very little dancing space and comfortable standing room was to be had only in the lobby of the hotel. A huge red cross covered the ceiling of the ballroom, and this same emblem occasionally dotted the American flags draped over the two tiers of boxes.

The boxholders included Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., Miss Billie Burke, Charles E. Gehring, Walter Vincent, E. E. Albee, and William Fox, Captain of the Allied Theatrical and Motion-Picture Team. Some of those present were Geraldine Farrar, Grace George, Ethel Barrymore, Ina Claire, Hazel Dawn, Alla Nazimova, Laurette Taylor, Charlotte Walker, and Peggy Wood.

Forty city departments had reported yesterday that 100 per cent. of their staffs had subscribed, the average rate of subscription being $10. Six Federal departments in the city reached 100 per cent. standards yesterday. There are about 30,000 Federal employes in this city and Collector of the Port Byron R. Newton estimated yesterday that $150,000 would be raised from them. The New York Newspaper Web Pressmen announced that it had been decided at a meeting of the union to place an assessment of one day's pay on each of its members, thus raising $6,000 for the Red Cross. The Master Plumbers' Association announced that their organization had raised $4,500 in cash and pledges among its members.

The committee in charge of the Red Cross drive on the east side announced that among the gifts it had received was one of twelve ambulances and a motor truck for the Red Cross by Samuel C. Lamport, Chairman of the Educational Division of the American Jewish Committee.

Sell Vegetables at Ritz-Carlton.

Mrs. J. D. Beale and Mrs. A. M. Anderson, who have charge of the Red Cross booth at the Ritz-Carlton, started yesterday to sell vegetables to visitors to the hotel. Turnips, carrots, liberty cabbages, and asparagus were among the novel offerings sold for fancy prices, one bunch of asparagus being bought by Colonel F. C. Henderson for $150. Three posters by Harrison Fisher, which the artist autographed, were sold in the dining room, Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt bidding $500 for one and Judge Mayer paying $600 for the other two posters. Two carnations were sold for $90.

Coney Island turned out yesterday to observe Red Cross Day. There was a parade down Surf Avenue and later in the afternoon speech making in Seaside Park. At least 50,000 persons gathered to watch the march, and a large number went to the park, where they formed in a vast crowd about the speaker's stand. In the parade were four companies of soldiers from Fort Hamilton, 300 sailors from various units, and 3,000 Coney Island school children. The speakers were Senator William M. Calder and Captain A. Price Simmonds. To vary the amusement of the afternoon Harry Gardiner, the "human fly," ascended the sides of several buildings along Surf Avenue.

Today is expected to be the greatest day for the house-to-house canvass. More than 50,000 women in the costumes of Red Cross nurses will take part in the residential districts. Some of the chief places where the campaign will be waged today are described in the following program of the major events of the day:

9:00 A. M. to 1:00 P. M.—Ballroom, Hotel Ritz-Carlton; exhibition of paintings and other works of art donated to the War Fund of Red Cross; admission free.

7:30 P. M.—Seventy-first Regiment Armory, Thirty-fourth Street and Park Avenue; meeting under auspices of Polish Citizens' Committee; Ignace Jan Paderewski and Captain Thomas C. Seddon of British Army will speak.

8:00 P. M. to 11:00 P. M.—Open-air shows of Red Cross war song work at Madison Square, Herald Square, Times Square, Fifth Avenue and Forty-second Street, Columbus Circle, 125th Street and Seventh Avenue.

Paderewski to Preside.

Amparito Farrar will be one of the singers in the afternoon at the house of Mrs. Vanderbilt in a program that will include George Barrere, Caroline Lazzari, May Peterson, Walter Green, Edwin Grasse, and Mr. Dunne. Singers and entertainers in the evening will be Namara, Elizabeth Wheeler, Tom Dobson, William Wheeler, and Ruth Draper. Ignace Jan Paderewski will preside at a great Red Cross meeting tonight at the Seventy-first Regiment Armory, at Thirty-fourth Street and Park Avenue. There will be a concert and addresses at the Temple Israel, 26 West 114th Street.

The collection of valuable art objects on exhibition at the Ritz-Carlton will be sold at auction tomorrow evening at 9 o'clock. Among the notable pieces is an early fifteenth century French carved and polychromed wood plaque, representing St. Gregory resuscitating the dead, donated by Denotte; a sixteenth century Italian banner, bearing in the centre a painting of the Madonna and Child, given by Charles, and early sixteenth century Flemish tapestry, with a shepherd and piper for the scheme of the woof, which was woven by Guillaume Waerniers in Lille after a painting by D. Teniers, the younger, donated by P. W. French; two paintings by Francesco Guardi, the Venetian artist, who wielded a brush between 1712 and 1793, one a view of St. Mark's Square in Venice, and another of the same scene showing the Procurator's building, with a crowd holding a meeting near the Grand Canal, are donated by F. Rieinberger.

Works from Laking Collection.

From the collection of Sir Guy Laking there is a sixteenth century Flemish carved wood figure of King David, a terra cotta group entitled "The Apparition of Venus to Eneas," done in 1645 by Pierre Pouget; a Louis XVI. Cartel clock, from the collection of Jules Porges of Paris; a painting from the collection of Judge Hilton of a fleet in Venice, signed by Martin Rico; fifty numbered aquatint and dry point etchings of President Wilson's portrait, signed by the artist, A. Rasko; painting of Sir Thomas Twysden Bart, one of Charles II.'s friends, painted by Michael Dahdl, the artist who immortalized Nell Gwyn as the Orange Girl; portrait of a young man, from the Stanford White collection, by Marcellus Koffermans, a Flemish artist of the early sixteenth century; a seventeenth century Chinese plate of the Ming dynasty, a ninth century Rakka tabouret, excavated from the ruins of the Palace of Haroun-al-Rashid; painting of a Dutch seaport by Gerard; a landscape by Weiss; an early fifteenth century Persoan plaque, a sixteenth century Rhodian plaque, a seventeenth century Bokhara plaque; a painting by T. Francis Murphy of changing maples, two paintings, "Peace" and "Justice," by Charles Coypel, dated 1723, and a number of smaller objects of art. Harrington Mann and Louis Mark have each given canvases on which the portraits of the buyers will be painted.

A watch made in Paris in 1790, and which appeared in South America in 1825, where it was bought by an American, is a prize that any one may win who wants to help the Red Cross. The watch is owned by Miss Florence B. Vibber, a public school teacher, who wants to do what she can to help the Red Cross in its drive, and is willing to sell her treasure and give all the proceeds to war relief.

The envelope bearing President Wilson's signature and the new 24-cent airplane stamp carried on the first airplane postal trip from Washington to Postmaster Patten of this city will be sold at auction on Tuesday evening, June 11 at the Collectors' Club, 120 West Forty-ninth Street, by J. C. Morgenthau, with a collection of stamps of which the English Colonials formed by the late Charles F. Waldron comprise a large part. The airplane stamp will be sold for the benefit of the Red Cross, and Noah W. Taussig of 111 Wall Street, President of the American Molasses Company, has offered to start the bidding at $1,000.

Joseph P. Day announced yesterday that the President's Red Cross proclamation, lost recently by James R. Murphy, Assistant Alien Property Custodian, had been recovered. Mr. Day said the document had been returned by Louis Leonard, chauffeur, who found it in the taxicab used by Mr. Murphy in riding from the Pennsylvania Station to his hotel. It was stated that the original, rather than the second proclamation which the President signed, would be auctioned for the benefit of the Red Cross.

The Red Cross Chapter for the southern part of Suffolk County, with headquarters at Islip, L. I., announced yesterday that it had received a cable message from William K. Vanderbilt in France saying that he would contribute $50,000 to the war fund through the chapter. When the officials of the chapter learned that a quota of $107,000 had been allotted to them, or about $5.50 per capita in population, they cabled to Mr. Vanderbilt, whose residence is at Oakdale, to place his subscription with the chapter. Many other large contributions were received, and the fund is almost completed.

election districts in the Borough of Manhattan an average of only two women had enrolled during the first three hours that the polling places were open. In many election districts in the Bronx not one enrollment had been made up to 11 o'clock yesterday forenoon. At 10 o'clock the average for the southern and most populous portion of that borough was one woman voter to an election district.

The questions asked of each woman as to her age caused several complications. Most of the women answered concisely, but frequently the answer would be, "Over 30." Then the official would inquire if she had enrolled in the State census, and when the would-be voter replied that she had not the embarrassing point was raised as to whether she had escaped the State census legally because she was "over 50." Several changes had to be made in the record, but in no instance did the inquisitive official escape a black look.

These figures show the progress of enrollment in districts of the Bronx up to 10 o'clock yesterday forenoon: Fifteenth Election District of the First Assembly District, 6; Eighteenth Election District of the First, 4; Forty-third Election District of the First, 1; Forty-first Election District of the First, 0; Twenty-second Election District, Second Assembly District, 1; Twenty-ninth Election District, First Assembly District, 0, and Thirty-fourth Election District of the First, 0.

In west side districts of Manhattan, where the normal registration of men is between 300 and 400, from 8 to 30 women had enrolled up to noon. From Queens and Richmond came similar reports. In these boroughs the political organizations had done practically nothing to get the women out.

Did Better in Brooklyn.

Brooklyn probably did better than any of the other boroughs, but even there the early enrollment was much lighter than the suffrage leaders and the politicians had expected. In the Flatbush section the business of the day opened fairly well. Young women, business bound, and anxious to have their enrolling done with before they started for their day's work, stood five or more in line during the first half hour of enrollment at some of the places. In the East New York and Williamsburg sections the enrollment proceeded quite as slowly as in any other part of the city during the opening hours. A majority of the prospective women voters in that part of Brooklyn are the wives of workingmen or small business men, who for the most part do their own housework and were expected to turn out later in the day to attend to the civic duty of enrolling and qualifying for participation in the primaries.

In the Brownsville section of Brooklyn, where a large Socialist vote is furnished by men, women leaders of that party were exceedingly active, and as a result there was a somewhat brisk enrollment during the early hours. Another element of the population in these congested districts—the orthodox Jewish women—did not present themselves during the forenoon hours at all. They remained away in deference to the Mosaic inhibition against any sort of labor, including writing, on the Sabbath. Under the statute providing for the special enrollment, women are required to affix their signatures to the entries made in the registry books.

Waited Until Midnight.

Sixty women were waiting in line to enroll at 10 o'clock last night at the registration place of the Second Election District of the Thirteenth Assembly District, at 80 Morningside Drive. When the registration officially closed at that hour these sixty applicants were permitted to remain and the registration continued for two hours longer, but all others who attempted to add themselves to this line of anxious would-be voters were excluded.

The Second District, which includes a part of the residential section of students at Columbia University, comprises the voting district bounded by 116th Street, Morningside Park, and Amsterdam Avenue, and 119th Street, had a long, continuous line of women from 8 o'clock until the last one of the sixty women was registered at midnight, with approximately 300 registrants. Miss Ethel Cherry was Chairman, assisted by George F. Studwell.

In the Second Assembly District, on the lower east side, where James E. March is one of a triumvirate of Republican leaders, the Democratic members of the enrollment board in six election districts failed to show up. Mr. March, finding no Democrat conveniently near, and anxious that the places should be filled so that the business of the day could proceed, took the initiative in having six young women, who happened to be Republicans, sworn in as substitutes.

The Republican women leaders in Manhattan complained bitterly that they received little or no assistance from the men associated with them in the leadership of the twenty-three Assembly districts in the borough. The Tammany Hall men leaders were much more active and were doing good team work with the women leaders and election district Captains of their respective bailiwicks.

Miss Helen Varrick Boswell, head of the Women's Division of the New York County Republican Committee, kept in close touch with the Republican women workers in the various Assembly districts throughout Manhattan. After receiving reports throughout the forenoon which showed that the registration of Republican women was far from up to the expectations of the leaders, she mobilized a flying squad which was sent into the theatre district with directions to remind women matinée-goers and those entering or emerging from the motion-picture places that it was their civic duty to avail themselves of the opportunity to enroll. There were forty-two women in the flying squad, recruited two from each Assembly district in Manhattan.

The afternoon reports received at the headquarters of the women's division of the Republican County Committee showed a marked improvement, especially in the Riverside Drive district. The enrollment board of the Twenty-seventh Election District of the Ninth Assembly District, which sat at Riverside Drive and Ninety-third Street, showed that at 3:30 o'clock in the afternoon 104 women had enrolled. The normal enrollment of men in this election district is approximately 300.

At the same, or even a later hour, some of the polling places in the Tenth Assembly District, which takes in the section bounded by Lexington and Seventh Avenues, Christopher and West Fifty-third Streets, showed a very low registration. In the Twenty-eighth Election District of the Tenth, located at 130 West Thirty-seventh Street, only eight women had enrolled at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. In the polling place of the Thirtieth Election District of the Tenth, in Public School 23, on West Fortieth Street between Seventh and Eighth Avenues, only twenty-four women had enrolled at 5 o'clock.

Working in Murphy's District.

The Republican women workers made a special effort in the Twelfth Assembly District, which is the political habitat of Tammany Leader Charles F. Murphy and strongly Democratic. Miss Boswell said that reports she had received up to 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon indicated that in one election district in the Twelfth as many as 100 Republican women had enrolled, and in another 130. This would indicate that the advent of women voters in the Twelfth, while it may not change the political complexion of the district, at least will tend to reduce materially the Democratic majority in the home and stronghold of the Tammany boss.

Reports from the men leaders of the Republican organization to Chairman Samuel S. Koenig during the afternoon showed at the best a fair enrollment of Republican women in their bailiwicks. In some instances came reports that the Tammany leaders and the women associated with them were seeking to induce Republican women to enroll as Democrats for the purpose of helping out in prospective fights for the Democratic leadership of the district. As a rule the Republican reports indicated great activity among the Tammany leaders to induce women to join their ranks, even in Republican districts.

Direct fights among the Democrats was a factor in swelling the enrollment of Democratic women in some Assembly districts. In the Twentieth a leadership fight had developed in the women's Democratic organization. Frank J. Hendricks, the Tammany district leader, had recognized Mrs. Kate Kelly of 160 East 128th Street as leader of the women forces of the district, while a large group of women wanted Mrs. Catherine McCusker of the same address. Mrs. McCusker formed the first women's organization of the district, and for some months this met at the Mohawk Club, the regular Tammany headquarters of the Twentieth. Later a rival club was formed by Mrs. John F. Cowan, wife of Justice Cowan of the Eighth District Municipal Court, who a few years ago figured in a sensational primary fight for leadership against Percy Nagle, the recognized Tammany district leader. Mrs. Kelly was chosen President of the new woman's organization. Mrs. McCusker and her friends will make a fight in the primaries for control of the women's organization in the district.

In the Twenty-second Assembly District, where a leadership fight is looming among the men, as a result of the withdrawal of Thomas F. McAvoy, for many years Chairman of the Executive Committee of Tammany Hall, from the leadership, there was great activity to induce women to enroll as Democrats. This resulted in a comparatively large enrollment.

Daughter of a President.

The poll clerks in a temporary wooden structure erected at the corner of Seventy-third Street and Central Park West had among the women who applied for enrollment a former mistress of the White House, Mrs. Mary Harrison McKee, daughter of the late President Benjamin Harrison, who during the last years of her father's administration presided over his household. Mrs. McKee lives at 49 West Seventy-second Street.

Mrs. Morris Hillquit, wife of the Socialist leader who was his party's candidate for Mayor last year, enrolled in the polling place at the corner of Riverside Drive and Ninety-third Street. After she had answered the fifteen questions and the inspector had handed her an enrollment blank she did not go through the formality of retiring to a booth for the purpose of marking her blank. She put her cross in the circle under the Socialist emblem in plain view of the Inspectors, in fact, at the desk where they were seated.

One of the first women to enroll in Brooklyn was Mrs. C. C. Hartling of 370 Palmetto Street, who is 72 years old. She was at the polling place in the Bushwick High School when it opened, and enrolled as a Democrat. Mrs. Hartling expressed the hope that she would be able to vote for Woodrow Wilson for President in 1920. Mrs. Sallie Gold of 17 Stagg Street, who is 102 years old and who is proud of being one of the oldest, if not the oldest, women voters in the country, was greatly disappointed yesterday, as she was ill and unable to leave her home to enroll. She voted in the recent special Congress election.

Many women commented on the tidy appearance of the enrollment places, and it was apparent that the instructions of the Board of Elections that a special effort be made to make the surroundings of the women voters on their first appearance at a polling place as attractive as possible had been obeyed to the letter. In Brooklyn the proprietor of a shoe shining establishment whose place had been selected as the polling place for the First Election District of the Eleventh Assembly District had purchased two large bunches of roses and placed them in the windows as a welcome to women voters.

Did as Well as Men.

The women in this city who enrolled yesterday did so, in most instances, quite as well as men do. They did not rush to the polls in the first hour—in fact, most of them enrolled during the afternoon—but once there they answered the questions in a manner that compared favorably with the average man's. At no time of the day were the polls overcrowded. On the other hand, the women generally did not waste any time. If some women displayed a little nervousness over such a new matter, in one case at least the women showed themselves thoroughly capable of handling the entire enrollment machinery, not only with as much ease as men, but also without their assistance.

This demonstration occurred in the polling place in the 12th Election District of the 11th Assembly District at Public School 165, on West 109th Street, where the women voters waited from 5 o'clock until noon only to find that no officials had been sent there by the Election Board to handle the enrollment. They tried all their powers of persuasion upon the officials of the 30th Election District who were located in the same building on the 109th Street side to enroll them. These officials explained that they could not legally do so.

Finally Mrs. A. Benedict of 255 West 108th Street, who knew all about the law in such matters, appeared and by her direction the entire enrollment machinery was seized by the women. The policeman on guard was inclined to protest, but Mrs. Benedict squelched him with a forceful dissertation upon the law. According to Mrs. Benedict, it was perfectly proper for any ten citizens to select and swear in their own inspectors. She was supported by a woman lawyer present. Enlisting ten of the women, Mrs. Benedict had herself and Miss Beatrice H. Fleischman of 303 West 107th Street sworn in as inspectors. Mrs. Benedict and Miss Fleischman took over the books and started to enroll all the women present. Mrs. Benedict was a Democrat and Miss Fleischman a Republican.

At first the volunteer inspectors worked at the books very slowly but accurately. Mrs. Benedict developing the greater celerity. Meanwhile the policeman's frantic efforts to get into communication with the Election Board succeeded, and Mrs. Benedict was summoned to the wire, whereupon she communicated to the official at the other end her forceful opinion of "men who handle things in such a slipshod fashion."

"From 8 o'clock to 12 o'clock we've waited," she declared, "and not a soul has shown up from the Election Board to handle the enrollment in this district. If that's the way you men do it, it won't be hard for us women to do it much better."

Her Action Justified.

Then she hung up. A half hour later an official of the Board of Election arrived, trailed by an Inspector. He quickly inquired as to what had taken place and to the surprise of the policemen stationed there he nodded his head in continuous assent as Mrs. Benedict narrated how the two women Inspectors had been properly sworn in by "ten citizens," and how they were handling the enrollment. The election official agreed that it was all perfectly proper, and that the women could go on with the enrollment if they chose.

Mrs. Benedict thereupon asked that Miss Fleishman be released because the young woman found the task too trying. The male Inspector from the Election Board was about to take her place, when it was discovered that he was a Democrat, and could not serve with Mrs. Benedict. Miss Fleischman then declared that she was willing to remain on the job, and she did for the remainder of the day. It was the only enrollment place in the city manned by women.

Mrs. Charles S. Whitman, wife of the Governor, enrolled early in a florist shop at 980 Sixth Avenue, the number of her ballot being 25. After she had finished, Mrs. Whitman met a large group of women at the entrance and immediately proceeded to stimulate enrollment in that district by asking them, "Did you enroll?" and "If not, why don't you enroll now?"

Miss Mary Garrett Hay, Chairman of the City Party, was the first to enroll at her polling place, a furniture store at 507 Columbus Avenue, in the Second Election District of the Ninth Assembly District. She reached there at 8 A. M. sharp. Later in the day Miss Hay made an inspection tour of typical polling places in various parts of the city, including Charles F. Murphy's district. Miss Hay's tours carried her into a tailor shop at 507 West Forty-first Street, where a group of poor women with children in their arms and others at their aprons were being enrolled, and later into a barber shop at 934 Sixth Avenue, where women to reach the polling places had to pass a long lane of men reclining in barber chairs with half shaven faces. Among the women who enrolled here was Mrs. George B. McClellan, wife of the former Mayor.

During this tour Miss Hay declared she had put her cross in the Republican column, being prompted to do so mainly because she wished to see Governor Whitman renominated for his support of the woman suffrage cause. At a polling place at 346 Amsterdam Avenue Miss Hay found another woman inspector at work. She was Beatrice Cassell of 174 West Seventy-ninth Street, and she was assisting Armo R. Domeyer.

Women suffrage workers were active throughout the city in getting women to enroll. In the polling places members of the Woman Suffrage Party were distinguished from the rest by the precision with which they answered questions and insisted upon all the formulas of enrollment. Mrs. Kate Morris, who was early at the polls, said that when she told the polling clerk that she was connected with the Woman Suffrage Party he said: "Then I won't have to tell you what to do." When he finished writing, however, she said: "I'm afraid I'll have to tell you, then, you have forgotten to write in my name." Another worker, on informing the clerk that she was connected with the Woman Suffrage Party, was told by the clerk that he thought the party had gone out of existence.

"No," she answered. "And it won't until your party helps to pass the Federal Suffrage Amendment."

"Oh, as to that," declared the clerk, "you women have power enough now."

One Leader Sent Back.

In one place a woman leader of a political party was found electioneering within ten feet of the polls, and when the illegality of this was pointed out to her by a suffragist, she retreated to the 100 feet line.

The "antis" did their duty faithfully even though they may not have liked it. One of them rushed into the Woman Suffrage Party Headquarters at 3 East Thirty-eighth Street and declared: "You people thrust the ballot upon me. I feel it my duty to use it, but where on earth must I go to enroll?" Another "anti" telephoned: "I have been to three polling places and they are all wrong. Will you tell me the right place to go to enroll? It's pretty hard on an anti to have to rush around like this."

"Well, if you hadn't been anti but a suffragist," the official replied, "you would know just where to go."

Mrs. Courtland Nichol visited headquarters and said her husband had directed her to the wrong polling place. Many other women made similar complaints and had to be shown the chart published by THE NEW YORK TIMES before they were straightened out.

In one booth at a polling place in the Fifteenth Assembly District Miss Charlotte Delafield, leader of that district, discovered a jump burning.

"What is that for?" she asked.

The Republican Inspector answered, "That is to light Democrats along the path to truth."

On account of Saturday being the Jewish Sabbath, the enrollment in the lower east side was extremely light, but it improved after nightfall, the younger element of Jewish women being especially eager to enroll. In this section of the city, contrary to expectations, very few women of Socialist tendencies came forward to enroll, most of those who did enroll enrolled either as Democrats or Republicans. Older women who could hardly speak English were assisted in enrolling by their children. In numerous cases the Jewish women on dropping their ballot into the slot felt such a sense of separation from a document, presumably a safeguard of their rights as citizens, that they asked the Inspector for some kind of a "receipt."

The women artist colony of Greenwich Village turned out in full strength at 91 Sixth Avenue, and before noon more than seventy-five of them had been enrolled. Among them was Mrs. Helen Phelps Stokes, a sister-in-law of Rose Pastor Stokes. An aged colored mammy in the same district who looked over 75 years, but modestly insisted upon 45 was enrolled in the same district after she had declared "I want to vote under the patriotic eagle."

BUFFALO ENROLLMENT ESTIMATED AT 30,000

Prohibition Workers There Urged Women to Register as Republicans.

Special to The New York Times.

BUFFALO, May 25.—Political and suffrage leaders estimated tonight that in today's enrollment between 30,000 and 40,000 women voters affiliated with the political parties here. No figures of the enrollment were permitted to be collected, Election Commissioners ruling that a provision of the law authorizing the enrollment forbade publication of any totals until June 15. About 87,000 men are enrolled in Buffalo.

Reports from the registration booths indicated that there was a heavy enrollment in the west side, the principal residential section. In those east side wards in which the Socialists are strong there also was a rush of women to affiliate. The Socialists had made an active campaign to induce women of their party to enroll. In the districts populated principally by Italian and Polish Americans the registration was light.

ALBANY REPUBLICANS ACTIVE.

Organization Sent Automobiles to Take Women to the Polls.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., May 25.—The enrollment of women in this city was not exceptionally heavy, election officials said tonight, although no figures were obtainable. There was only a small percentage of the police canvass enrolled by the middle of the afternoon, and it was estimated tonight that not much more than 50 to 60 per cent. of the women who were eligible to enroll had done so.

The Republican organization made a feature of the enrollment, and its members were out with automobiles to take the women to the polls. As an organization the Democratic City Committee paid little attention to the enrollment. Women were at all of the polling places throughout the day. In one of the districts a woman inspector named by the Mayor served until the polls were closed.

TROY, N. Y., May 25.—The enrollment of women was 5,017. The average in the Republican wards, especially the residential sections where women have been active in club and civic affairs, is somewhat higher, while in the overwhelmingly Democratic wards the enrollment was light. Secretary John Doyle of the Republican County Committee estimated tonight that from sentiments publicly expressed by women the Prohibition Party would show a higher percentage of increased enrollments than the dominant parties.

ROCHESTER WOMEN ACTIVE.

Enrollment There Heavier Than Politicians Had Expected.

Special to The New York Times.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., May 25.—Rochester women enrolled with celerity in every district today. In most every district they appeared in greater numbers than was expected. It was predicted tonight that probably two-thirds as many women are now enrolled to vote at the September primaries as there are men registered in the entire city. There are about 52,000 men registered in Rochester. While the total figures will not be known until tomorrow, it is estimated that fully 30,000 women enrolled.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., May 25.—Seven thousand three hundred and fourteen women enrolled in the eighty-seven election districts of Syracuse; 33,571 men enrolled last Fall. There was little interest on the part of the women. The big majority enrolled under the Republican emblem.

SUBURBS FALL SHORT.

Enrollment in Westchester and Long Island Is Light.

Reports from suburban communities did not indicate any great eagerness of women to qualify for participation in primaries and the purely political activities of party organizations. The number of women who presented themselves for enrollment in most places was small enough to disappoint the suffrage leaders.

In the village of Hempstead 137 women enrolled, less than 10 per cent. of the male voting strength in the village.

In White Plains, out of about 4,500 women eligible for enrollment, only 650 did so.

In Glen Cove, the only city on Long Island outside of Brooklyn, about 25 per cent. of the women who will be entitled to vote took the trouble to enroll. The total was 616.

Figures available last night in Yonkers indicated that, out of 20,000 women eligible to enroll, not over 5,500 availed themselves of the opportunity.

In New Rochelle, about one-third of the women were willing to affiliate with a political party.

The women of Mt. Vernon enrolled to the number of about 1,000. About 3,500 were eligible.

There are 4,000 eligible to vote in Cortlandt, Westchester County, but only 700 went to the polling places.

In Ossining and Rye about 500 women enrolled in each place.

In Mamaroneck and Greenburg, Westchester, women were also indifferent, and only about 15 per cent. of those eligible enrolled.

Democratic Slump in Orleans.

Special to The New York Times.

MEDINA, N. Y., March 25.—Less than 300 Democratic women enrolled in Orleans County today. The women who have been regarded as friendly to the Whitman candidacy enrolled quite liberally, some as Prohibitionists, but the most of them as Republicans. General dissatisfaction with the Democratic organization in Orleans County in recent years was said to be responsible for the Democratic slump.

Slight Interest in Binghamton.

Special to The New York Times.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., May 25.—A decided falling off of previous estimates and lack of interest marked the enrollment of women in Binghamton today. Large numbers of women were engaged in the Red Cross drive which accounted for the falling off. The number of men enrolled in Binghamton was 12,936. The number of women who voted at the local option election last month was 12,688. Results today show that 3,350 women registered in Binghamton and 1,500 in Johnson City and Endicott. The Republicans have enrolled a majority of the women here.

Only 400 in Poughkeepsie.

Special to The New York Times.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., May 25.—Less than four hundred Poughkeepsie women registered here today. The small number was something of a surprise to the suffrage leaders, who had figured on ten times that number. At the last enrollment 4,933 men registered. During the last week or ten days politicians of all parties have been trying to stimulate interest among women in political matters.

500 Enroll in Elmira.

Special to The New York Times.

ELMIRA, N. Y., May 25.—Approximately 500 women enrolled today. At the recent local option election more than 10,000 women voted, but they seem to have no desire to become identified with existing parties. There are 6,500 men enrolled. No active campaign was made by party leaders to get the new voters to the polls.

SERBIANS' HEAVY LOSSES.

LONDON, May 25.—Figures have been obtained from a Serbian source showing the terrible losses sustained by the Serbian population of Bosnia in three years—1915, 1916, and 1917—there were 150,314 deaths, of which 65,042 were children under 10 years of age. Of these 12,867 were infants under 1 year.

AMERICAN SQUADRON IS FLYING NEAR TOUL

FIRST VICTORIES RECORDED

Rickenbacher and Buford Down Adversaries, the Latter Fighting Four Germans.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 24, (Associated Press.)—An American aerial pursuit squadron is now operating over the American sector northwest of Toul, it is now permitted to announce. All the pilots whose air exploits have been recorded up to this time belong to this squadron, which has a special insignia. The squadron is flying in Nieuport chasing machines.

The first victories, in which the American squadron brought down two German machines, were gained the day after they took up flying on this sector. The occupants of the German machines were made prisoner.

Other machines aside from those in this squadron, it is permitted to mention, also are flying on the Toul front. The fact that an American squadron was there could not be mentioned previously because it was not desired that the Germans should know of the fact. But two American machines have fallen and there have been so many fights at close range that it is believed certain the enemy knows an American squadron is now operating on this front. There is also the fact that Captain James Norman Hall has fallen behind the German lines and been made a prisoner.

Buford Downs Adversary.

Lieutenant Edward Buford, Jr., of Nashville, Tenn., today was officially credited with shooting down a German airplane over St. Mihiel on May 22.

Buford, while patrolling, encountered two German pursuit planes. The fighting continued only a few minutes, the Lieutenant attacking one of the German planes, which all of the time was trying to lead him into the fire from the other.

Suddenly Lieutenant Buford looked overhead and saw two more Germans coming down from out of the clouds for him. He took a dive, all of the Germans diving at the same time, and when he came up he had one of the enemy planes in front of him. Buford began firing with his machine gun, causing his adversary to disappear in a nose dive. Although he was sure he had hit the German it was not until today that the victory was confirmed.

A few minutes later Lieutenant Buford by manoeuvring managed to get behind two of the remaining three machines and opened fire, but his machine gun jammed. As he was unable to use his weapon he started in a series of skillful dives and turns, and was successful in shaking off the three enemy planes.

Victory for Rickenbacher.

Lieutenant Edward Rickenbacher, the former automobile racer, has added another aerial victory to his record. Announcement was made today that it had been confirmed that the Lieutenant shot down a German biplane in the neighborhood of Thiaucourt on May 22. The fight took place 5,500 meters in the air.

With another pilot, Lieutenant Rickenbacher engaged in a long fight with two enemy machines. Rickenbacher finally got on the tail of one machine, and fired more than a score of shots at short range. The enemy machine went into a spinning nose dive, but it was uncertain whether it hit the ground, so the Lieutenant was not credited with a victory at the time. Today positive confirmation that the machine crashed to the ground was obtained.

No confirmation is obtainable concerning the German report that three American airplanes have been shot down in the Lys region.

The official statement from German General Headquarters Thursday reported that on the previous day three American airplanes had been brought down on the Lys battlefield.

AMERICAN AIRMEN KILLED.

Deaths of Four in France and Three in Texas Reported.

PARIS, May 25.—Two American aviators, Paul Kurtzson of Philadelphia and Roger Babiani, who came from Cuba, have been killed on the front, The Herald reports today. Both had been in the American ambulance service and transferred to the American Flying Corps.

Kurtzson, according to the advices, after having completed his training as an aviator, asked permission to go up on Thursday. He flew over the German lines and shortly afterward his machine came down in flames. Babiani, who was killed on Tuesday, was the wearer of a French military cross awarded to him for bravery while acting as an ambulance driver in 1915.

WACO, Tex., May 25.—Lieutenant William B. Kuen of Cynwyd, Penn., and Private William Miller Snyder of Pennsylvania, were killed instantly here today when their airplane collided with another machine at a height of about 800 feet. The two occupants of the other machine were uninjured.

The two airplanes were locked together by the impact of the collision. The machines descended slowly to a height of about 250 feet when the aviators broke the lock, and both machines fell headlong. Two cadets in the other machine, whose names authorities declined to make public, escaped without a scratch.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, May 25.—Cadet Moultrie C. Trowbridge, 23 years old, of New York, was instantly killed by a fall of 3,000 feet in an airplane at Kelly Field this morning.

WASHINGTON, May 25. — General Pershing, in his communiqué for May 24, reported to the War Department the deaths on Wednesday of two American officers, First Lieutenant Walter V. Barneby, Signal Corps, and Second Lieutenant Kenneth P. Culbert, United States Marines, as a result of injuries received in an airplane fall. Before they died they were decorated with the War Cross. The communiqué follows:

"Section A—There are no new developments to report. It is established that our aviators shot down two hostile machines on May 21.

"Section B—On Wednesday afternoon, First Lieutenant Walter V. Barneby, Signal Corps, of Sumner, Wash., and Second Lieutenant Kenneth P. Culbert, United States Marines, of Orange, N. J., were fatally injured by the accidental fall of an airplane in which they were acting respectively as pilot and observer. Both officers died during the night. In the evening both were decorated with the Croix de Guerre with palm, for excellent, faithful, and courageous work in numerous former flights. Their valor in operating in Belcheprey on April 20, under heavy fire and under adverse weather conditions was especially mentioned."

An addition to the communiqué, issued later, said:

"Hostile machines referred to in today's communiqué were brought down by Lieutenant Rickenbacher and Lieutenant Buford.

"In Lorraine, on May 21, a hostile airplane flying over our lines was disabled and forced to land in its own territory. There it was destroyed by our artillery fire adjusted with balloon observation."

Lieutenant Culbert's next of kin, as officially registered, are Miriam E. Culbert, 5 Hampton Street, Cranford, N. J., and William H. Culbert, 2301 William Street, East Orange, N. J.

Lieutenant Kenneth B. Culbert was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Culbert of East Orange, N. J. Mr. Culbert is the proprietor of the Edgemere Hotel, one of the best known hotels in the Oranges. The Lieutenant was 22 years old, and was born in Bellevue, Penn. He was graduated at Harvard last June and entered the Harvard Training Corps as Captain of one of the student units. In August he was recommended for a commission, and was appointed a Second Lieutenant of Marines, and ordered to the Marine Battle Training Camp at Quantico, Va.

In September Lieutenant Culbert was ordered to France, and shortly after his arrival there he was detached from the Marines and ordered to the aviation section of the army as a military observer. He was an expert aerial map maker, and in recent letters to his father and mother he told of a number of mapping expeditions over the German lines. The family has received unofficial advices that Lieutenant Culbert was recently recommended for the French war cross. He was a brother of Lieutenant F. Paul Culbert of the navy, who is now serving under Vice Admiral Sims in European waters.

First Lieutenant Moultree Clyde Trowbridge, who was killed in an airplane accident at Kelly Field, Texas, yesterday, lived before he entered the army with his brother Frank Trowbridge at 151 East Thirty-first Street. He was formerly Assistant General Manager of the Childs Restaurant Company. He enlisted in the aviation section last December and completed his training course at Kelly Field a few days ago. Lieutenant Trowbridge is survived by his brothers, Frank and Raymond, and one sister, Miss Grace Trowbridge of Augusta, Ga.

Y. M. C. A. SECRETARY KILLED.

PARIS, May 25.—The Rev. Robert Wellwood of 706 West 170th Street, New York, was killed on May 19 by a shell fragment when working among Chinese coolie laborers behind the British lines. He was the first Y. M. C. A. Secretary to be killed in France. Mr. Wellwood was a British subject, but for a long time had been a resident of New York.

The Rev. Robert Wellwood, who was 58 years old, devoted most of his life to religious research work in China, and was considered an authority on all phases of Chinese life. He was with the American Baptist Mission for thirty years, and spent most of the time in inland villages in China. In the latter part of 1917 he joined a Y. M. C. A. unit for service at the front, and he sailed for France Jan. 26, 1917. Because of his unusual knowledge of the Chinese he was stationed with the coolie war laborers with the American troops. After serving with our troops he went to Paris to await further orders. On April 29 he left Paris to join the British troops. Mr. Wellwood and his wife have lived in an apartment house in 170th Street off Riverside Drive for several years.

RAIDERS ENLIVEN TRAINING.

Several Americans on British Front Wounded by Bombs.

AMERICAN HEADQUARTERS ON THE BRITISH FRONT IN FRANCE, May 25, (Associated Press.)—Several soldiers of the "new" American Army now on this front are reported to have been wounded yesterday by bombs dropped by German raiders.

The Americans are making a good impression and they astonish British and French veterans by the quickness with which they adapt themselves to new customs and the cheerfulness with which they accept discomfort. By the French, with whom they are billeted, they are admired for their physique, good behavior, and ardor.

A week ashore suffices for every man to recover from the effects of the ocean voyage. The Americans are getting down to hard work with the best of good will. All are ready and eager to take their places in the battleline immediately.

It is uncertain, however, how long their training on this side will continue. The officers are taking good care of the men, are satisfield with their condition and progress, and are confident that whenever they are called on they will give a good account of themselves. The manoeuvres in their first few days on this front were carried out in the hottest weather and on dusty roads. As the training proceeds small ills disappear, and the progress of the Americans has been visible plainly in the last few days.

DENIES DRAFT ORDER IS AIMED AT LABOR

"Work or Fight" Regulation Has No Bearing on Strikes, Says Baker.

OUTSIDE HIS PROVINCE

Department of Labor Exclusively Will Deal with Labor—Registration of New Selectmen.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—Secretary Baker issued a statement today in which he explained that the order affecting persons of draft age engaged in nonessential industry was not intended to affect the labor situation. The impression has gained ground that the purpose of the order, issued through Provost Marshal General Crowder, was to bring under military control the industrial workers of the country. Secretary Baker said it was not the intention of the War Department to use the draft regulations to affect labor controversies, which must be adjusted by the Labor Department.

Secretary Baker's statement follows:

"My attention has been called to the possibility of some misunderstanding of the order issued through the Provost Marshal General affecting persons engaged in less-essential industries, one suggestion being that this is the beginning of a series of regulations for the purpose of affecting the labor situation in the country. I want to state in the most positive way that this regulation has nothing to do with the labor situation of the country, and it is no part of the intention of the War Department, either in this regulation or another, to undertake to affect the labor situation of the country by military regulation. The sole purpose of this order is to guide exemption boards in their duty to apply the provisions of the law affecting occupations as a reason for exemption and deferred classification.

The Secretary was asked what effect this regulation would have upon persons temporarily out of employment by reason of strikes. He said:

"The regulation is silent upon that subject, but it is not the intention of the department to permit the draft regulations to be used to affect any such labor controversy, and unemployment by reason of strikes will not be regarded as such unemployment as will cancel either exemption or deferred classification. The whole question of the relation of the Government to labor is for administration by the Labor Department, and the War Department does not intend any indirect interference in it."

A statement explaining conditions that must be complied with by those who have become 21 years of age since June 5, last, and who will be called into service on July 5 next, was made public today by the War Department. All persons who have attained the draft age since June 5 last must register, except those excused from registration by reason of being in the military or naval service. All aliens, subjects of allied belligerent nations and neutrals coming within the same class must register at the same time. The statement follows:

"Draft officials wish it clearly understood that no person who has attained the age of 21 since June 5, 1917, or who will attain that age on or before June 5, is excused from registration on June 5 unless on that date he is an actual and active member of the military or naval service. Persons not subject to registration on account of being in the military or naval service become subject to registration, and are required to register immediately upon leaving such military or naval service. Any such persons discharged after June 5 must register immediately after their discharge."

Provost Marshal General Crowder, urging young men to study the draft regulations, issued this statement:

"It should be clearly understood that registration is a public duty. It is distinct from selective service, in that it is merely preliminary to the later process of selection. For failure to perform this duty Congress has provided a penalty of imprisonment for one year. Furthermore, such failure may result in the loss of valuable rights and privileges and immediate induction into military service.

"No delinquent can be excused for not registering on the ground that he forgot or did not realize his duty. The burden is on him, and on him alone, to perform that duty, and he alone is responsible."

CITY GIVES 1,600 MORE TO THE NATIONAL ARMY

Vanguard of 18,000 Men to be Called Within Next Five Days Leave for Fort Hancock.

The first units of selective draft men, to the number of 1,600, who are the vanguard of the 18,000 from New York ordered to join the colors in the next five days, left for Fort Hancock, N. J., yesterday. The men who left yesterday, with the exception of the unit from one Brooklyn district, were all from the Bronx. It was said last night that the report to Draft Director Martin Conboy showed that every man ordered answered when the roll was called yesterday morning. The people of the Bronx gave the men a noisy send-off, while several friends and relatives assembled at the Pennsylvania ferries on the Manhattan side for a second farewell. The units from the various boards averaged more than 100 men each.

On its way to the ferry the unit from Board 2 stopped in Bowling Green, where it received a silk banner in recognition of the fact that this board now has more than 50 per cent. of its registrants in the United States service. The number of registrants in the district is 3,900, and of them, about 1,700 are already in service. The flag was the gift of Rodman Wanamaker.

In addition to the units from the Bronx the men from Putnam and Dutchess Counties passed through the city yesterday on their way to Camp Wadsworth. Among the men from Putnam County was Abiel L. Smith, Jr., a son of Brig. Gen. A. L. Smith, U. S. A.

The Marine Corps announces that it will begin tomorrow a drive for college men and that special appeals will be addressed to the members of the graduating classes in universities and colleges in all parts of the country. A special effort will be directed toward the recruiting of college men who are qualified for service as aviators.

The drive for the 40,000 men Congress has just authorized the Marine Corps to enlist is now on and the men are being enlisted at the rate of about 1,000 a week. A number of training camps for officers are soon to be organized by the Marines.

A campaign to enroll 50,000 men for service in the mechant marine fleet is now on and New York City has been called upon to supply 25,000 as its quota. Charles A. G. Blossom, Inspector of Enrolling Stations, has opened headquarters in New York and will direct the drive during the next six weeks.

Major E. N. Sanctuary, U. S. A., is in New York to enlist 200 men for the radio service of the Signal Corps. Information as to this service may be had at the offices of the Mayor's Committee on National Defense in the Hall of Records. Rear Admiral Nathaniel R. Usher, commandant of the Third Naval District, announced that 2,500 mess attendants are desired for service with the Naval Reserve Force. The office of the Third Naval District is at 280 Broadway.

BRITISH BEFRIEND JEWS IN PALESTINE

Zionist Correspondent Tells of Friendship That Has Sprung Up in the Holy Land.

RELIEF FOR THE COLONISTS

Appreciate Spirit of Invaders After Two Years of Bullying at the Hands of the Germans.

The Provisional Executive Committee for General Zionist Affairs announced last night that an uncensored letter from a correspondent with the British Army in Palestine, which was forwarded through military channels to the Provisional Zionist Committee, reports that General Allenby's army has begun another advance in Palestine, which, it is believed, will carry it beyond the borders of the Holy Land.

The chief work of the last three months, the correspondent says, has been the consolidation of the country redeemed from the Turks by the Winter advance and the occupation of the new line of communications. Egypt and Palestine, it is said, are now as closely linked up as in the days of the Roman Empire. The correspondent writes further:

"The broad-gauge railway has been brought up from Gaza to a point close to the front line, a distance of about fifty miles, and the old Turkish line from Ludd to Jerusalem and the more recent military branch line from Gaza to Surar Junction have been restored and brought into use. Metal roads have been built and rebuilt over the mountains and plains, and thousands of laborers, drawn partly from Egypt and partly from the local villages, have been enrolled to keep them in good repair. The communications along the front lines, which are constantly expanding, stretching now across the whole breadth of Palestine from the Mediterranean Sea to the Dead Sea, have been firmly established.

"All this work of consolidation has had to be done in the rainy season, which normally makes the roads of Palestine impassable for weeks. It has not been a record year for rain luckily, but to the end of February there was a fall of just about 20 inches in Jerusalem. That is within a few inches of the average yearly rainfall of London. The railway has been washed away in parts several times and traffic interrupted for several days, but the work has gone on unhindered.

"There has been no serious outbreak of illness among the troops and the men have been extraordinarily well fed for the most part. At the same time, the resources of the occupied territory are being utilized and every effort is being made to increase them for the coming harvest. To repair the depredations of the Turks hundreds of tons of barley and of wheat have been sent from Egypt to Palestine to distribute to the villages. New areas have been brought under cultivation and the villagers, Arabs and Jewish, have been encouraged to grow potatoes for the supply of the army.

"The harvest this year should be at least as good as in the years before the war. The orange crop, which for three years has been largely wasted, has been bought mainly for the troops, but within the last few weeks part of it has been exported to Egypt.

"While the troops have been busy during this three months' sojourn in Judea, and the country has been brought under a better administration than it has known for centuries, opportunity has been found in the long evenings for much friendly and pleasant relaxation. A considerable part of the troops have been camped in the neighborhood of the Jewish settlement, which was early occupied for the headquarters of different functions. Tel Aviv, the Jewish suburb of Jaffa, and the largest of the agricultural colonies, has been inhabitated by the staff, and the constant intercourse for three months between the British officers and the Jewish population has laid the foundations not only of a good understanding, but even of genuine friendship.

"The officers, after two years in the wilderness, have lighted on a civilized society and on a happy environment. The Jewish colonists on their side have not known before such good and kindly company, which is the more appreciated after their two years' experience of German buying; the relation are like those on the western front between our men and the French peasantry. The talking is usually done in French, but some of the British officers have picked up a little Hebrew, while some of the younger people in the villages have picked up English.

"Scarcely a week passes without some entertainment in the public halls of the villages, now given by the soldiers concert party, now by the local talent, for the amusement of the mixed population or for the benefit of some soldier friends. At these gatherings it is pleasant to see the village councillors, the Vaad, as it is called, sitting side by side with a staff officer in the front row. It augurs for the Hebrew entente in the East a foundation as good as that of the French entente in the West.

WILSON ENTERTAINS PRINCE

Gives Luncheon for Arthur, Who Later Meets Congressmen.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—Prince Arthur of Connaught, first cousin of King George of England, who is on his way to Japan on a special mission, was entertained at luncheon today by President Wilson.

Later, with Lord Reading, the British Ambassador, the Prince and members of his party called on Vice President Marshall at the Capitol. The Senate had concluded the day's business and adjourned before the visitors arrived. But the Prince was introduced to Majority Leaders Martin and Kitchin and other members of the Senate and House.

ROSE PASTOR STOKES HERE

Mrs. Rose Pastor Stokes, who was released under bail last Thursday after her conviction in a Federal court in Kansas City on three counts for violations of the Espionage act, making her liable to imprisonment for a maximum of twenty years or to a fine of $10,000, or both, arrived in this city yesterday and went to her home in Grove Street.

She received friends in the evening, but declined to say anything for publication. She did not enroll.

Soldier Balks at Killing Relatives.

Charles Thau, a soldier stationed at Fort Hancock, who is said to have served formerly in the Sixty-ninth Regiment, was arrested in Newark yesterday and committed to the Essex County Jail pending action by the Federal authorities. Thau comes from New York. He is alleged to have said recently that he wanted to be discharged from the army because he did not want to fight his relatives in the Austrian Army. Companions in the old Sixty-ninth Regiment, New York National Guard, said he was anxious to get out of the service. Thau told District Attorney Lynch that he was wholly loyal to this country, but would hate to feel that he might be called upon to kill his Austrian relatives.

What Is Back of the Vault Door?

Summer fur storage may be a mystery to you—one which you never have penetrated.

When your furs come out of storage in the Fall, a close examination of the skins would tell you convincingly some of the secrets.

It would show conclusively where they had spent the Summer.

You would find that some houses do not place in cold storage all the furs stored with them. The more valuable natural furs, like sables and ermine, they crowd into their insufficient cold storage space. But the dyed furs, like fox and muskrat, they hang up outside.

Here, every piece, no matter whether natural or dyed, is placed in spacious cold storage rooms and cared for by experts.

BETHLEHEM HOLDS ITS BACH FESTIVAL

SEVERAL CANTATAS REVIVED

"Ode of Mourning" a Noteworthy Climax of Music Befitting the National Earnestness.

Special to The New York Times.

BETHLEHEM, Penn., May 25.—The 1918 Bach Festival reached its close here late today, ending in novel fashion amid the long twilight of "daylight saving" hours, and marked as never before by patriotic features appropriate to industrial Bethlehem's first music festival since America entered the war. Today's two sessions, divided at mid-afternoon, comprised the thirteenth complete performance of the great B-minor Mass, given by the Bach Choir annually, with few exceptions, since its reorganization in 1900 by Dr. J. Fred Wolle, a native of Bethlehem.

The present festival recalled this community's productions of works of the old masters dating back to the early Moravian settlement of the valley, 173 years ago. From the Mofavian Church in the old town the chorus had for some seasons been transferred across the river to the beautiful hillside campus of Lehigh University, where often now an audience of 1,200 persons from all parts of the country has filled the Packer Memorial Church, to which the congregation today was summoned in the traditional manner by Bach's chorales, played from the tower by the Moravian Trombone Choir.

Visitors from fifteen States and the District of Columbia were among the reverent listeners this afternoon, an attendance lighter than on some former occasions, because of the war, but reinforced by many soldiers in uniform, who came from the neighboring Camp Dix and Camp Crane. The continuance of the annual festival during the war was guaranteed financially by a body of citizens headed by Charles M. Schwab, the Bethlehem steel master, now Director General of the Emergency Fleet Corporation.

Seventeen stars on the flag of the chorus showed that Bethlehem had furnished its quota with the National Army. The greater number of men still engaged in the long mile of steel and munition plants down the valley, an "essential industry" grown to new proportions during the four years of European conflict, had the effect of retaining almost intact a choir of 250 voices, all veterans in the performance of Bach's most difficult works.

A new patriotic note was sounded at the opening session on Friday in the singing of "The Star-Spangled Banner" with a thrilling emotional quality as of folksong, its familiar measures punctuated by dramatic pauses and by high notes prolonged. Dr. Wolle revived several cantatas sung here in other years, such as "My Spirit Was in Heaviness," "God's Time is the Best," and "Now Shall the Grace," the last-named a double chorus possibly new to the list and preceded by the chorale, "World, Farewell."

Bach's "Ode of Mourning," with the familiar "Magnificat," at the only evening performance on Friday night furnished a noteworthy climax of music befitting the national earnestness in these serious times. The spirit of heaviness in words and music alike was caught up in choral songs of religious consolation, in which many of the attendants from the home town were able to join, some of them formerly singers in the chorus itself. The Philadelphia Orchestra supplied veteran artists in the instrumental accompaniments.

Dr. Wolle's soloists added one or two names to those of former festivals. Yesterday's quartet included Mrs. Mildred Faas of Philadelphia, Miss Emma Roberts of New York, Nicholas Douty of Philadelphia, and Charles Trowbridge Pittmann of Washington. Today's singers in the B-minor mass were Mrs. Mae Hotz, a Philadelphia soprano, and, in place of Merle Alcock, contralto, Mrs. Grace Hardee of Westfield, N. J., with the tenor and bass as before. The work of the soloists was creditable, at least, in music which baffled singers even in Bach's day. The chorus as a whole has rarely sung in better form.

BARONESS OPPENHEIM WEDS

Widow Marries Lieut. James W. Robbins in St. Patrick's Rectory.

The marriage of Lieutenant James William Robbins, a staff officer attached to the British Mission in this country and a son of Mr. and Mrs. James Robbins of Hull, Yorkshire, England, and the Baroness Marguerite Oppenheim, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alphonse Hubert of Brussels, Belgium, was quietly solemnized yesterday morning in the rectory of St. Patrick's Cathedral, it being a union of Protestant and Roman Catholic, by the Rev. Father William Martin. The Baroness walked with Lieutenant A. P. Barry. She wore a white muslin frock, trimmed with ermine, topped by a black lace hat, and a corsage bouquet of marguerites. After a brief honeymoon Lieutenant Robbins and his bride will live for the present in this city.

Lieutenant Robbins was in the heavy artillery, Fourth Army, when severely wounded at the battle of the Somme, receiving eighteen wounds. He was then invalided home, spending ten months in two French and three English hospitals, respectively. He arrived in this country in November last, and his time has since been spent here or in Washington, D. C. He has three brothers in the British Army artillery and infantry. The elder brother of the bride was wounded at Dixmude and disabled for service; the second is in the British Navy, and the third is fighting with the Belgian Army. She has been living in New York since last Autumn, at the Hotel Le Marquis, where Baron Oppenheim died last March.

BRIDE OF CAPT. SLAUGHTER.

Miss Dorothy M. Mills Weds in Washington—Ushers in Uniform.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—The marriage of Miss Dorothy Margaret Mills, eldest daughter of Harrington Mills of this city, to Captain Lawrence Alexander Slaughter, Jr., Quartermaster's Reserve Corps, took place this afternoon at the Grafton. The Rev. John M. Cooper of St. Matthew's Church officiated.

The bride, wearing white satin with panel of point lace and tulle veil, was escorted by her father and preceded by her two sisters, Miss Florence and Miss Eleanor Mills, with Miss Dorothy Berthoff, Miss Ruth Briggs, Miss Beatrice Rigby of Washington, Miss Louise Cauldwell of Philadelphia, and Miss Mary Dickson of New York as bridesmaids.

The ushers, like the bridegroom, wore service uniform. They were Captain Theodore Barnes, Captain O'Brien, Lieutenant Charles Smith, Lieutenant Rupp, and Ensign Herbert French.

Following a short honeymoon Captain and Mrs. Slaughter will make their home at Fort Myer, Va., where the former is on duty.

Wedding Notes.

Miss Ethel M. Huhn, daughter of Mrs. George A. Huhn of 70 East Seventy-seventh Street, and Philadelphia, was married in the latter city on Thursday to Lieutenant Joseph W. Bailey, Jr., U. S. A., son of former Senator Joseph W. Bailey and Mrs. Bailey of Washington, D. C. Their marriage was originally planned for June 22, but was hastened owing to the exigencies of war. Mrs. Morgan Belmont of this city was to have been matron of honor. The bride was unattended, as it was impossible to get the bridesmaids together in so short a time.

Miss Katherine Swift, daughter of Mrs. Samuel Swift of this city, and Ensign James Paul Warburg, U. S. N., son of Paul M. Warburg, Vice Governor of the Federal Reserve Board, are to be married on June 1, at the home of the bride's mother, 300 West 101st Street. Miss Louise Homer, daughter of Mme. Homer of the Metropolitan Opera Company, is to attend the bride.

The marriage has been announced of Miss Aerielle P. Frost, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert C. Frost of Chicago, and Dr. Robert Grosvenor of Providence, R. I., which took place in this city last Thursday. Dr. Grosvenor is a son of Mrs. William Grosvenor of Providence, and recently received his degree from the Columbia University Medical School.

MILLION AMERICANS SOON, SAYS TARDIEU

Will Be in France Before Midsummer, He Announces in Statement Issued in Paris.

500,000 MORE THIS YEAR

Declares German Offensive Is Broken and That Our Armies Will Be In at Final Victory.

PARIS, Friday, May 24.—The American forces in France will be double before midsummer the number Secretary of War Baker recently announced as having been sent here, and by the end of 1918 they will be three times larger, said Andre Tardieu, French High Commissioner, in a statement issued to the French people on his arrival from the United States today.

Secretary Baker announced on May 8 that more than 300,000 American soldiers already had been sent to France.

M. Tardieu described what the United States has done and is doing for France and the Allies.

"The German offensive is broken," he said, referring to the present battle. "The Americans, after our victorious resistance, will arrive in time for decisive action. The figures given by Secretary Baker three weeks ago on the number of American troops in Europe will be double before midsummer. The number of American troops will be three times larger before the end of 1918. We now are transporting in one month what would have taken five months at the beginning of the war. The capacity of troop transports from America to France is notably larger than the means for the transport of German troops from the Russian to the French front in the most favorable circumstances.

"The immediate use of American fighting elements as soon as they land was settled by the recent agreement on brigading. This answers the urgent necessity of the present, and thorough progressive training prepares for the constitution of large units of the American Army under the command of General Pershing.

"Those are the capital results of the last two months. Add to them the unity of command and you will be able to judge clearly the manner in which the United States understood the last battle. These measures assure for the allied armies for the final period of the war a superiority in numbers and the possibility of unlimited replenishment."

In his statement, M. Tardieu reviews in much detail what the American Government is doing to organize and intensify its war power. Internal taxes have been increased fivefold and 30 per cent. of the total expenditures are being paid direct from taxation. The minimum income tax has been raised from 2 per cent. to 4 per cent. and the surtax from 13 to 64 per cent.

Big Output of Rifles.

He explains how America by voluntary restrictions raised the supply of grain for export from 150,000 tons available in January to 3,120,000 tons, so that the Allies are enabled to await the new crop. Reciting figures on war material manufacture, he said:

"In a few weeks from now 200,000 rifles and 18,000 quickfirers and machine guns of all kinds will be manufactured monthly. The Liberty motors, the first order for which was for 22,000, went through the final tests last month. They are being delivered at the rate of more than 1,000 a month now, and all will be delivered before the end of six months."

M. Tardieu goes very fully into the shipbuilding situation and recites at length what America has done, especially for France, during twelve months. Among other things, he says, she has furnished sufficient grain to feed 11,000,000 persons and steel sufficient to manufacture 100,000,000 three-inch shells. He continues:

"In the midst of battle on March 29 the French Government cabled me its immediate need of 30,000 tons of food products ready for consumption. Thanks to American and British aid, I was able to cable that 35,000 tons would be shipped before April 12.

"All our needs in war material are covered until the end of 1918, and even longer."

Praises American Spirit.

In the purchase of war material M. Tardieu says that the economies perfected from November to May totalled at least $45,000,000. This was obtained by the co-operation of Federal authorities and by the extension of direct negotiations and the suppression of intermediaries.

"What figures cannot express," he concludes, "is the wonderful spirit in which sentiments of right draw to our aid this country of 100,000,000 inhabitants. What figures will not show is the deep and sincere feeling of this great democracy toward the French democracy. When I came back to France last November I said, 'I have entire confidence.'

"Today I have only to show the results obtained."

WASHINGTON, May 25.—More than 200,000 Americans will be sent abroad during May, and that number probably will be much exceeded next month, members of the Senate Military Committee were told today at their weekly conference with Secretary Baker and his assistants.

Great satisfaction with the speed with which troops are going abroad was expressed by the Senators.

The Senators said that, taking the production situation as a whole and excluding aircraft alone, the manufacture of war materials was showing considerable improvement. The aviation situation, they said, showed no appreciable betterment.

BORGLUM WOULD UNITE EACH ACTIVITY OF WAR

Suggests One Man to Command All Navies and Another All Branches of Aeronautics.

As General Foch has the direction of the fighting men of the allied forces, so other important branches of the service of the allied armies should each have its individual head—aviation, the naval forces, finances, and the commissariat—Gutzon Borglum said yesterday afternoon in an address at a tea given in his studio at 166 East Thirty-eighth Street for the benefit of the New York Wellesley College War Service Workroom. The tea was under the direction of the New York Alumnae Chapter of Society Zeta Alpha of Wellesley, of which Mrs. Borglum is a member. Mr. Borglum began by voicing his opinion on airplanes, and added:

"There should be a single head of the airplane service, as there is of the army. The time is coming when General Foch will order the armies of the world fighting on the side of the Allies, as I might order the people in this room. The time is coming when England will have charge of all the fleets. England has kept Germany bottled up, she has earned the right to be in charge of the world's navies. The United States should look after the food and finances.

"We have great resources to draw upon in the way of provisions, all the way from Labrador to Cape Horn, and we have the men to control the finances. Some one competent should be in charge of the aeronautics. Italy stands first in that field. She has more initiative, more experience, and her men have undertaken the most daring exploits. It may be given to Italy or to some other nation, but there should be some one head which has the power to order the planes as they are needed from this factory or that and to get them on demand, to be sent where they are most needed."

Mr. Borglum said he supposed his hearers wished to know something about the airplane scandal, but he would like to have that passed. He believed, he said, however, that nothing had so aroused the public to a knowledge of and interest in conditions.

"The United States," he said, "is better fitted to take up a world program of aeronautics than any other country in the world except Russia. I have called the President's attention to the fact that now that Germany is advancing into Russia she has access to the country with the greatest resources for building aircraft of any in the world except our own. If she is allowed to make use of this opportunity she will have an advantage of us that will be very dangerous.

"In our own country a great department has wasted fourteen months in experiments. We have ordered 22,300 Liberty motors, we are still in the nursery of aeronautics, and we can't build airplanes until we have had air experience or something equivalent to it, and we will not take advantage of that of other nations. We do want planes and we want our boys protected against accidents like that which happened to Lufbery the other day.

"Our enemies' planes outclass ours. We can supply the initiative, the material, and the men, and yet we are behind our enemy, who steals our ideas, and we are browbeaten and abused when we speak of it. We now have a new head; we have fearless men, and I believe we can have a program of aeronautics that will astonish the world. We should have 20,000, 30,000, 50,000—yes, 100,000 planes, if necessary. Personally I believe it is the airplane which will change conditions.

"Airplanes can be made as safe as automobiles. Losses are caused by accidents. Airplanes can be made to come to the ground automatically if the pilot loses control. With the tandem engine we shall come to have constant power.

"A curious thing about flying is that all fear disappears. You feel as if there was something firm beneath you. We shall never have trouble in getting men. Our greatest fault of aeronautics in America is that we have not had one competent man of international reputation who had anything to do with it. You can't have airplanes made by tailors, shoemakers, business men, or even by sculptors. The nation has been stirred now, and the authorities recognize that aeronautics must be dealt with as one of the great forces."

SHY AT COMPROMISE ON REVENUE BILL

or agreement whatsoever further than to authorize me to say to the President that if the legislation went over they would do what they could to expedite its passage during the next session.

"I am deeply disappointed at not reaching an agreement with our Republican colleagues, and I hope that despite this failure the President may find himself able to acquiesce in postponing this legislation."

Senator Gallinger of New Hampshire, leader of the minority, representing the consensus of opinion of the Republican Senators on the subject, gave out the following statement:

"Republican Senators recognize that additional revenues will be necessary in the near future, and for that reason they are prepared to consider revenue legislation whenever the majority thinks it wise to do so, and they are ready to co-operate to secure the passage of a revenue bill without unnecessary delay."

Senator Lewis of Illinois, representing the views of those of the Senate Finance Committee who favor the enactment of a bill at the current session, said:

"I believe it is the duty of Congress to pass the new revenue bill before it adjourns, so that business generally and the people throughout the country may know what they will be called upon to do. The West and North are with me in this position, but the South and East are against me. Their answer is that there is enough money on hand to meet expenses until next December, and that the committee can hold hearings in the interim and have a bill ready for passage when Congress convenes, so that it may become a law by the first of January. My reply to that is that business will be in a state of uneasiness and unrest unless it knows what demands will be made when the new bill goes into effect.

"Those who favor delay bring forth the other argument that Congress can adjourn and meet again in extra session in October and pass the bill. My answer to that is that one-third of the Senators will be busy with their campaigns, and it would be an unnecessary hardship upon them to force them to come back here for an extra session when the matter could be just as easily disposed of now.

"I believe we should trust the President and Secretary McAdoo as to whether a bill is necessary, and, if they say it is, Congress should put aside all other considerations and stay here long enough to pass it."

$26,000,000,000 by Next March.

In presenting the situation to the Ways and Means Committee, Representative Kitchin said that about $26,000,000,000 must be raised before next March. He asserted that it was the opinion of the majority that one-third of this amount, or more than $8,000,000,000, must come from direct taxation. The general character of a bill which would be framed was outlined. He said that at least 87 per cent. of the taxes to be levied under the proposed bill was to be raised from readjusting the rates on excess profits, income, and inheritance taxes.

While not agreeing entirely to the general trend of the provisions of this suggested measure, the Republican members of the House Committee promptly united with the Democrats in adopting the program proposed by President Wilson to prevent revenue legislation before election. As soon as the action of the committee became known the spirits of members of the House, who hoped to get away early, revived, only to be crushed again by the determination of the Republicans in the Senate to reject the President's program.

"There was most hearty accord and co-operation displayed by Republicans and Democrats upon the committee looking toward making any reasonable arrangement to postpone action on the Revenue bill this session," said Mr. Kitchin. "There was absolutely no dissension.

"While I am convinced that it is neither wise nor necessary to have a Revenue bill at this session, still if the President, being Commander in Chief of our army and navy, concludes and says that it is necessary now, I as well as other members of the Ways and Means Committee will with pleasure and without complaint or protest consider and frame the best and wisest bill we can."

Representative Fordney of Michigan, ranking Republican member of the Ways and Means Committee, disagreed with the statement made by Senator Gallinger, and said that Senator Gallinger did not speak for all the Republicans.

"He cannot speak for all of the Republicans in Congress," said Mr. Fordney. "I think it is a great mistake to consider this revenue legislation now. We cannot tell how much money we will need next Fall, nor how much the present law will produce, if we are called upon by the President to enact new war taxes. I shall regret it very much."

Democratic leaders said tonight, following the rejection of the President's conditions by the Republicans of the Senate, that they looked forward to remaining here until late in October unless the President should agree to an adjournment early in September after the revenue bill had been reported to the House. Senator Simmons will make an effort to induce the President to consent to an adjournment as soon as the Revenue bill is framed by the Ways and Means Committee and sent to the House.

It is pointed out that if this is done the way will be prepared for prompt action in an extraordinary session which the President might call for the specific purpose of enacting the Revenue bill. Representative Kitchin, who predicted yesterday that there would be a Revenue bill this session, reiterated his belief that the President would support Secretary McAdoo in the controversy, and recommend to Congress the enactment of legislation at this session.

PRESIDENT APPROVES WAR MOURNING BANDS

Letter to Women's Committee Commends the Wearing of Simple Badges of Loss.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—President Wilson has approved a suggestion made by the Women's Committee of the Council of National Defense that, instead of wearing conventional mourning for relatives who have died in the service of their country, American women should wear a black band on the left arm with a gilt star on the band for each member of the family who has given up his life for the nation. The following letter to Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, Chairman of the Women's Committee, made public today, contains the President's approval:

THE WHITE HOUSE.
Washington, May 22, 1918.

My Dear Dr. Shaw: Thank you for your letter of yesterday. I do entirely approve of the action taken by the Women's Committee in executive session, namely that a three-inch black band should be worn, upon which a gilt star may be placed for each member of the family whose life is lost in the service, and that the band shall be worn on the left arm. I hope and believe that thoughtful people everywhere will approve of this action, and I hope that you will be kind enough to make the suggestion of the committee public, with the statement that it has my cordial indorsement.

Cordially and sincerely yours,
WOODROW WILSON.

In an explanatory statement on the subject the Women's Committee says:

This action of the committee at this time is prompted by a feeling on their part that we should determine beforehand the attitude we are to take toward the inevitably growing death roll of the defenders of our country. The wearing of such insignia will, they feel, express better than mourning the feeling of the American people that such losses are a matter of glory rather than of prostrating grief and depression.

For a long time the Women's Committee has been receiving letters from women urging some such action on their part. The determined avoidance of mourning by English women has been much commented on and praised. One woman who advocates this step has four sons in the service, one of whom has already been killed. She wrote recently: "I know the costliness of such supreme glory and sacrifice, and have felt both the selfish temptation to hide my pain behind a mourning that would hold off intrusion and the inspiration and stimulus of keeping up to my gallant son's expectation that I should regard his death as a happy promotion into higher service. Patriotism means such exalted living that dying is not the harder part."

The insignia which has been chosen by the Women's Committee is of a kind that can readily be made at home out of whatever material can be procured. The band is to be black and three inches wide—the stars gilt, and one for each member of the family who has lost his life in service. These stars may be gold, of gilded metal, or satin, or of cloth. The design will not be patented, and the insignia will never become a commercial article.

GOOD TIME FOR AIR MAIL.

Philadelphia Round Trip Made in 3 Hours and 14 Minutes.

The air mail service between Belmont Park and Philadelphia flew smoothly yesterday. When Lieutenant Stephen Bonsal got off at 11:20 the wind was blowing ten miles an hour and increased through the day. The atmosphere was hazy, so that he had to fly low, but he reached Philadelphia, took the mail from the Washington carrier and got back here at 2:34 P. M., making the round trip in three hours and fourteen minutes. The Liberty motor was not used, one of the smaller planes being employed.

Lieutenant Bonsal carried 155 pounds of mail on the outgoing trip and about the same weight returning.

Miss Stinson Still at Binghamton.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., May 25.—Katherine Stinson, with a temperature of 102 degrees and every appearance of being ill, was proposing late this afternoon to attempt to continue her flight from Chicago to New York. At 3:54 o'clock this afternoon she went up in the plane. At 4:12 she returned to the starting place and reported that her engine was missing and she had no power. She was not able to make a start today.

CROPSEY AT SYRACUSE.

His Presence in Whitman Stronghold Causes Political Speculation.

Special to The New York Times.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., May 25.—Supreme Court Justice Cropsey of Brooklyn, the man who told Governor Whitman to his face last Fall that he had espoused the "moneybund" cause in championing the re-election of Mayor Mitchel, set politicians to speculating tonight when he came three hundred miles and spent two days to deliver an address to the Syracuse Credit Men's Association.

Justice Cropsey declined to talk politics, but Joseph C. Early, his press agent, did not hesitate to say that the jurist's appearance in this county, the stronghold of Governor Whitman, was the opening wedge in a movement which would land Justice Cropsey the nomination for Governor this Fall in the primaries.

Justice Cropsey, in his speech, said he welcomed the advent of women into the electorate, "for they have a grand opportunity to strengthen the great political parties that now exist, or to make strong those that may hereafter come into existence."

John C. Burlingame of the Eighth Senate District, who accompanied Justice Cropsey, expressed the opinion that his trip to Syracuse might be productive of interesting consequences within a few weeks.

ROOSEVELT AGAIN ASSAILS BURLESON

Statement Amplifying Charge of Press Discrimination Is Read Into Senate Record.

HOLDS WILSON TO BLAME

EDITOR REPLIES BY LEWIS

Burleson Says Colonel Fails to Prove Charges and Lacks Courage to Admit It.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—The promised letter of Theodore Roosevelt in reply to Postmaster General Burleson's challenge to him to produce evidence of his charge that the Administration had a tendency to wink at newspapers which oppose the war and yet support the Administration, while punishing those which oppose the Administration, even though supporting the war, was read into the Senate record today by Senator Poindexter of Washington, who received the letter yesterday. The Washington Senator offered the letter without comment.

In his letter Colonel Roosevelt amplifies his assertion, made in his earlier statement in reply to Mr. Burleson, that the Administration frowned upon criticism by The Metropolitan Magazine, to which he is a contributor; Collier's Weekly, and The New York Tribune, all of which, he says, although loyally supporting the war, had adversely commented upon the conduct of the war by the Administration. The ex-President adverts to the temporary effort to suppress The Metropolitan and to attacks upon The Tribune and Collier's by George Creel, head of the Committee on Public Information, whom Mr. Roosevelt holds responsible as speaking officially as President Wilson's representative.

As against the Administration's antagonistic attitude toward the three publications, Colonel Roosevelt goes into detail to show the favorable attitude, as he finds it, toward the publications of William Randolph Hearst, which he classes as pro-German. Colonel Roosevelt writes of the suppression of Tom Watson's Magazine, published in Georgia, for criticism of the attitude of the United States in the war. Yet Watson's magazine, the Colonel contends, had not done "anything like as dangerous to this country and our allies and as helpful to Germany as Mr. Hearst was at that very time doing."

Colonel Roosevelt argued that the Administration looked favorably upon the Hearst publications, despite their war attitude, because they were now supporting the Administration politically.

Lewis Offers Hearst's Reply.

After the Roosevelt letter had been read Senator Lewis of Illinois offered what he later described as Mr. Hearst's reply to the charges against him. This consisted of an editorial published in The New York American of May 13, entitled: "Mr. Hearst's Critical Analysis of Mr. Roosevelt; His Political Purposes." This editorial, dated Mount Clemens, Mich., characterised the Roosevelt charges as "baseless," and accused Mr. Roosevelt of playing politics in wartime. The ex-President was characterized by Mr. Hearst as "the Asquith of America."

When Senator Lewis had finished with the editorial, Senator Gallinger of New Hampshire, remarked that he hoped the reading of it would end the controversy, "at least for the Senate."

"And, I hope, for the country," assented Mr. Lewis.

Colonel Roosevelt in his letter to Senator Poindexter wrote at great length. The full text would take up more than a page of THE TIMES. Much space was given to a review of the controversy with the Postmaster General and of the action taken by him against The Metropolitan Magazine.

"Since the war began," said Colonel Roosevelt, "the Administration has used the very great powers of the Government over the public press to stifle honest criticism of Governmental inefficiency or misconduct, while condoning (which necessarily means encouraging) pro-German, anti-Ally, and their anti-American agitation in certain powerful papers which defended this inefficiency and misconduct; and it has sought from Congress a great addition to the already existing power it has thus misused. I believe that the first article of the Constitution guarantees the right of the people to criticise truthfully the conduct of their public servants, and that this right cannot be taken away by any law.

"During the last year the action of the Administration, taken largely through the Post Office Department, has been such as to render it a matter of some danger for any man, and especially any newspaper, to speak the truth. If that truth be unpleasant to the Governmental authorities at Washington. The effect of this attitude has been very marked politically. Such coercive power tends to make upright men, even although they are strong men, cautious about telling truths which ought to be told. It forces weak men to praise the Administration, whether it does well or ill. It invites unscrupulous men who desire to serve Germany to gain license to do so and to secure advantages by praising the Administration, especially when it has acted wrongfully or inefficiently, and by supporting it politically.

Club Held by Administration.

"There are cases where all competent and honest observers are morally certain that political support has been given and is now being given to the Administration by various newspapers, especially German-American and semi-socialistic newspapers, because of the club thus held over them by the Administration. From the very nature of the case, there can rarely be positive proof in such cases, but, as regards the most striking cases of favoritism, those concerning the Hearst papers, as compared with the suppression of Tom Watson's paper, and the attack (for nominally wholly different reasons) on the Metropolitan, (magazine,) I herein give the facts which prove exactly what I have alleged.

"The Postmaster General has raised the issue; I meet it squarely; and he shall not evade it. The Administration has successfully endeavored to prevent expression of opinion hostile to it and to put a premium upon supporting the President personally and politically, without regard to whether his actions are detrimental or beneficial to the country."

Colonel Roosevelt also assailed Chairman Creel of the Committee on Public Information, and, imputing the responsibility for the acts of the Postmaster General and Mr. Creel, said:

"I deal with Mr. Burleson and his actions purely because he is a representative of President Wilson: exactly as is Secretary Baker; exactly as is Mr. Creel. President Wilson is responsible for everything Postmaster General Burleson and Secretary Baker and Mr. Creel do or leave undone. * * * I have scant patience with the timidity or the folly which dares not hold accountable the source of power and only venture to express displeasure with instruments through which the power is exercised. Messrs. Burleson, Baker, Creel, and their associates possess no importance whatever, except that accruing to them because it is through them the President speaks and acts, or refuses or fails to act."

"Partisan Political Propaganda."

In attacking Mr. Creel, Colonel Roosevelt declared he "assails publications that truthfully expose shortcomings of the Administration and, without regard to the facts, personally and through his bureau, actively upholds the Administration in matters such as the aircraft program, in which have been grave Governmental shortcomings.

"This is partisan political propaganda of the very worst type," the ex-President declared, "carried on with public moneys under the guise of public work."

Regarding the Postmaster General's alleged attitude toward the Hearst papers, Colonel Roosevelt said:

"It is true that since we entered the war Mr. Hearst has at various times issued editorials professing great patriotic zeal, but it was at the very time when in other editorials he was attacking the allies of America, England, and Japan in the most offensive way and at the very time when he was upholding the Russian Bolsheviki, who had made Russia a traitor to the free nations of the world and a subservient ally of the German autocracy. Such action cannot fail to give aid and comfort to Germany.

"By turning to The New York Tribune of May 9, 1918, the Postmaster General will find an ardent tribute paid by the former German correspondent of Kölnische Zeitung (Cologne Gazette) to Mr. Hearst, and to Mr. Hearst's editor in chief, Arthur Brisbane, for having been auxiliaries of valued influence to Germany, especially because of the editorials in the Hearst newspapers.

Quotes New York Times Cable.

"In THE NEW YORK TIMES of Aug. 14, 1917, there is a quotation by special cable, via The Hague, from the German Vossische Zeitung, which states that the 'anti-war movement in America is gaining in strength,' and that 'war propagandists in the New York press have lately met stout resistance from no other than Mr. Hearst and his thirty papers, by the issuance of warnings to the people about the danger of plunging into European war,' and continues to speak of 'the generous nature of the work he had done for Germany' and that Mr. Hearst 'preached' in behalf of the Central Powers.

"Mr. Hearst earned the praise thus given him by the servants of the Kaiser, and during the time when he was earning it the Kaiser was saying to Ambassador Gerard, as the latter recites in his book, 'America had better look out after this war. I shall stand no nonsense after the war,' which the Ambassador reported to the Administration at Washington, without, by the way, producing any effect on the Administration.

"Mr. Brisbane in The Washington Times ably followed Mr. Hearst's lead," Colonel Roosevelt continued, citing several editorials from the Washington paper.

"Mr. Burleson has stated that he has received 'more complaints' about my writings than about those of Mr. Hearst. In view of Mr. Burleson's record and actions there is small cause for wonder in this. Every pro-German and anti-American, every believer in a feeble American war and a triumphant German peace, every man who follows Mr. Hearst would naturally appeal for sympathy to Mr. Burleson in denunciation of what I have done.

Attacks on Our Allies.

"Messrs. Hearst and Brisbane through their papers have been unceasing in their attacks upon England and Japan. The New York American on Dec. 20, 1917, said that 'the offensive and defensive alliance then negotiated between Japan and England was aimed at the United States.' This deliberate falsehood was published at the very time that England was defending us with her fleet and her army. There could be no meaner example of treachery to our allies and of subservience to our enemy. It was a thousand times more worth the attention of Mr. Burleson than anything done by the small papers against which the Post Office Department did act.

"On Sept. 15, 1917, Mr. Hearst's plea for a German peace in The New York American ran 'the best best peace for all concerned is a peace without victory, a peace without conquest, a peace without indemnities, a peace without annexations.'

"On March 2, 1918, Mr. Hearst made an embittered attack upon Japan, and on March 20 he repeated the attack. He spoke of the 'military despotism of Japan,' of the 'brutal Oriental selfishness in Japan's present attitude,' and then asked the question as to who was going to drive her from Siberia, answering it:

"'Not the Allies, for they are too much occupied with their war. Not the United States, because we are putting all our eggs in the Allies' basket. There is one combination possible which might drive Japan out of Siberia, and that is Russia in an active and aggressive alliance with the Teutonic empire.'

"These sentences amount to incitement to Russia to become the military ally and therefore the military vassal of Germany, and to the effort to persuade our people that the war is not our war, but only the war of the Allies—that it is 'their war.'

"Such language as this, used less than two months before Mr. Burleson issued his challenge to me, is a thousand times more damaging to the United States than anything ever said by Tom Watson or any other of the editors of small papers. For Mr. Burleson to allow the paper making such an appeal to go unchallenged, and yet at the same time to permit without rebuke the New York Post Office to attack a publication like The Metropolitan is incompatible with the supposition that he was thinking only of the welfare of the country.

Effort to Belittle America.

"Mr. Hearst's paper actually stated that it believed 'that our Government made a great mistake when it did not meet both English aggression and German aggression * * * with armed resistance.' Mr. Hearst * * * expresses regret that we did not go to war against the friends who fought for us. Such a proposal is a proposal in the interest of the enemy, who murdered our women and children."

Citing a number of other editorials from Hearst newspapers, Colonel Roosevelt declared:

"These quotations show that Mr. Hearst has steadily endeavored to belittle the vital importance to our country of this war and to excite the hatred of our people against allies who are faithfully fighting beside us; and such conduct can be of help only to Germany, to the enemy we are fighting. Just so long as Mr. Hearst's publications are permitted in the mails, Mr. Burleson is without excuse for excluding any other publications from them. The Administration, by its acquiescence, permits the continuance of Mr. Hearst's campaign, which necessarily tends to give aid and comfort to Germany and to impair the morale of our own people.

"The quotations given above deprive Mr. Burleson and the Administration of which he is a part of any shred of justification for their action and inaction. Mr. Burleson is, of course, only secondarily responsible in the matter. Mr. Hearst's papers are so important and Mr. Hearst's position among the Administration's political friends, supporters and advisers is so prominent, and the action in connection with reinstating him in his cable privileges was so purely dependent upon the President himself that no subordinate of the President can accept or be credited with the chief responsibility for any action or inaction of the Administration in relation to Mr. Hearst. The Administration is responsible for the toleration of Mr. Hearst's anti-ally, anti-war and therefore anti-American activities, and for the reward nevertheless given him; and the service rendered on the other side by Mr. Hearst was service to the Administration and not to the country.

Enemy Language Press.

"George Harvey has pointed out in the 'North American Review War Weekly' that Mr. Burleson is encouraging enemy language publications by having a special division whose function is to assist editors of foreign language papers" in complying with the law. The Act of Congress provides that all foreign language papers should submit to censorship or go out of business. The Post Office Department's duty is merely to suppress those of them which are guilty of treasonable practices. Apparently, as Mr. Harvey points out, Mr. Burleson, instead of suppressing papers that preach sedition, establishes a division to show them how they can escape suppression.

"Mr. Hearst's papers are infinitely the most important of those which during the last year and a quarter have served Germany and harmed the United States by attacking our allies, or opposing our effective participation in the war. There are various other papers published in English or German which have been less important offenders.

"On April 2 Professor Guernsey Jones of the University of Nebraska published an article in The Nebraska State Journal on 'The Enemy Press.' He quoted various articles that have appeared in German-American papers since the war, and some of them as late as January, February, and March last, championing the German-American Alliance, attacking England and Japan, announcing that "the problem of the German press is to save Deutschtum in the United States," demanding a peace which would give Germany the victory, praising Germany's friction toward Russia, and in other ways, as Professor Jones says, showing themselves to be 'insolent organs of Prussianism.'

"These papers were being published, and Mr. Hearst was publishing his papers, without interference by the Post Office Department and the Government, at the same time that proceedings were being taken against The Metropolitan Magazine, one of the stanchest upholders of the war and stanchest opponents of Prussianism in all the United States.

Congress Lavishly Generous.

"Congress has with lavish generosity granted all the Administration has demanded to carry on the war. It has also granted the Administration extraordinary power, of a kind never hitherto granted any Administration, to deal with the internal foes of the nation; and this power can be, and has been, misused, to reward the Administration's personal or political supporters and punish the Administration's personal or political friends. Congress—such bodies as the Senate Committee on Military Affairs—has exercised its power of investigation and supervision to correct executive inefficiency, executive delay, and executive abuse of power, and has done this in such fashion as to speed up and render immensely more efficient our part in the war. Congress should vigilantly exercise its right of supervision as regards the use of all the great powers it has granted the Administration over the properties and activities of the citizens of the United States.

"In his last statement about me Mr. Burleson, copying the example of Mr. Wegg, the employe of Mr. Boffin, dropped into verse. As he seems to like poetry I commend to him and to his associates the following lines:

Whoso speaks in your presence must say acceptable things;
Bowing the head in worship, bending the knee in fear—
Bringing the word well smoothen, such as a
King should hear.

Given to strong delusion, wholly believing
a lie,
Ye saw the land lay fenceless, and ye let the months go by,
Waiting some easy wonder; hoping some saving sign—
Idle—openly idle—in the lee of the forespent
Line.

Alleged Attempt at Boycott.

Colonel Roosevelt suggested that the Department of Justice had knowledge of an alleged attempt to boycott the Metropolitan Magazine through its advertisers. He said a man, representing himself to be an agent of the Department of Justice, called on E. M. Mansur, of Floral Park, N. Y., and asked him if he had stopped advertising and if he were going on advertising next year and then if he were an American citizen.

"The last querry taken in connection with the first two, contained of course an implication that was in effect a threat," said Colonel Roosevelt. "This shows that the Department of Justice had knowledge of the attempt to boycott The Metropolitan and lent its official power to further it unless the man in question had stolen the special agent's shield which he possessed and forged his name and address."

The agent's name was given as James A. Corcoran, with shield No. 436, giving his address as Box 241, Park Row, New York City.

Taking up his charges against the Hearst papers, Colonel Roosevelt compared them with Tom Watson's publication in Georgia, saying: "Yet the Administration crushed Tom Watson, a poor man, while it first tolerated and then encouraged wealthy, powerful Mr. Hearst.

"The Government had full notice about Hearst, because the Allies had barred him from the cable service, and only through the good offices of this Government have these privileges just now been restored to Mr. Hearst."

Postmaster General Burleson tonight authorized the following statement concerning Colonel Roosevelt's letter to Senator Poindexter:

"Mr. Roosevelt affects to disregard the incontestable facts contained in my statement published in the papers of the 20th, in which his charges were fully met.

"The extended remarks in The Congressional Record, inserted at his request by Senator Poindexter, as a whole are merely a rehash of partisan matter which has appeared from time to time in certain newspapers.

"The Post Office Department is charged with the execution of the laws, at the administration of which Mr. Roosevelt's criticism was aimed. He has failed to make good his accusations, but lacks the manly courage to acknowledge it."

BIG STORE MAY BE HOSPITAL

Government Considers Greenhut's as Base for Wounded Soldiers.

Commenting upon reports that Greenhut's dry good store, better known as the "Big Store," Sixth Avenue, Eighteenth to Nineteenth Streets, was to be taken over by the Government as a hospital, Benedict J. Greenhut, President of Greenhuts, Inc., said last night:

"Representatives of various departments of the Government have inspected our building, but up to the present I have not been notified that the store building had been found acceptable. I have told the Government the terms upon which I was willing to turn over the building, but I do not know if they were found satisfactory."

One report had it that the Greenhut store, formerly Siegel, Cooper & Co., was contemplated as a base hospital for more than 3,000 invalids. Approximately twenty-three acres of floor space was to be devoted to the care of wounded soldiers from the front, who were to be landed at Ellis Island, and from there transported to a Chelsea dock in specially designed motor launches, built to prevent rocking. It was stated that the store would be used only for medical cases, surgical patients being assigned to the more elaborately equipped hospitals maintained by the Government at Lakewood, N. J., and on Staten Island.

Gives Motor Unit's Right Name.

It was pointed out yesterday by Mrs. Coffin Van Rensselaer, Chairman of the Publicity Committee for the National League for Women's Service, that the correct designation of the unit of women motor-car drivers reviewed by Governor Whitman with the Ninth Coast Artillery Corps on Friday night was the New York Corps of the National League for Women's Service. Mrs. Van Rensselaer said that the unit was commanded by Captain Adelaide Baylis.

CHEERS FOR WOMAN CORPS

Regiment Gives Enthusiastic Welcome to Them and the Garde Republicaine Band in Armory.

The twelve companies of the new 7th Regiment, New York Guard, were standing at rest on their drillroom floor yesterday afternoon awaiting the command to march to Central Park, when there was a rattle of drums, and through the great door on the western side appeared the women of the Motor Corps clad in khaki and marching like veterans.

The cheers that rose from the ranks, which now hold many veterans of the old 7th, back in uniform after fifteen and even twenty-five years of rest, shook the armory roof. Company after company drew up to attention to do honor to the women's colors and then burst into cheers again.

Behind the women marched the Garde Republicaine band, detailed by the French Government to represent the army of France during the Red Cross drive. Their tight blue uniforms were the signal for another outburst, and then the 7th fell in and marched to Fifth Avenue and Sixtieth Street, where it entered Central Park and proceeded by the East Drive to the sheep meadow.

There the regiment passed in review before Governor Whitman. The regiment, commanded by Colonel De Witt Clinton Falls, turned out twelve rifle companies, a machine gun company, equipped with the new guns and ammunition cases, and a sanitary squad. The review was held to aid the Red Cross drive, and solicitors for gifts in the Red Cross uniforms passed through the rows of 7,500 spectators for contributions with much success.

Governor Whitman arrived in an automobile with Major F. L. V. Hoppin, his military aid, and a representative of the Red Cross Feature Committee. Major Gen. J. Franklin Bell, who had been announced as the reviewing officer, was not present. A number of French soldiers and sailors in uniform were among the spectators. Veterans of the old 7th gathered as an informal reception committee. Among them were Major J. Walter G. Mauler, Theodore Hodgman, Lieutenant W. A. Cable, Sergeant Martin, who has re-enlisted in the new 7th and been assigned to duty on the side lines, and George T. Wilson.

After the review the regiment was lined up in battalion formation facing the Governor, who addressed the men in part as follows:

"My voice may have been heard by many of you during the last few weeks. There is little new I may say to you, for the subjects first in the minds of our people during the last months are as familiar to you as to all of us, the patriotic causes for which we are living and acting.

"It is a wonderful way in which our people the country over have been giving during the last week to express their devotion to the American Red Cross. We are proud of New York and infinitely proud of what New York has done for the people of the world.

"The proud inheritance you have received from the old 7th Regiment you have well kept. You have taken their place to vindicate their record for the State. For all of us I want to express the gratitude of the people of New York State for what you have done, are doing, and are able to do in the future."

The evening parade, closing with the roll of drums and the bugle call of "Taps," ended the ceremony.

SCHOOL FOR WAR CRIPPLES.

Red Cross Institute to Train Teachers to Re-educate Injured.

The Red Cross Institute for Crippled and Disabled Men, 311 Fourth Avenue, announced yesterday the institution of a training course in vocational re-education of disabled soldiers. The statement issued reads:

"In the same spirit that has prompted the American Red Cross to respond to every emergency and provide first aid, the Red Cross Institute for Crippled and Disabled Men has instituted a course of instruction to prepare teachers to re-educate soldiers and sailors disabled in the service of the United States. This training course in vocational re-education is primarily intended to give a selected group of teachers connected with the Federal Board for Vocational Education an opportunity to learn the application of the cripple problem to their professional work.

"The period of training began on May 20, and consisted of an analysis of the cripple problem, lectures on the experience in foreign countries, the medical aspects, industrial surveys, administration of cripple institutions, plans of the Surgeon General's office, and general instructions.

"It is conceded that the only sound method of dealing with crippled soldiers or civilians is to train them for trades in which their physical disability is not a handicap. It rests with the people, however, as to whether they will encourage the returned soldier or the industrial cripple to accept the advantages of training that will refit him for a useful and independent life. In the past, the widespread belief that the cripple is unable to do any kind of work has been a more serious handicap than the loss of a limb."

WANT PRACTICAL COAL MAN.

Preference of Boatmen's Union for Federal Administrator.

James Matthews, General Organizer of the Tidewater Boatmen's Union, Local 847, issued a statement yesterday in which he favored the appointment of a practical coal man to succeed Albert H. Wiggin, head of the Chase National Bank, as State Fuel Administrator. The Boatmen's Union is affiliated with the International Longshoremen's Association, which handles the coal as it is transported in barges from the tidewater ports.

"There was 80 per cent. less coal shipped from the tidewater points from April 1 up to the present time than was shipped in the same period last year," Mr. Matthews said. "It is now time to store coal, and there is no State Fuel Administrator."

Mr. Matthews stated that, as a result of a resolution adopted after the hearing of the Labor League on the coal and ice situation in the Aldermanic Chamber in City Hall Friday, an investigation would be made of the coal mining situation. He said it was known that the mines were not mining 100 per cent. coal. He said that the investigator would probably be Daniel Miller, delegate of the Central Federated Union and also of the Tidewater Boatmen's Union.

BANS SPECULATION ON TROOP SAILINGS

Baker Requests Press to Avoid Comment on Number of Men Being Sent to France.

FEARS SPUR TO SUBMARINES

Secretary of War Also Sees Danger of the Public Being Unintentionally Misled.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—Officials of the military and naval establishments are hoping that the loss of the transport Moldavia with American lives will lead to an entire absence of comment indicating that the United States is actively engaged in sending soldiers to Europe. There is no claim that any information has been given to the enemy through recent discussion of that character, but officials feel, they say, that agitation of the subject may impel the Germans to greater submarine efforts.

While not taking that angle in a statement he made today, Secretary Baker requested newspapers to refrain from comment and speculation concerning the numbers of troops sent to Europe except where there was official basis furnished in numbers disclosed by the Secretary of War. The apparent purpose of the statement was to prevent the country from obtaining a false impression as to the number of troops which the United States had sent and was sending to the theatre of war. Mr. Baker promised to give approximate numbers from time to time.

Mr. Baker's statement was made in the course of an interview. It follows:

"A good deal of public comment, through the press and otherwise, is being made on the subject of the number of American troops in France and the number from time to time in course of transportation.

"I want to ask the newspapers of the country to refrain from comment and speculation on this subject, except to the extent that official statements with regard to such numbers are made by the Secretary of War. I make this request because any program of troop shipment necessarily depends upon a variety of considerations quite apart from the number of troops in the country and the available troopship capacity, and I am therefore anxious that the people of the country be not unintentionally misled either as to the facts at any given time or by speculative possibilities of the situation. I will endeavor, from time to time, and whenever it can be done, to state through the press approximate numbers.

"My particular request, however, is that such statements be not made the basis of inferences as to future intentions or possibilities."

NEW COFFEE LICENSE RULE.

Must Be Imported at Freight Rate Established by War Board.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—The War Trade Board, after consultation with the Chartering Committee of the United States Shipping Board, announced the following ruling today with regard to the importation of coffee:

"No coffee shall be imported into the United States, which is carried at a rate of freight greater than the rate established by the United States Shipping Board.

"All licenses heretofore issued for the importation of coffee have been suspended, and any such license will become valid only after it has been presented to a branch office of the War Trade Board, together with an affidavit duly verified by the license, stating that the rate of freight paid on the shipment of coffee covered by his license does not exceed the rate established by the United States Shipping Board.

"Every applicant for a license to import coffee into the United States must hereafter file with his application an affidavit containing the statement set forth in the foregoing paragraph."

ARRESTED FOR OLD MURDER

Moisant, Just Out of Prison, Accused of Killing Man in 1916.

Detectives in the Fourth Branch Bureau yesterday arrested Mitchell Moisant of 3,132 Broadway on a warrant issued in March, 1916, for his alleged connection with the murder of Thomas Durkin in his home at 315 West 118th Street on Sept. 27, 1915. Moisant was arrested as he was leaving the penitentiary in Mansfield, Ohio, upon completing a term of fifteen months upon conviction for robbery, and a charge of homicide has been entered against him here.

It is alleged that Moisant sought to enter the home of Durkin while a party was going on there, and Durkin ejected him when he learned that the visitor had not been invited and was not known to any of the guests. While Durkin and his brother James and William Elliott were asleep on the lower floor of the house later in the night a man fired a shot through an open window, killing Durkin. Upon evidence gathered from guests a warrant for the arrest of Moisant was issued in the Court of General Sessions on March 3, 1916.

NO ANTI-HEARST CONSPIRACY

Father of Mount Vernon Newspaper Ordinance Denies Collusion.

Pending a decision by the Supreme Court on the legality of the ordinance adopted by the City Council of Mount Vernon to forbid the sale there of The New York American and The Journal, District Attorney Swann started an investigation yesterday at the request of counsel for the newspapers, who asked him to ascertain if a conspiracy had existed to induce public bodies within the State to interfere with the business of the publications.

Councilman William G. Dawson, who was summoned as the chief witness, because he had prepared and had the ordinance passed, declared that he knew of no conspiracy in that connection. He admitted that Corporation Counsel Joseph Esser of Mount Vernon had refused to draft the ordinance on the ground that such action was illegal. Dawson, who is a plumber, said he came here from Scotland in 1906. He asserted that an article he had read in The New York Tribune on May 12 had "inspired" him in favor of such an ordinance.

BRITISH OFFICERS ARRIVE.

Capt. H. B. Mullineux to be Naval Attache at Washington.

AN ATLANTIC PORT, May 25.—Among British army and navy officers who arrived yesterday from England was Captain H. B. Mullineux of the navy, who is on his way to Washington to serve as Naval Attache at the Embassy.

Other British officials to arrive were Sir William Wiseman, Bart., who is on the staff of Lord Reading and has just been over to the Foreign Office, London, with dispatches; Sir Richard Paget, Captain P. H. R. Whittet, Lieut. Col. Maitland-Edwards, and other officers in the British Army coming on special missions.

Lieutenant Robert de Violini of the Bersaglieri Regiment, arrived on a mission to the United States Government. He fought through the campaign in the Alps and lost his left eye. He expressed great enthusiasm when he heard that America was going to send troops to Italy.

BIG GAIN IN DEPOSITS BY RESERVE BANKS

Increases in Holdings of Discounted Paper and Note Circulation Also Reported.

JUMP IN EARNING ASSETS

$39,500,000 Increase for the Week Reported—Shifting of Credits in Gold Settlement Fund.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—Considerable gains in the holdings of discounted paper, accompanied by increases in net deposits and in Federal Reserve note circulation are indicated in the Federal Reserve Board's weekly bank statement issued as at the close of business on May 24.

Discounted bills on hand show an increase for the week of over $81,000,000, the New York bank alone reporting an increase under this head of $73,500,000. Of the total on hand about 65 per cent., as against 63 per cent. the week before, is represented by war paper, i. e., by member banks, notes, and customers' paper secured by Liberty bonds and certificates of indebtedness. Aggregate holdings of acceptances declined about $1,700,000, although the New York bank reports an increase of $8,500,000 in its holdings of purchased paper. United States bonds on hand increased about $1,000,000, while United States notes and certificates on hand show a decrease of $40,600,000, practically all at the New York bank. Total earning assets show an increase for the week of $39,500,000.

Government deposits show an increase of $73,600,000, while members' reserve deposits fell off about $25,000,000.

The week witnessed a further gain of $3,000,000 in the gold reserves and of $3,300,000 in the banks' total cash reserves. Considerable shifting of credits in the Gold Settlement Fund between individual banks on the one hand and between banks and agents on the other are a notable feature of the week's development. The banks' reserve percentage shows a decline from 63.1 to 62.4 per cent., largely due to the increase in Government deposits.

Additional net issues of $14,400,000 of Federal Reserve notes are reported by the agents. The actual note circulation shows an increase of $9,200,000, Cleveland, San Francisco, and Philadelphia reporting the largest increases for the week.

Payment for Federal Reserve Bank stock by newly admitted members largely accounts for a total increase of $150,000 in the paid-in capital of eight banks, St. Louis reporting an increase under this head of $100,000.

The statement of each of the twelve banks for the week ending May 24 follows:

Member Banks Also Report Decline in Certificates of Indebtedness.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—Decreases in the holdings of both United States bonds and certificates of indebtedness, accompanied by a slight increase in the total loans supported by the securities, are indicated by the weekly statement showing the condition of 688 member banks in about 100 leading cities.

United States bonds on hand, exclusive of circulation bonds, show a decrease of $41,400,000, the banks in the three central reserve cities reporting a decrease of about $12,000,000 and those in other reserve cities a decrease of over $26,000,000. Of the total decrease of $12,200,000 in certificates of indebtedness about $6,400,000 is reported by the central reserve city banks and about $4,000,000 by banks in other reserve cities. Loans secured by United States war obligations increased by about $17,300,000, largely at central reserve city banks. Of the total investments the share of Government war securities and loans supported by such securities is 20.3 per cent., as against 20.5 per cent. the week before.

Net demand as well as time deposits of all reporting banks show but little change, while Government deposits increased about $157,000,000. Corresponding changes at banks in Central Reserve cities include decreases of $11,300,000 in net demand deposits and of $7,900,000 in time deposits, as against an increase of $313,700,000 in Government deposits.

Total reserves declined about $75,000,000 and cash in vault about $6,300,000. For the Central Reserve city banks, corresponding decreases of $62,000,000 and $57,000,000 are shown.

Owing mainly to the large increase in Government deposits, the ratio of investments to total deposits of all reporting banks shows a decline from 113.4 to 108.8 per cent. For the Central Reserve city banks, this ratio shows a corresponding decline from 111.1 to 105.4 per cent. The ratio of combined cash and reserve to total deposits declined from 14.4 to 13.5 per cent. and for the Central Reserve city banks from 16.1 to 14.2 per cent. Excess reserves of all reporting banks decreased from $161,500,000 to $88,300,000. For the Central Reserve city banks these reserves are calculated at $49,200,000, or $60,300,000 less than the week before.

Trading Quiet on Paris Bourse.

PARIS, May 25.—The Bourse was quiet today. Three per cent. rentes sold at 60 francs for cash. Exchange on London was 27 francs 15½ centimes. The 5 per cent. loan was quoted at 87 francs 80 centimes.

CANADIAN TRADE EXPANDS.

Reaches Point Higher Than Ever Before in Dominion's History.

The trade returns of the Dominion of Canada for the fiscal year just ended, as issued by the Census and Statistics Office, show that the volume of Canada's external trade is now greater than at any previous period in the history of the Dominion. For the fiscal year ended March 31, 1918, the grand total of the imports for consumption and exports of Dominion merchandise—taking no account of the movement of coin and bullion—was more than $2,500,000,000.

Imports for consumption for the fiscal year 1918 were greater by 56 per cent. than for the year just prior to the war, namely, the fiscal year 1914. Under the stimulus of war orders, the export trade shows a still greater development, exports of Canadian goods for the year 1918 exceeding in value similar exports in 1914 by 256 per cent.

The total trade of Canada, imports for consumption and exports of Canadian produce, amounted to $2,502,549,635, for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1918, while the value for similar trade for the fiscal year just prior to the war amounted to $1,050,045,583, showing an increase from 1914 to 1918 of $1,452,504,052. This increase is more than the whole trade for the fiscal year 1916. The imports of merchandise for the fiscal year 1918 were valued at $962,521,847, and in 1914 at $618,457,144, showing an increase of $344,064,703, while the exports of Canadian merchandise in 1918 amounted to $1,540,027,788, and in 1914 to $431,588,439, showing a betterment from 1914-18, of $1,108,439,349.

In the fiscal year 1918 the customs revenue amounted to $161,588,465; in 1914 the similar revenue amounted to $107,180,578, showing an increase from 1914 to 1918 of $54,407,887, or about 51 per cent.

CRIMSON AND BLUE OUTRUN BY TIGERS

Princeton Athletes Take Triangular Meet from Rivals with 49 1-3 Points.

BARRETT AND ERDMAN STAR

Each Captures Two First Places in Struggle at New Haven —Harvard is Third.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., May 25.—Princeton's track stars swept Yale and Harvard from the field today in the first triangular meet of the college rivals. The Tigers totaled 49 1-3 points to 41 1-3 for the Elis and only 18 for the Crimson. Harvard's poor showing was anticipated, but it was not believed that Yale would so nearly equal Princeton's score.

Performances of brilliant quality were given by Captain J. H. Barrett of the victorious team. He was first in the quarter mile in 50 4-5 seconds. C. R. Erdman of Princeton, captured the high hurdles in 15 3-5 seconds and the low event in 25 seconds. Only the fact that three Princeton men scooped all the points in both hurdles races, thereby enabling Erdman to win both events without being pushed to his limit, prevented him from lowering records of the Yale, Harvard, Princeton competitions of the past.

Erdman shared honors with Captain Barrett as individual high scorer of the meet. Barrett's capture of the furlong event in 22 3-5 seconds made his second victory. These two sterling athletes accounted for twenty of their team's points. E. A. Stewart, in winning the 100-yard dash in 10 2-5 seconds, and E. M. Brock, with a leap of 5 feet 8¾ inches in the high jump, registered Princeton's other firsts.

Yale swept the field in the pole vault. Gerald Sweeney cleared the bar at 12 feet for the first place. Harvard got only a single first, the hammer throw, which A Stewart took with a heave of 130 feet 11 inches.

Because of the scarcity of entries trial heats were necessary in only the 220-yard dash. The performance of E. B. Fisher of Yale in taking the mile run in 4:36 3-5, and that of E. A. Cross in unexpectedly winning the two-mile event in 10:07, were up to former standards of the three universities.

HARVARD'S FRESHMEN WIN.

Defeat Yale Cub Oarsmen by a Length and Three-Quarters.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, May 25.—Harvard's freshman crew finished its season today by beating the Yale freshmen by a length and three-quarters over the one-and-seven-eighths-mile course on the Charles, duplicating its performance against the Princeton freshmen a few weeks ago. The Harvard second 'Varsity crew, however, was not equal to the task of beating the Yale 'Varsity substitutes.

The New Haven crew was much heavier and stronger, and Harvard was at a disadvantage of not having rowed together more than three days. Yale took the lead in the race, but at the halfway mark Harvard barely nosed ahead. In the last three-quarters of a mile, though, Yale's strength told, and there was never any question as to which crew would win, although at the finish Yale was only three-quarters of a length ahead.

DEFEAT FOR OUIMET IN BEST-BALL MATCH

Former Champion, Paired with Anderson, Loses to Travers and Kirkby at Garden City.

The old saying that it's difficult to serve two masters was called to mind in the four-ball match for the Red Cross at the Garden City Golf Club yesterday, when Sergeant Francis Ouimet, with John Anderson for a partner, lost to Jerome Travers and Oswald Kirkby. The last-named pair won by 4 up and 3 to play in an eighteen-hole round.

Because he has done so much in the past, great things are always expected of Ouimet, but the rugged soldier life at Camp Devens has had an effect on his muscles, and they were not under the usual control when it came to propelling the lively rubber core. Oftimes the former open champion went a-wandering on his tee shots, and these mistakes usually meant disaster, for traps appear everywhere at Garden City.

With the exception of the Woodland golfer, all the others were in good form. Anderson, who worked like a Major, went out in 39, which was the best ball for his side. Travers made the first nine in 38 and Kirkby in 40, while Ouimet, with a couple of bad holes, took 45.

So well did Travers and Kirkby fit as a combination that they rarely slipped up at any one hole. As the match advanced it began to look as though their opponents would not be able to do more than get halves, and as a matter of fact the Jersey pair stood dormie when Ouimet finally broke through their defence by winning the fourteenth hole in a 3, a stroke under par.

Ouimet, who had the honor on the first tee, pulled to the side of a bunker and from there he failed to get clear of the sand trap further on. After that the former open champion picked up as Anderson had reached the green nicely on his second shot. Travers would have won the hole after one of those rare approaches, which left him a wee putt for a 3, had Anderson not risen to the occasion by running in a fairly long one.

Although Ouimet and Travers both found trouble at the short second, the Woodland golfer overplaying to a trap and Jerry falling short in the big hazard, Anderson and Kirkby made the green nicely, and it looked like a half in 3. Anderson's putt, however, was deflected, glancing off a small pebble. The next three holes were halved, Anderson and Travers getting 4s at the third, and all making the long fourth in 5, except Ouimet, who got badly bunkered on his second shot. To the fifth hole Ouimet laid a mashie shot to within twelve feet of the pin and the gallery applauded, yet a moment later Travers got inside of the Woodland man on the like. Both missed their tries for 3s, Travers's putt, which was only about six feet, rimming the cup.

A little later the Upper Montclair golfer brought off a putt of about two yards to win the sixth hole. That made his side two up. Both Kirkby and Ouimet were tangled up in the rough going to the long seventh hole, which was halved in 5 by Anderson and Travers. All got 4s at the eighth except Jerry, who shoved his second shot to the edge of the trap. The Woodland-Siwanoy combination never had a chance at the ninth, Anderson underplaying his approach to the hazard in front of the green and Ouimet being far too strong with his mashie, the ball rolling beyond into the rough.

In the meantime the other two had reached the green nicely on their seconds, Kirkby supplementing a long drive with an approach that left him not more than fifteen feet to the left of the flag. He then finished off the job by running down the putt for a 3. That made the Englewood man and Travers 3 up at the turn, their best ball reading 35 to their rivals' 39.

Travers was the only one to get a 4 at the tenth hole, the others being off in direction. All got 4's at the eleventh, Kirkby barely missing his putt for a 3. A little later, however, the Englewood man won the twelfth in 3. This hole is only 173 yards, yet none of the quartette got within putting distance on their tee shots. Kirkby had to pitch over a trap, and he did it so neatly that it only left him a putt of a few feet for his 3. The New Jersey pair then stood five up, and a half at the long thirteenth left them dormie. In getting his three at the fourteenth Ouimet sank a putt of about twelve feet. It looked as if he would win the fifteenth hole, thereby prolonging the match still further; but Travers brought off a curling downhill ten-foot putt for a 4.

After playing out the bye holes, the winners were credited with rounds of 78; Anderson, 79; Ouimet, 83. Travers and Kirkby had a best ball of 72, as against 76 for the opposition.

Immediately after the match an auction sale considerably increased the Red Cross donation. There was a set of new clubs sold, as well as a number of old ones offered by the players. Three clubs of Ouimet's brought $125, a spoon that Travers had played with $125 more, while a club of Kirkby's was knocked down for $75 and a brassie of Anderson's for $50. Anderson also presented a Philip putter, an ancient weapon 48 years old, which he purchased when at St. Andrews some time ago. This went for $125. Altogether, the Red Cross benefitted to the extent of approximately $2,000 on the day's match.

CUDGEL IS BEATEN BY BUTLER'S SPUR

Cudgel, the great Western four-year-old, was set a greater task than he was able to accomplish in the Long Beach Handicap, which was the feature of the Jamaica race card yesterday. Burdened with 133 pounds, the sterling colt, owned by Commodore J. K. L. Ross, fought with all his power in the stretch to repeat his victory of a week previous, but the extra three pounds imposed by the handicapper told the tale, and he was unable to overcome the lead of James Butler's Spur, which finished with three-quarters of a length to spare.

Though the large crowd was sorry to see the top weight in the handicap beaten after such a gallant struggle, there was plenty of rejoicing over the victory of Spur, which has come back to the races this year a better horse than ever and a credit to Mr. Butler's new trainer, John Whalen. It was the first time that the cherry and white colors of Mr. Butler had finished in the van this season, and the success was popular, as the Butler entries have been prominent throughout the meeting, and many times have been made favorite, only to fail when the pinch came.

The defeat of Cudgel, which caused quite a sensation, was preceded by the downfall of another horse of the first rank, when Wilfred Viau's Westy Hogan failed to finish in the money in the Highweight Handicap at six furlongs. Westy Hogan had the tremendous package of 140 pounds to carry, and this anchored him effectually. Westy Hogan is noted for his dash at the start of the race, but this was entirely lacking yesterday, and, while James Butler's High Noon was cutting out a sizzling pace Westy was lagging behind. Even when the field had settled down there was no glimpse of form by the horse that beat all the cracks at Pimlico last Fall, and with George W. Loft's Cum Sah a winner by a length and a half from Startling, the great Westy trailed in eighth with only two horses behind him.

Much of the credit for the victory of Spur must be awarded to Jockey Shuttinger, who sent his mount to the front when Cudgel relinquished the early pacemaking in the back stretch. A week previous Cudgel had laid off the pace and had come from behind to overtake Spur in the stretch, but there was a different Spur running yesterday, and Shuttinger rated him along in the lead, at the same time reserving something for the final effort.

Flittergold hung closely to the pace set by Spur around the turn and he had an advantage of three lengths over Cudgel when turning into the stretch. With the finish in sight Lyke sat down to ride Cudgel and the top weight gained steadily on Spur as they raced through the last eighth of a mile. The determined challenge of Cudgel kept the leader busy all the time and Shuttinger had to ride Spur out to capture the first position by three-quarters of a length. Flittergold finished a length and a half behind Cudgel, beating the greatly fancied Boondage which made his first appearance here, after a successful campaign at Pimlico. The time of the race, 1:52 2-5 is three-fifths of a second slower than the track record.

That the Brighton Stable has struck its stride was shown when George Odom saddled the winners of the fifth and sixth races. In the fifth race the stable was represented by Flags, a three-year-old, purchased a couple of days ago from Harry Payne Whitney. He was an odds-on favorite and won eased up from James Butler's Empress. In the last race the Brighton Stable's representative was Earlocker, named after the racing Secretary of Belmont Park. He was making his first start, but was a slight favorite over Major Belmont's Duchess Lace. The latter ran unplaced, while Earlocker won by two lengths from Lieutenant Cochran's Marmite.

TESTED TIRES

THERE'S a lot of geography in the wear of tires. Some wear well in one region and wear out in another. Climate, peculiar roads and road conditions are the cause of it. Therefore, good service in a single region is not enough proof of tires which must undergo nation-wide use. Least of all could it measure tires up to the TESTED standard, Goodrich demands of tires.

With a command to find out what Goodrich Tires do on the roads of every section of our country, and what the roads of every section do to Goodrich Tires, Goodrich sent its famous six Test Fleets of over forty cars, light and heavy, the length and breadth of our nation to an aggregate mileage of 1,044,686 linear miles, and 4,178,744 tire miles.

The Pacific Fleet contributed 166,960 miles on desert paths and coast highways; the Mountain Fleet 55,796 through the Rocky Mountains; the Dixie Fleet 3,285,860 in the South and North Midland; the Prairie Fleet 198,744 on the Great Plains; the Lake Fleet 217,372; and the Atlantic Fleet 254,012 on a grand tour of many tours ranging from Virginia, through New England and back to the City of Goodrich.

Throughout this road roughing over roads of sand and gravel, mud and rock, city pavements and country paths, SILVERTOWN CORDS, and BLACK SAFETY TREADS, proved themselves the tires of durability and dependability wherever you go in our broad land.

Millions of miles thus confirmed Goodrich confidence in the spiral-wrapped, cable-cord tire body, and the tough, black tread rubber.

That 1917 tire testing of 1918 tires, verified all the virtues of Goodrich Tires, and revealed many new.

Get the economy, the comfort and certainty of such proven service, by demanding the tires, proved out in 4,178,744 tire miles over American roads—"America's Tested Tires."

RESULTS OF PLAY ON NEARBY LINKS

Golfers of Many Clubs Take Part in Contests for Benefit of the Red Cross.

Golfers on metropolitan links did their bit yesterday for the Red Cross as a final effort in the drive for the second fund. The biggest event of the day in this respect was the annual tournament of the members of the New York Stock Exchange at the Knollwood Country Club. About 110 brokers participated, and the sum of $3,900 was subscribed for the club's Red Cross drive.

This brought the Knollwood Country Club subscription up to $11,000 to date, and it is expected, according to Benjamin Wood, that the sum of $13,000 will be the club's share to the Red Cross before the drive ends. This showing, Mr. Wood declared last night, placed Knollwood at the head of the list of local clubs in Red Cross subscriptions. There are 250 members in the organization.

C. S. Lee led the brokers in their annual golf day, capturing the day's best gross prize with a round of 72 for the eighteen holes. For the best net scores four prizes were offered, two in Class A and the same number in Class B. The Class A winners were J. E. Kelley, 82, 9—73, first prize, and L. W. Richmond, 70, 0—74, second prize. In Class B first prize went to D. Peabody, with 92, 29—63, and second prize was captured by Alfred Mestre, with 92, 23—69.

Qualifying rounds for the annual Westchester Golf Association team championship tournament, which will commence at Siwanoy C. C. and June 20, were held yesterday by several of the clubs in the Westchester district, the golfers with the eight lowest gross scores being selected as teams for the clubs where the play was held. At the Scarsdale Golf and Country Club a Red Cross tinge was added to the play and between $175 and $200 was realized. A tie resulted for the Red Cross medal, which went to the golfer with the lowest gross, J. Pickard and A. H. Johnson both returning scores of 81. The others to qualify were: T. R. Brown, 82; C. C. Webster, 84; A. W. Haig, 85; W. W. Lyon, 86; A. Childress, 86; H. W. Chapman, 86.

The Class A ball sweepstakes laurels went to Chapman with 86, 14—72, and in Class B Thomas Walker led with 95, 24—71. This net gave Walker the day's prize for the best net score. About 150 golfers played.

The sum of $500 was realized on the golf play at the Apawamis Club, where about 130 golfers occupied the links. To this was added $1,500 realized for the society on the auction of a Belgian police dog, donated for the purpose by Capt. Law Watkins, a member of the club, now with the country's forces in France. The medalist for those who qualified was B. Harris, with 75, 5—70, other scores being: W. S. Kendall, 86, 9—77; W. M. Stillman, 90, 13—77; H. S. Graves, 85, 5—80; Dr. E. Stillman, 98, 18—80; F. S. Keeler, 91, 10—81; R. H. McDonald, 94, 13—81; P. A. Dent, 97, 15—82.

J. S. Washington and H. L. Phillips led the golfers who qualified at the Siwanoy C. C., each having gross scores of 78. The others who qualified were: John G. Anderson, 79; Dr. J. J. Thompson, 87; A. J. Mendes, 87; N. D. Becker, 88; B. Wilson, 88; R. C. Mitchell, 89.

W. W. Harris's gross of 81 was the best of the eight scores of those who qualified at the Dunwoodie C. C. Other scores were: John P. Downing, 84; J. H. Bell, 85; E. H. Hart, 87; W. S. Albertson, 87; E. H. Thomas, 87; C. W. Niblett, 88; Robert Collier, 88.

The Red Cross profited to the extent of $500 in the qualifying play at the Wykagyl Country Club yesterday. Henry V. Gaines led the golfers who qualified with a gross of 80, the others being: W. H. Holston, 82; Robert M. Miller, 85; T. V. Birmingham, 86; W. R. Nicholson, 86; A. H. Brown, 86; John H. Bell, 89; Edward H. Hart, 89. In the battle for low net honors a tie resulted between A. H. Brown, 88, 13—75, and T. P. Anderson, 91, 16—75.

Class A sweepstakes laurels in the play at the Montclair Golf Club yesterday went to W. L. Conwell, whose card showed 87, 9—78. In Class B E. L. Allen led with 90, 18—72, and in Class C K. B. Smith's card of 89,22—67 gave him premier honors. The women's putting competition resulted in a victory for Mrs. C. H. Tuke, with Miss Reis the runner-up.

KAISER'S CHEMIST IS ARRESTED HERE

August Richter Sought Citizenship in 1915, but Says He Is Loyal to Germany.

NO TRACE OF O'LEARY YET

Registration of German Women June 17th to 26th Will Be Similar to That of Men.

August Richter, Ph. D., who came to the United States nine years ago and whose professional cards, prior to the outbreak of the European war, read "Royal Chief Pharmacist and Chemist in Reserve, German Army," was brought to New York yesterday and turned over to the Federal authorities. Dr. Richter is a graduate of Breslau University, and after a residence of more than seven years in this country sought American citizenship, but now admits he is still "loyal to the Kaisers," and adds that he would not take his citizenship papers if the Government at Washington offered them to him.

The arrest of Dr. Richter is said to be the result of indignation on the part of his neighbors in the Short Oaks section of Westchester County, who have resented in no uncertain terms the alleged enemy propaganda activities of the "royal pharmacist." Ten days ago, it was said at the Federal Building yesterday, the Sheriff of Westchester County was called upon to protect Richter from the wrath of his neighbors.

Richter, who is about 38 years old, had an office at 1,777 Broadway when the war started. Shortly afterward he gave up the office, and what he has been doing since that time was not disclosed by the Department of Justice officials yesterday. For a time he is known to have had desk room in an office in the building at 253 Broadway. Richter, it was said, is an expert chemist and if the opportunity offered he was in a position to be of great assistance to the German espionage system in this country.

Captain Roger B. Hull, U. S. A., questioned Dr. Richter at length yesterday afternoon, and was particularly anxious to find out why Richter had applied for citizenship papers in 1915.

"Why did you want to become a citizen of the United States in 1915, for if you did harbor such a desire then, you have certainly changed your mind since then? Captain Hull asked.

"I do not want any American citizenship," Dr. Richter replied, "for my conscience is adjusted now, and this adjustment has released me from any declaration I may have made in 1915."

"Do you consider yourself as loyal now to the German Kaiser as at any time in your life?"

"I feel the same loyalty to Germany that I always did, and I do not want to be an American citizen."

"If a German army landed on American soil, and you had an opportunity to join them, what would be your course?"

"If a German army landed in this country I would keep my oath as a German Army reservist," Richter replied.

The internment of Richter for the rest of the war has been recommended.

New Investigation of Pierkowski.

It was reported yesterday that the authorities are making a new investigation of the alleged activities of Colonel Pierkowski, the former Krupp agent and friend of Boy-Ed, and also of Carl Schreiner, the German fire insurance official, who got from England to the United States shortly after the war started. Pierkowski, who is now at liberty on parole, has a custodian in the person of Supreme Court Justice Hotchkiss. Schreiner is said to be living at a prominent Fifth Avenue hotel.

Jeremiah A. O'Leary, the fugitive Sinn Fein agitator, for whose arrest a general alarm has been sent to all parts of the United States and Canada, has not yet been located.

Instructions were received at the office of United States Marshal Thomas D. McCarthy yesterday regarding the registration of alien enemy women. The registration is to begin June 17 and to continue daily from 6 o'clock in the morning to 8 in the evening until Wednesday, June 26, except on Sunday, June 23. All alien German women above the age of 14 years are required to register.

The regulations provide practically the same arrangements as were made for the men. The registration is to take place in the police stations, details of police acting as registrars. Five photographs of the registrants, head and shoulders only, without a hat or other covering, are to be furnished. Four sets of finger prints are to be taken, but a specific notation states that this carries with it no suggestion that the registrant is not a law-abiding person. About the same questions as were asked the men will have to be answered, such as former residence, age, occupation, height, weight, color of eyes and hair, and other distinguishing features. Women of various organizations have volunteered their services to attend at the station houses on the days of registration to relieve by their presence any embarrassment the German women might feel and to assist them in any way they can.

United States Marshal Power is also making preparations for the registration of all alien enemy women in his district. It is estimated that in the district which includes Brooklyn, Queens, Long Island, and Staten Island there are between 20,000 and 25,000 women classed under the regulations as enemy aliens.

American women who have married unnaturalized Germans are classed as enemy aliens. Women who fail to register will be interned for the period of the war.

Two More Sentenced.

Hyman Eisenstein of 1,256 Franklin Avenue, the Bronx, was sentenced to three months in the workhouse yesterday for disorderly conduct. He was sentenced by Magistrate Healy in the West Side Court. According to Mrs. Lillian Walkowitz of 226 West 105th Street, Eisenstein said that the children here had to go without food, as they were made to buy war savings stamps and make contributions to the Red Cross.

Six months in the workhouse was the sentence given Herman Paulssen in the Coney Island Court yesterday. He was charged with having said that "France and America were the dirtiest countries on earth." Paulssen is of German parentage, but has his first citizenship papers. He keeps a delicatessen store at 210 East Twenty-third Street, Sheepshead Bay.

Witnesses said that he refused to sell coal to one woman who had purchased Liberty Bonds, and that he told her to use the bonds to warm herself.

Charles Kuns will be brought before the Federal authorities for selling liquor to men in uniform. His place at Bay Twenty-third Street, Brooklyn, at the end of the gasoline pier, was raided yesterday. It is reported a quantity of liquor was found, and that several men in uniform were on the premises.

Charged with having sworn at a Red Cross worker, James Yarosh, of Second Avenue, Elizabethport, was sent to the Hudson County Penitentiary yesterday for a year. Yarosh is registered in the draft and has been working as a carpenter on Government contracts.

Wed and Leave for Philippines.

The marriage of Willett Foster, a son of Mrs. Willett Foster of Orange, N. J., and Miss Lucile Pierson, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur H. Pierson, East Orange, took place yesterday afternoon at the home of the bride on Vernon Terrace. The Rev. Dr. Thomas W. Smith, now at Camp Merritt, officiated. Miss Helen Pretot was the maid of honor, and Russell Pierson the best man. Mr. and Mrs. Foster have started for the Philippines, where he is to open an office for a trading company of New York.

BELGIUM SENDS THANKS.

King Cables to President Expressing Gratitude for Our Aid.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—President Wilson has received from King Albert of Belgium a cablegram expressing gratitude on the part of the Belgian people for the generosity of America toward the army and civil population of Belgium. The President replied that the United States felt it had not done for Belgium quite as much as it wanted to do; and said that nothing gave the American people more pleasure than to be able to render aid to the suffering Belgians.

King Albert's message said:

"I would not fail to take the opportunity afforded me by the second appeal for funds in favor of the American Red Cross to express to you all my people's gratitude for the splendid generosity displayed by the American nation toward the army and civil population of Belgium. Both the material help given and the friendship of your great nation will always be remembered. I am glad to say how useful the work done by Colonel Bicknellov, Major Van Schaick and the Commission for Relief in Belgium has already been, and to pay a tribute to their valuable and efficient activity. The relationship between our peoples, cemented in this time of suffering, will strengthen confidence, sympathy, and goodwill, and increase the devotion of every citizen of the allied countries to the sacred cause of liberty and justice."

The President said in his reply:

"Your Majesty's general message has been read with deep pleasure and appreciation, and I beg to assure you that nothing that the American Red Cross or the body of my fellow-citizens have done has been done more truly from the heart than the aid, all too little, which they have been able to render the gallant and suffering people of Belgium. We feel our common dependence with them upon the full vindication of the cause of freedom."

WASHINGTON, May 25. — President Wilson today fixed the price of zinc for a period until next September as follows:

Grade A—12 cents; freight free on board plant, 14 cents; sheet free on board plant, 15 cents. The prices are subject to the usual trade discounts and differentials in effect on Feb. 13 last.

The price was fixed under an agreement with the industry by which producers will not reduce wages. It will be the same for the public, the Allies, and the Government. The War Industries Board will direct distribution to prevent zinc from falling into the hands of speculators. Producers pledged themselves to exert every effort to keep up production to insure an adequate supply.

You ordinarily think of an undertaker's chapel as extremely doleful and gloomy.
That is just the reason why we prefer to have our "chapel" different.
The presence of death in itself is solemn and depressing. Therefore we believe that any arrangement which will appropriately lessen the depression is greatly to be desired.
So many of our patrons have been pleased to note that our "chapel" is not really a chapel at all: it is a private residence. And its use costs nothing extra.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—Pressure distribution is very irregular tonight, although there is a well defined high area over the Canadian Northwest and Montana, and a more moderate one off the South Atlantic Coast.

Four centres of depression are located between Colorado and Eastern New York, with the result that showers were general over the Northern tier of States east of the Rocky Mountains, and there were also scattered showers in the Upper Ohio Valley, Middle Atlantic States, North Carolina, and Florida. Elsewhere the weather was generally fair.

It is much warmer in Southern Michigan, Northern Ohio, and Northwestern Pennsylvania, and in portions of the Middle Atlantic States and New England, and high temperatures continue in the Central Valleys and the Southwest.

In the Northwest and in Wyoming it is much cooler, with temperatures from 10 to 20 degrees below the seasonal average.

Temperatures are also low west of the Rocky Mountains, and killing frosts again occurred Saturday morning in Western Idaho and Eastern Oregon.

Unsettled, showery weather will prevail Sunday and Monday over northern districts east of the Mississippi River and fair weather over the southern.

It will be cooler Sunday in the western upper lake and southern lower lake region and cooler Monday in the Ohio Valley, Middle Atlantic States, and New England.

Winds for Sunday and Monday along the North Atlantic Coast will be moderate, shifting, with showers; Middle Atlantic Coast moderate, mostly southwest, showers; South Atlantic Coast, gentle to moderate south, except east off the Florida Coast, fair.

FORECASTS: TODAY AND MONDAY

Eastern New York and Eastern Pennsylvania—Showers Sunday and probably Monday; somewhat cooler Sunday.

Three carloads—held up by embargoes—just arrived from C. P. Limbert Co. of Holland, Michigan. Some more of the celebrated Rainham Furniture. "TOO LATE!"

How long are the Allies to sit by and watch Germany win the war? For win the war she will if she establishes her domination of Russia, and the Allies are sitting by and watching her do it. How long are the Allies to go on delivering the next generation, the future of the world, bound hand and foot into Germany's prison-house? For if Germany controls Russia, then the future is hers. How long are the Allies to watch Germany making herself irresistible in that next war which she is already arranging? For irresistible she will be if the German Empire extends from the Baltic Sea to the Pacific Ocean.

"The war will be won in the west." But if it is won only in the west it will be lost. If it is won only in the west we shall have done nothing except to check temporarily, at a terrible price, Germany's movement against France and Belgium, and we shall have handed over to her, with incredible generosity, the means to make certainly successful her next movement against France and Belgium—and England, and Canada, and Brazil, and the United States.

Two years and a half ago Mr. LLOYD GEORGE made that memorable complaint that in everything the Allies had done they had always been "too late." Are they to be too late again, and now fatally too late? Are they to be too late where tardiness is crucial and pivotal? Are they to wait while Germany swiftly molds the pliable mass of Russia into the new German Empire? Why, if they let her do that, Germany could actually afford to admit defeat on the western front, to let the Allies have nearly everything they wanted, Alsace-Lorraine included—even the Trentino: for in the next war she could take Alsace-Lorraine and the Trentino back again with hardly an effort. Next war? There would not be a next war; it would be not a war but a promenade of the one great world empire over the bodies of the democratic nations.

What does the rapidly progressing annexation of Russia mean to us? Is it merely one more country swallowed in the German maw, merely a larger Rumania or Belgium? No, it is something of vastly greater meaning. Russia within the German Empire, Russia even dominated from the outside by the German Empire, means the mightiest military empire the world has ever seen, an empire beside which the present German Empire will seem small and not very powerful by comparison. To what ends will the strength of that vaster empire be directed? To the same ends as those for which the strength of the present and lesser German Empire has been directed, and we have learned what they are in a terrible school. From Hamburg to Vladivostok the Hohenzollern mind will direct energies and powers fifty-fold what it has been able to direct in this war, direct them toward the conquest of the whole world from Hudson's Bay to Cape Horn, from Norway to the Cape of Good Hope, from Manchuria to Australia.

The power of such an empire would be—will be, if we do not prevent it—beyond anything which has ever been conceived in human history. We shall no longer be able then to talk of any nation being invincible, unconquerable. We shall see the nations of the world disappear, one after another. Japan is as much threatened as is the United States, perhaps more directly threatened, since the swift rush of the increasing German Empire is now being aimed straight across the territory of Japan's neighbor, and since the interests of the new German Empire might bring her into collision with Japan first and before she had occasion to turn and strike at the American continent.

And what are we doing while this terrific prodigy is being created under our eyes? Why, we are debating whether Japan might or might not get some profit out of it if she stopped the thing before it was too late. We are telling each other that we must not hurt Bolshevist feelings. We are concentrating our eyes on Flanders and Picardy and saying that "the war will be won in the west." And what should we be doing? We should be realizing with all our might that we are looking upon one of the vastest and most malevolent births in history, the birth of an empire beyond anything which the mind of man has ever conceived, and whose whole existence will be devoted to our destruction and the destruction of everything that is like us. And we should force our politicians to be statesmen and to think of what this means. We can still help Russia, and we should; not the Bolsheviki, who have delivered themselves to Germany and are furthering with all their might the progress of the German aim, but Russia; and we should not hesitate and palter over the question whether the Bolsheviki, who are our most malignant enemies, will misinterpret our help or not. When have they ever done anything else, and what could we do that they would not misinterpret?

We must help Russia—not the Bolsheviki—because if we do not help Russia we, or at any rate our children, will be lost. And to help her we must cease to suspect each other, cease to get in each other's way, cease to say that we are the only one of the Allies whose motives are pure, when in fact we know nothing of the kind. This great emergency of the world, on which the future of everything we hold dear depends, is one to be dealt with by the tools at hand, whether American, British, French, Chinese, or Japanese, or all together.

TRADE AFTER THE WAR.

Today's TIMES contains an attempt to forecast the course of international economics when the war shall end. It is written by a gentleman whose opinion of foreign conditions has been right when he was in a minority and who has earned a presumption that he can see into a confused outlook further than those who have given the matter less attention, and yet who presume to speak with more confidence than he. It is reassuring to know that Mr. RATSHESKY does not expect repudiation of national debts. It is true that the Bolsheviki have decreed repudiation, but there is daily a stronger likelihood that Russia will repudiate the Bolsheviki and their repudiation. In other countries Mr. RATSHESKY thinks that perhaps income taxes may recover the interest paid on the debts of the nations, especially Germany, whose financial situation is the most desperate of all the great Powers. But that is a domestic rather than an international consideration. In any case questions of debt and finance are less important than questions of trade. With nations, as with business concerns, "behind their treasury opera-"tions lies their national wealth, "which depends upon materials, mar-"kets, and labor." The changes after the war will affect the nations far more through trade readjustments than through holdings of public debt.

The article contains an exhaustive account of the trade interrelations of the leading nations, as well as of their public finances, and the conclusion led up to is reassuring as regards the United States, and most disturbing as regards Germany. The conclusion is not based upon the antagonisms of the war, but upon the character of the trade of the two countries. The United States disposes of what Germany must have, and Germany disposes of goods which the United States can procure in world markets. Germany cannot get anywhere in the world the copper or cotton or other materials which she must have if she is either to manufacture or to sell. German trade depends upon the utilization of other nations' resources. Her own resources are poor, or were until the war gave her access to Russian materials, which it is doubtful that she will be allowed to retain. Russia's trade is the reverse of Germany's, being mostly in natural materials as exports, and imports of consumption goods. Outside of the United States trade will be between impoverished nations.

Mr. RATSHESKY gives reasons to believe that the material destruction of the war, apart from the costs of the war, reaches nearly six billions of dollars, the larger portion in the western theatre. This destruction must be made good if the nations are to earn their living. To assist in the rehabilitation of the distressed peoples is the privilege and duty of the United States, and profit lies along that path. There will be competition among the nations for this trade of reconstruction, and in particular for the trade of neutral nations. But the trade should be fair and free. Mr. RATSHESKY throws his influence against "economic extinctions." They would be easy. Even the Central Powers' spokesmen say, and are quoted, that they cannot exist independently. They are not self-sufficient, and cannot be made so. They must trade or be beggared, perhaps starved. The world must save after the war even more strenuously than during the war. Whatever the military result of the war, there will be fewer comforts and luxuries after the war than before it. But it is sure that the United States "will take its place in the front rank "of honest competition, and, by its "financial strength, man power, and "brains, lead the world in the success "of commerce and industry."

The decks have been cleared for the remaking of international trade in a manner never before thought possible. England and France have denounced all favored nation treaties since Mr. RATSHESKY wrote, but that is not a preliminary to a boycott. England within the month has officially declared against an official boycott, but is proposing something perhaps not much less serious for Germany. The war has taught the use of priorities and privileges for friendly nations. If the defenders of civilization prefer to trade with one another rather than with an enemy people, unless and until the enemy people shall demonstrate some reason for trade relations, who can blame them or object? Without a boycott and with all reasonable opportunity for rehabilitation Germany must wear a penitential shirt for years, or generations.

RED CROSS SUNDAY.

The campaign for the Red Cross war fund will not end until the clocks of the city strike twelve on Monday night. Sunday promises to be a day of rich returns. There will be collections in the churches and collections in the streets. There is to be no rest for the crusading women who in the uniform of the order make their appeals in behalf of our soldiers in France and of the victims of the war.

The red cross on the white field will confront the people of New York in every thoroughfare and in every public place, a reminder that those who are dearer than ever because they wear the red badge of courage are fighting for us in France, where there is no peace, no day of rest and devotion, but always battle. Men will be killed today in France, men will be wounded and missing." War knows no Sunday. In that devastated and ensanguined country there is nothing to alleviate the horrors of war but the sympathetic work of the Red Cross, which soothes and saves: on the field where shells are falling the ambulance volunteers, in the hospitals the women who nurse and bend down to the last message. All of them wear the red cross on the field of white.

Here in New York thousands of the blessed emblem will be seen today. Its appeal should be irresistible without a word spoken. You who have given, give a little more for the pity it inspires; for the thought of France and all who suffer there, our kin and the stranger; for the contrast between our immunity from peril, our absolute security, and the hazards they encounter "over there," the horrors that surround them.

What if New York has already given the allotted sum! Other cities have far exceeded theirs, communities all the way across from Atlantic to Pacific. New York has the greater means: she should be the more generous. Let the hand be extended once more. Let it be full for the first gift. "The wonderful story [of the Red Cross] can hardly be told in words," says General PERSHING.

THE MOLDAVIA LOSSES.

So long as the German submarines are out, transports carrying American troops to Great Britain and to France will be attacked. Mr. LLOYD GEORGE was careful to say in his optimistic speech at Edinburgh, at a time when he did not know the Moldavia had been sunk, that enemy submarines in their power to inflict injury were still formidable. All told, about 250 of our soldiers bound for France have perished on transports torpedoed, or 1 in every 2,000, calculating that half a million have been carried across the Atlantic; the total is really higher, but there is no means of computing it.

When the Tuscania was sunk the loss of officers and men, counting the missing, was very near 200; the bodies of 8 officers and 187 men rest in Scotch soil. The Moldavia's casualties are said to have been fifty-six, but the estimate is subject to revision. The Antilles, an American transport, was torpedoed while returning to the United States from France with wounded soldiers. Sixty-seven men were drowned, some of them noncombatants. If the Antilles list be included, there would have to be a slight increase in the ratio of lost. Even so, the sea risk of our troops has been inconsiderable.

In daylight the convoy system is almost perfect. At dawn or twilight it may prove fallible. The Tuscania was struck while the soldiers were at their evening meal. Very early in the morning, when the submarine could mark her prey, a full moon in the sky combining with the first glimpse of dawn to afford sufficient light, the Moldavia was torpedoed. In both cases British destroyers were about, but no submarine was sighted. It may be the fact that the submarine did not show above the surface. Destroyers could hardly be expected, no matter how vigilant their lookout, to see a periscope before daybreak. They were quick to drop depth bombs, on the chance of "getting" the U-boat, and in rescue work it appears that their work was admirable.

From the reports of the sinking of the Tuscania and the Moldavia it may be concluded that if there are loopholes in the protection given by the convoy system the attendant warships prove their efficiency in saving life. One cannot read the story of the foundering Moldavia without a feeling of pride in the American soldiers, who behaved with the steadiness of veterans in the emergency. It came like a bolt out of the blue, but in the khaki ranks forming on the deck of the torpedoed ship there was no sign of panic. The discipline seems to have been perfect, and yet those youngsters were taken from civil life a few short months ago. Most of them knew little of the sea; it was their first experience with deadly peril; but they treated the affair as an adventure, cheering the old Moldavia as she sank beneath the waves. Such men will make good soldiers. They will be heard from in France.

JEANNE DARC BEAUTIFUL?

In a letter printed on this page a correspondent, with whose generous purpose THE TIMES sympathizes and whose facts it welcomes, sets forth engagingly the French tradition, and, probably enough, the truth, as to the personal appearance of the Maid of France, whose anniversary was commemorated gratefully and solemnly by France the other day. THE TIMES followed Dean KITCHIN's description of her in his "History of France," as of "rather a short figure, strongly built." KITCHIN's authority was PHILIP of Bergamo in his book on "Illustrious Women," not contemporary, published in the latter part of the fifteenth century. PHILIP, however, went, or pretended to go, to an eyewitness, an Italian, as his source. Summarized by KITCHIN, JEANNE was > of a "moderate stature, of a rustic countenance," (facie rusticana,) not beautiful, but honest-faced, as of one accustomed to simple living and open air; she was very strongly built.

A rustic "countenance" may have meant simply that JEANNE was high-colored or tanned, thereby contrasting with the Court beauties who used to wear masks to protect their complexions from the supposed "coarseness" inflicted by the wind and sun. When they wanted color, they borrowed from the rouge pot. A hundred and fifty years later BRANTOME, though he finds heaven and earth too scanty to give room to the full praise of Queen MARGOT's beauty, naively admits that her face was pimpled by her devotion to cosmetics. If JEANNE was beautiful of face, her beauty might seem plebeian to or even be denied by a person who knew her rustic origin and could see beauty only in "delicate" darlings of the Court, elaborately costumed.

But it is not necessary to give too much confidence, as perhaps THE TIMES did, to PHILIP's version of the recollections of his Italian witness. As to JEANNE's figure, ANATOLE FRANCE, with whose skeptical if not cynical notion and/ portrait of the heroine it is impossible to have any sympathy, vivid as is his genius, paints her, as Mr. ANDREW LANG says, "as a sturdy girl with a short, strong neck, an ample bust," but he quotes none of the references to her beauty cited by Mr. LANG, some of them also cited by our correspondent, "and "mainly deals in quotations from late "and sometimes purely mythical au-"thors, who never saw JEANNE." GUY DE LAVAL's "A thing all divine" might be taken as the enthusiasm of a gallant young Breton noble, but when she is said to be "beautiful and well-formed," still more, when PERCEVAL DE BOULAINVILLIERS testifies "Haec puella competentis est elegantiae," "in IZAAK WALTON's phrase," Mr. LANG translates, "is conveniently handsome," her pulchritude, which romantics hold à priori, is sufficiently established.

As to her height, Mr. LANG tells us that she was "so tall that she could "wear a man's clothes, those, for ex-"ample, of DURAND LASSOIS," her kinsman. To be sure, we do not know whether DURAND was tall, short, or medium. When she set out for Chinon, she doffed her dress of red stuff "for the tunic, vest, long breeches, "boots, spurs, and cap of a page," of what figure we do not know. At Tours, her famous white armor cost less than that of two knights equipped at the same time, because it was smaller than theirs. This doesn't show that she may not have been tall and slim. A woman doesn't have to be tall to look so. "As to her eyes and features," Mr. LANG writes in the right spirit, "having no information, "we may conceive of them as we "please. Probably she had gray eyes, "and a clear pale color under the tan "of sun and wind."

We have a right to make our heroine look as we want her to. Why not, since history is mainly a guess and an opinion as to elective "facts"? How did JEANNE's CHARLES VII. of France look? Very ugly, says one witness, small-eyed, bulbous-nosed, bandy-legged, thin-thighed, "with enormous knock-knees." "A beautiful person," "a very beautiful Prince," say others. Take your choice. He is not ugly in his portraits. Painters of Kings are too shrewd and courtly to paint them as CROMWELL wished to be painted. Of JEANNE there is no picture. We can make our own. We wish her to be beautiful, with a body worthy of her soul. Communing with her "Brothers of Paradise," in the long vision that prepared and accompanied her epic and miraculous achievement, how could she fail to become "a thing wholly divine"? It is not so much a matter of testimony, it is the early established and continuous tradition of her loveliness that compels or invites belief. So "The Mystery of the Siege of Orleans," forty years after her death, shows her "beautiful and white as the rose." So SHAKESPEARE found her in and took her from HOLINSHED one hundred and fifty years after her death. In "Henry VI." by a miracle she who "was black and swart before," "that beauty am I blessed with which you see." Hear the old chronicler:

> A young wench of an eighteen years old called IONE ARC, by name of her father (a sorie sheepherd) IAMES of ARC, and ISABELL, her mother, brought up poorlie in their trade of keeping cattell. Of favor was she accounted likesome, of person stronglie and manlie-made, of courage, great, hardie and stout-witted.

Observe that old RAPHAEL gets her surname right. At her trial she testified that she had none. The first appearance of "D'ARC" is said to have been in 1576, a year before the second edition of HOLINSHED's "Chronicle." Even Mr. LANG calls her "JEANNE D'ARC."

An Early Account Accepted as a True Likeness.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It may interest the readers of the editorial article in today's TIMES to know that there is excellent contemporary evidence in support of those who like to think of Jeanne d'Arc as the perfect embodiment of that which we have all learned to love, the spirit of France. It would not be the French spirit if to nobility of character there were not added beauty, grace, and charm. Many of her contemporaries speak of the charm of her manner and marvel at such high-bred courtesy in a peasant maid.

Writing to the Queen of Sicily of the coronation at Rheims, one of the gentlemen present spoke of Jeanne as standing ever near the King, her standard in her hand, and added: "A right fair thing it was to see the goodly manners of the King and the maid." Mark Twain says she learned her manners in the Court of Heaven.

Far from being "of rustic countenance, thick-set, short, squatty," she was tall, "beautiful in face and figure," "her face glad and smiling." The grandson of Bertrand du Guesclin, Guy de Laval, who was with Jeanne d'Arc in her campaigns against the English, wrote home to his mother that to him she seemed "a thing wholly divine, both to see her and to hear her speak." The letter, written in June, 1428, gives a charming picture:

> I saw her mount, all in white armor but unhelmeted, a small battleaxe in her hand. She had a great black horse, which plunged at the door of her house, and would not permit her to mount. "Lead him to the Cross," she cried. It stands in the road—in front of the church. There he stood as fast as if he were bound with cords, and she mounted and turning toward the church gate she said in a sweet womanly voice, "Ye priests and churchmen, go in processions and pray to God." Then "Forward, forward," she cried, a gracious page bearing her standard displayed, and she with the little battleaxe in her hand.

The controversy over her voices has obscured the fact that one of the things that most impressed her contemporaries was her unfailing common sense. The miracle of her success dwarfs the human personality of this beautiful, pure-hearted girl of nineteen, the very incarnation of the nobility, the heroism and the loyalty that inspire France plete harmony with the beauty of her manner and appearance were in complete harmony with the beauty of her soul.

PHILIP GIBBS FOR SCHOOLS.

National Security League Urges the Use of His Dispatches in The Times.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

An item concerning Mrs. Arnold's use of the Philip Gibbs stories makes me think that you will be interested to learn that hundreds of children who flock about the library story tellers are getting their stories of courage and heroism from the narrative of Philip Gibbs. We have had many inquiries—some from public libraries, some from teachers—because the children want "stories of this war." We have recommended the Gibbs stories for this purpose, and I'm informed the New York Library story-telling staff also use them.

I have been wanting for some time to suggest that a patriotic service can be performed by any readers who will forward their copy of THE TIMES to some teacher, preferably in the rural districts. There has always been some "drive" or "appeal" on, so that I have not made that request of your readers.

I am calling your attention to a marked passage in the inclosed booklet, which is, in my opinion, responsible for much of the misunderstanding, delay, and apathy on the part of teachers. If the new zone rate is to still further interfere with the spread of intelligence, the result will be most deplorable.

ETTA V. LEIGHTON,
Civic Secretary National Security League.
New York, May 24, 1918.

From a pamphlet entitled "Wake Up, Teachers of America," by Miss Leighton, issued by the National Security League:

"The live teacher who is making live citizens will bring in the newspapers. Especially does the teacher far from the big centres need the big newspapers. Ask your friends to make you a gift of a subscription to some of the real newspapers of the country, rather than to the sentimental, wishy-washy, 'house, hearth and heart' periodicals. Far too many teachers never read a real newspaper. The ideal teacher will read several of opposite views, weigh the evidence, and make up her own mind as to current events. The good teacher will allow the pupils to bring in the papers they read. If they depend entirely on the semi-anarchist press the teacher can counteract that by bringing in the conservative paper. What would a real, soul-searching census tell us of our newspaper reading? Would we not find that the teacher who sends a girl to the office in disgrace because the child is found rapt in 'Parted at the Altar' is, perhaps, reading trashy newspapers, or perhaps similar fiction, only in board covers?"

A Role for Greece.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

President Wilson announced a short time ago that Greece would receive her rights when peace came. Let Greece understand well that she has a faithful friend in this world. That is all she wants to know. Then you will see the whole Greek nation respond, and do its duty once more and for all. The British, French, and Greek Armies together could deliver a mighty blow to Bulgaria and Turkey, then occupy Constantinople. Then we shall turn the tables by cutting the communications of Germany over that way. With Germany finished in the east and west, Austria will seek peace at any price. Then I believe we shall be able to have an honorable and lasting peace, and the Kaiser's dream will be doomed forever.

FRENCH CLAIMS IN RUSSIA.

Bolsheviki Refuse to Pay Them, but Will Pay Germans.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The excellent communication of the Paris TIMES correspondent, published in your issue of May 23, admirably sums up the financial effort accomplished by France during thirty years in order to give assistance to Russia, and the amount of $4,000,000,000 given by him is strictly accurate.

May I add that this $4,000,000,000 was not exclusively loaned to the Government of the Czar for the construction of strategic railroads or to fill the Russian Imperial Treasury, but was lent to the Russian people to enable them to enjoy the benefits of science and civilization?

Thus the capital invested by France in the railroads of Ural, Donetz, Poutilof, and the southwest made it possible to connect Russian centres of production with centres of consumption, and adequately to fight the scarcity of food, which was then a chronic condition in Eastern Russia. Thus also French capital, furnished for the construction of the railroads from Dvinsk to Vitebsk and from Kursk to Kharkof, enabled the fertile district of the Ukraine and Orel to be reached by rail. Again, the loan made by France to Russia in 1911 supplied that country with sufficient funds to redeem the old 6 per cent. mortgage bonds, 6 per cent. being the rate of interest which had to be paid by the Russian peasant borrowers. Thanks to French capital, the Russian peasants were recently only paying 4½ per cent. for their loans. Finally, it was French money that promoted those innumerable enterprises—metal, coal, gas, naphtha, textiles—which before the war constituted Russia's wealth and provided a living for thousands of workers and workingmen.

We know what the reward has been: one of the first acts of the present Russian Government was to decree that the Russian nation repudiated every debt contracted with the French nation, and refused from now on to pay 1 cent of interest to the millions of French investors who had trusted them. The Russian proletarians, be it said, do not refuse to make use of the railroads built by and the mines worked with French capital, but they do refuse to pay anything whatever to the builders of those railroads and the owners of those mines.

On the other hand, it is said that on the 1st of June the Russian Government will resume the payment of loans contracted in Germany and will pay the interest due to German lenders. * * *

This simple statement of facts is more illuminating as regards the mentality of the present Russian leaders and the best way of dealing with them than any number of articles and speeches.

THE ARMY BEHIND THE FRONT.

American Engineers and Contractors Might Direct the Work There.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Referring to your article dated Paris, May 23, and headed "Allies Forming Big Army of Workmen Behind the Front," why would it not be a good scheme to put the work under the direct charge of a big American contractor or contracting engineer, who would divide the different fronts into twenty-five, more or less, sections, as the case required, and put on each section an experienced American contractor? This plan would in the very shortest time put a vast and an experienced organization of engineers, contractors, superintendents, foremen, &c., in the field. Most of these men would necessarily be above the draft age, and no time would be lost in testing for color blindness, nor in giving them military training.

This plan would naturally result in great economy, speed, and also accelerate matters by releasing a large army of trained soldiers for the real military work of winning the war.

Service Flag Differences.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Our service flag is by no means a standardized device. We find it in various shapes and with stars of variable sizes and location. But in every case we find a margin of red, surrounding a blue star-bespangled white field, and in every case these colors correspond with those of the Stars and Stripes. The blue stars in the white field represent, I believe, a person in the military or naval service of our country.

But what does the gold star on the red margin mean? Or the gold star in the white field? Or the white star on the red margin? Or the red star in the white field? Or the black star in the white field? Or the blue star? All these devices were intended by their originators to signify the death of one who had been represented by a blue star. Surely some device for this purpose is necessary; but isn't one enough, and isn't more than one too many? I am told there is good authority for several of the above-mentioned systems which are in use. However, isn't there some final authority which will officially designate something for general acceptance?

Least appropriate of all, I should say, is the so-called gold star, regardless of its location. "Gold" has no place in the national colors, it is impossible to reproduce in bunting, and it may even lend strength to the canard that we are a nation of gold worshippers.

The War and Prohibition.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A subscriber to your paper in these distant parts, I desire to say that the Randall amendment prohibiting the use of food materials in the production of vinous or malt liquors, passed by the House yesterday by a vote of 177 to 133, with 124 members absent, which amendment seeks to coerce the President into espousing the prohibition cause, is the boldest and most unpatriotic act of the many thus far proposed by the Anti-Saloon League and its subservient followers in the House, showing its purpose to subordinate the war to prohibition. At a time when people in all walks of life, the office, the shop and the farm, willingly and cheerfully acquiesce in any measure, no matter how drastic or how much sacrifice is involved, when done for the purpose of winning the war, they will resent strongly a measure which they believe is dictated for the purpose of sordid political preferment by unpatriotic prohibitionists.

THE BOTTOM OF THE WELL.

Once, when with reckless feet I sped
On blind youth's snare-set road, my head
Lost in the clouds of pride, I fell
Into a deep, dark well.

Out of that cell of gloom (my cries
Unheeded or unheard) my eyes
I lifted to one ray of light
Over my prison'd night.

And there, though it was daybright, save
In this dark pit, this living grave,
Clear in the blue, an avatar,
Shone a great star!

Then I who stumbled, blind of youth,
Head in the clouds in search of truth,
Found it while in the depths I lay,
And took the Wise Men's way.

CHERADAME ON THE AUSTRIAN CHANGES.

Long Accepted Pan German Schemes Being Carried Out, to Which the Austrian Emperor Docilely Submits.

By ANDRE CHERADAME.

Various measures constituting a reconstruction of Austria-Hungary in favor of German interests are in the course of execution. Many among the Allies imagine that these measures were decided upon recently by Berlin following upon the supposed attempts of Emperor Charles of Austria to free himself from German tutelage. There is nothing in that. All the measures for the reconstruction of Austria now in the course of execution are simply and solely the execution of a part of the Pan German scheme laid down twenty-three years ago, in 1895, and set forth in the basic brochure circulated that year by the Alldeutscher Verband, the powerful Pan German society, under the title "Grossdeutschland und Mitteleuropa um das Jahr 1950," ("Great Germany and Central Europe in 1950.")

Events having shown that the German Great General Staff since 1914 has carried on the war politically in the exact manner of the program laid down in 1895, the exceptional importance of this brochure document cannot be denied. So here is a résumé, as exact as possible, with references to the pages of the original text, of the part of the Pan German scheme concerning Austria:

> The present German Empire, and especially the Germany of the north, needs Austria in order to be able to defend itself materially. That is understood by all Prussians. (P. 23.)
> Austria needs a dominant race, and only the Germans can dominate her. (P. 21.)
> All the Slavs, the Czechs at their head, hate us from the bottom of their hearts. * * *
> We, the Germans of the empire, should not have, properly speaking, any advantage in the destruction of the Austro-Hungarian monarchy in its present form. (P. 23.) Its close attachment, political and economic, to the German Empire may be realized, for example, under the form of a customs union. (P. 24.) Moreover, some modification in the present state of things will take place. Galicia and Bukowina will be excluded from the Austrian monarchy. * * * They will form the nucleus of the Kingdoms of Poland and Little Russia * * * which, however, can be united by the personal bonds of the sovereign to the reigning house of the Hapsburgs. (P. 25.)
> The Czechs, the Slovaks, and the Slovenes will have to let themselves be Germanized. Their geographical position condemns them.
> Certainly success in the Germanization of the non-Germans of Austria-Hungary will not be possible without the energetic support of the 47,000,000 Germans of the empire [figures of 1895.] In order to attain this result the principles of equal rights of nationalities and certain present-day principles of public and private law will naturally have to be abandoned. * * *
> In case the House of Hapsburg should not be disposed or qualified to bring to a fortunate conclusion the difficult task of closely uniting Austria-Hungary and Germany, it would be possible to have its rôle played by less important princely families of Germany. In short, Germany has too many princes and Austria has too many nationalities. (P. 26.)

After 1895 a whole series of brochures, of which the most important was "Oesterreichs Zusammenbruch under Wiederaufbau," ("The Dismemberment of Austria and Its Reconstruction,") published in 1899 by Lehmann at Munich under the aegis of the Alldeutscher Verband, have worked out in detail the surest means of reducing the Slavs of Austria to complete political impotence. The principal measure recommended for twenty-three years to obtain this result consists of bringing about the exclusion (Sonderstellung) of Galicia—a move having the double advantage of keeping up among the Poles the illusion that Austria-Germany is going to allow the reconstruction of the Kingdom of Poland and also of reducing considerably the number of Slav Deputies in the Parliament of Vienna.

The second measure which is in the course of execution consists of bringing about a new administrative division of Bohemia in such a way as to reduce the number of Czech Deputies in the Parliament of Vienna and at the same time assuring the position of the Germans in Bohemia, although they are only a minority.

It was to carry out these operations without permitting protests from the tribune that the Austrian Emperor recently disbanded his Parliament. The fact that Emperor Charles docilely accepts the transformation of his empire in exact conformation with the Pan German Prussian scheme laid down twenty-three years ago enables us to grasp the degree of his independence in the face of the Government of Berlin.

AN ARMY FOR RUSSIA.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

While Germany has an open road to the Pacific no real or abiding peace is possible. Let that be sun clear. We must exert ourselves in Siberia now and forthwith if the common enemy is not to have complete control not only of that vast and tremendously rich territory, but of the entire latent human material of all the Russias. There will, in fact, be no chance of a "commercial war" with the Teutons if allowed to exert influence and pressure east of the natural topographical barriers of a regenerated Poland, Bohemia, and Serbia. These States, as pledged by both our President and Viscount Grey of the British Foreign Office, must be incorporated with their sovereign independence and allowed once more to resume control of their individual destinies.

The perverse and anarchic minority Bolshevist Government, already jeopardized and tottering, will dissolve like mist before the rising sun even before the landing of an internationalized force for the protection of the citizens and their country. A strongly active and efficient propaganda, a full and detailed policy, which has already been mapped out and is at the disposal of the authorities, if effectively carried out, would not only discredit the enemy-paid malefactors now in control but would, indeed, cause the entire nation to rise in arms against the archaic absolutism of the Prussian bludgeon. At the same time, a Slav Expeditionary Force of eighty to one hundred thousand should at once be organized here to proceed, as soon as may be, via Vladivostok, in order to incite their brothers in a sister republic to rebel against bitter tyranny that will strangle them ever tighter in its grasp. Once in Siberia this small but magnetic nucleus will attract the Russians so that the movement will soon gather unimagined momentum and power.

Very briefly I may state the ultimate military purpose of these newly-raised Russian forces, won back from disintegration and famine. The strict scheme would undoubtedly be to break through the Carpathian passes, proceed across the granary of the plains of Hungary, cut the Danubian arteries, railway and water, at Budapest; take that capital and Vienna, both of which will fall like overripe fruit, and so surround the Germanic Empire by a barrier of naked steel. I do not intend to go into the technical conduct of this advance; it has, however, all been carefully scheduled. In general the mountainous barrier of Bohemia will, with the revolting Czechs, protect the lines of communications, three in number, from enemy attack on the west or right flank. At the same time coordinated diversions will be created to contain the hostile forces and so pin them down and prevent their attacking in force.

I have often been asked as to how many I considered to be necessary for this vital movement; roughly I should say about 2,000,000 all told. Not a vast number when we consider that we might well figure on a first call of 6,000,000 Muscovite ex-soldiers, many, let it be understood, already battle-trained and willing to fight with new-formed impulse and sympathy.

I might add that few transports would be required to convey these Slav troops to their base and few to supply them, as Siberia is the granary of the East. An agreement can be readily entered into with our ally, Japan, covering our supply of steel to her, providing not only for ordnance but for ammunition supply for the Russian revolution for our cause—the sacrosanct cause of the right for all of us!

Italians Holding the Line.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

French, English, and Americans are fighting hard to keep back the Germans. Just consider, if all the Austrian Army, more than 3,000,000 men, were thrown on the western front, what would be the outcome? As it is, Italy, with her army, is struggling heroically against all kinds of odds, and at the same time, alone, is holding at bay these 3,000,000 men in order that America may have time to come in with her full strength. Then will the allied armies completely shatter, beyond repair, the Teutonic hordes.

THE KAISER AT ST. QUENTIN.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In amplification of the editorial article appearing in today's TIMES, "The Kaiser's Patent Boswell," permit me to call attention to another touching incident recorded by Boswell Rosner concerning his illustrious and tender-hearted master. Recently THE TIMES, quoting from the Berliner Lokal Anzeiger, revealed the Kaiser's grief over the destruction of St. Quentin as told by Karl Rosner. "Looking around, his eloquent eyes brimming with tears, at the devastation all around," according to the correspondent, the Kaiser gave expression to his grief as follows:

> Nothing remains but a frightful skeleton of a dead city, of a city that has been murdered in blind fury by a brother's hand. Compassion, as for a human being, overmasters one on thinking what this city was and what it is.

"his outburst touchingly reminds one of the sorrow of the Walrus in "Alice in Wonderland" over the oysters he is about to devour:

"I feel for you!" the Walrus cried,
"I deeply sympathize."
Meantime he deftly sorted out
Those of the largest size,
Holding his pocket handkerchief
Up to his streaming eyes.

The Kaiser weeps over St. Quentin, but what about the oysters of the "largest size"? What about his ruthless attempts on London and Paris? What about poor devastated Rheims and Louvain and the Homeric catalogue of other cities and towns that have been practically wiped out of existence by the horde of Huns who have overrun some of the fairest portions of the earth and left ruin and desolation everywhere?

The Kaiser weeps over St. Quentin! Oh, those precious crocodile tears! He who has taken the whole world for his oyster, which he is now attempting to open with his sword. "The world is mine oyster, which I with sword will open!" cries this modern Pistol with watering mouth; but he is not incapable of weeping like the tender-hearted Walrus over his victim. In all history has there been such an arch monster, such an arch hypocrite? God help the oyster if he succeeds in opening it with his sword! He may weep, but he will gobble the oyster just the same.

Nero, history asserts, fiddled while Rome burned. I wonder if he was moved to tears. Perhaps he might have been touched by his own music, like the German music master whom Du Maurier describes, who burst into tears while seated at the piano playing one of his own compositions. "What is the matter, Herr Professor?" cry some admiring female listeners. "Ach! Ach!" answers the professor, "I always weeps when I hears goot music."

Does the Kaiser weep over the music he has made—the terrible choruses of bombs and guns and the wails of wounded and dying? They would be tears, idle tears, indeed, coming from one who has destroyed the happiness of the whole civilized world. How prophetic of him seem Goethe's lines in "Faust":

Woe, woe, woe, thou hast it destroyed—
The beautiful world!
By a giant fist into atoms 'tis hurled,
By the blow of a demigod shattered.

But not a demigod—an arch fiend, an arch humbug, who weeps over a desolate spot made in the cause of liberty in defending a land that he has made desolate. Surely angels must weep over such hypocrisy. But not the tears of the Kaiser, not even the tears of angels, nor the tears of widows and orphans that this ruthless tyrant has made, can ever wash away the stain of him from history.

ANCIENT CHATEAU RENTED

Because of the large numbers of blinded soldiers that are being taken from the battle now being fought from Flanders to the Somme, the French Government has appealed to the American-British-French-Belgian Permanent Blind Relief War Fund to increase the organization's facilities for rehabilitating these blind soldiers as soon as their period of convalescence is sufficiently advanced.

In accordance with this request the fund has taken over the Château de Madrid in the Bois de Boulogne, a mediaeval structure that before the war was used as a hotel and is familiar to every American who ever visited Paris, and the Château de Rochecorbon, near Tours. The rent of the Château de Madrid has been assumed by Jacques Seligmann, the well-known antiquarian of Paris.

Mrs. George A. Kessler, Honorary Secretary of the American-British-French-Belgian Permanent Blind Relief War Fund, who, with her husband and Mrs. R. Valentine Webster, has been in France for a year devoting with them her time to the fund's work, writes:

"From the human débris of the greatest battle in all history now raging on the French front large numbers of blinded men—helpless, crushed, suffering the extreme of mental and physical agony—are being taken, complicating the cruelest and most shocking problem that has grown out of any war since the beginning of time—what to do with many thousands of soldiers incapacitated by the loss of their sight. And this battle is expected to last for months.

All Available Institutions Full.

"Before it started every available institution in France had been found distressingly inadequate for taking care of these stricken heroes who have sacrificed their eyes to save from a fate far worse than death their loved ones and ours, and the American-British-French-Belgian Permanent Blind Relief War Fund, before this new appeal from the French Government, had taxed its resources to the utmost to meet the situation.

"The fund, as is well known, is supported by the public throughout the United States. For some time it has maintained, under the direction of the French Government, five institutions in France for the rehabilitation of totally blinded soldiers—practical, constructive work that turns a hopeless, despairing wreck from the base hospitals, those ports of broken men, into a self-reliant, self-respecting, contented member of the community, fully able to earn a good living for himself and family.

"Here on the edge of this inferno, of this swirling pit of horror, our American institutions must at all cost be maintained until they have accomplished their holy mission.

"The need of funds for this is very great and very urgent. Ask our dear American people, who have helped the United States Government to win the war by buying Liberty bonds and war savings stamps, to let their money perform a doubly sacred purpose by turning over as many of these bonds and stamps now as they can to put a blind soldier and his family on their feet. If they cannot send bonds ask them to send money—every cent they can spare—and to urge their friends to do the same."

All contributions should be sent to Eugene V. R. Thayer, Honorary Treasurer, 590 Fifth Avenue, the headquarters of the fund.

The American Red Cross.

The American Red Cross, acting at the request of the United States Government, has put into operation a plan for restricted communication between persons in this country and the relatives and friends in enemy and ally of enemy countries, or in allied territory now occupied by the military forces of the enemy.

The Red Cross, it was announced yesterday at the Atlantic division headquarters, will now endeavor to send all proper messages without cost to the inquirer, but the delivery of messages cannot be guaranteed. At the New York County Chapter such messages shall be handled under the direction of the Secretary. The statement of the Red Cross on the subject follows:

The plan provides that messages be accepted at chapters, branches, or auxiliaries on prescribed forms and forwarded by the chapter through the division office to the Bureau of Communication at National Headquarters. The Bureau of Communication will paraphrase or translate the message and send it on another form to a neutral country, whence the message will be forwarded to the person addressed. Answers will be received by the Bureau of Communication at National Headquarters, again through a neutral country, and the Bureau of Communication will send a paraphrase or translation of these answers to the person making the original inquiry.

Messages shall be accepted at any chapter, and, upon authorization by the Executive Committee of the chapter, at any branch or auxiliary where there is a qualified representative in regular attendance.

Applications shall be filled out legibly in English on a prescribed form, in duplicate. Where necessary the chapter representative shall assist in the preparation of the form. The duplicate copy may be in carbon or a separate writing. In every case both the original and duplicate copies of the form must be signed by the applicant. If the applicant is unable to write he or she shall make a symbol (X) in the space provided for the signature, and the chapter representative shall write the words "his mark" and the full name. The chapter representative witnesses the signature when signing, in the space to the left, recording the acceptance of the message.

Applicants for communication service must be accredited as reputable persons in good standing in the community where the applications are filed, either by being personally known at the chapter, or by filing with the application a letter signed by a reputable person of the community who is known and who vouches for the good faith and truthfulness of the applicant. Such letters shall be attached to and filed with the duplicate copy.

Only purely personal family messages should be accepted. Messages relating to financial or political matters, or matters of public interest, cannot be forwarded. A single communication cannot be addressed to more than one person in enemy territory.

Food for France Fund.

The Food for France Fund, of which Miss Carita Spencer is the Chairman and Alexander J. Hemphill the Treasurer, has received the following letter telling of conditions in the tubercular hospitals of France. The letter, which is dated April 20, is in part as follows:

I have just returned from a six weeks' trip to the tubercular hospitals of the 15th "Region" of France, extending from Orange, in the Valley of the Rhone, to Marseilles, and along the Riviera to Mentone and return.

It is one of the four worst spots in France, the first being the Department of the Seine, (Paris,) Brittany second, the Valley of the Rhone and the Alps Maritimes third and fourth.

Along this valley one finds the old Roman cities, picturesque in monuments but old and unhealthful in living quarters. Whole sections of these cities never see the sun, and scarcely enjoy fresh air, and families of from four to even ten people live in one room, and it is to this one room that the tubercular father generally returns from a sanitarium that keeps him only three months, and generally returns him without pension. "Taudis," as these terrible living quarters are called, command a high price, so the municipalities cannot condemn and buy them up and pull them down. Marseilles only, a rich city, has destroyed one quarter, and hopes, after the war, to tear them all out and erect modern dwellings.

I visited one of these rooms—about 20 by 15 feet, with one small window opening upon an alley, and a door for air—and in this lived, slept, ate, and cooked four people, a tubercular husband, his wife, and two little children, and until we gave them a second bed, for the man to be isolated, all had slept in one.

In Nimes I found in one hospital, in wooden barracks that are bitterly cold in Winter and correspondingly hot in Summer—makeshift places—80 tubercular and unhappy Serbs, most of them very young. They had no literature and nothing to do. I left a phonograph, and have tried without success to find books in their tongue. I have only just discovered that a Frenchman has started a printing press for Serbian books at Bizerta, Tunisia, for nothing can be found in France. There are about 17,500 tubercular Serbs in France scattered in all directions.

At Marseilles and Toulon there were very bad conditions, and I found the Riviera one mass of hospitals. The bone tuberculosis cases are near the coast, and among these are many Moroccans and Senegalese, who cannot stand the cold, but who succumb rapidly to the disease and do not show the resistance of the whites.

The lung cases are away from the coast, in the hills for the most part, so we went over the mountains going out, passing the picturesque camps of the blacks and Asiatics, and returning by the road along the shore built in 1913 by the Touring Club of France. Here at every roadstead are camps of Moroccans to guard against submarine bases, and the rocks, aqueducts, and viaducts are heavily camouflaged—a rather grotesque effect as one suddenly comes upon them.

The office of the Food for France Fund is at 10 East Fifty-eighth Street. The fund supplies nourishing foods to hospitals and destitute civilian war sufferers in France and operates with the official sanction of the French Government.

These recent donations of $100 or more have been acknowledged:

Helping French Sailors.

Since the Red Cross has been co-operating with the French Institute, French sailors in New York have lacked nothing in the way of necessary garments, knitted articles, tobacco or toilet supplies. In the few months since the plan has been in operation the needs of more than 2,000 men have been filled, and daily the wants of others are being looked after. Altogether between 12,000 and 15,000 gifts have been distributed.

Last Fall the attention of the Red Cross was first called to the needs of French sailors in the city. The enlisted men of the French Navy receive very little pay as compared with our own, and frequently require warm clothing and minor necessities. These were previously supplied in a haphazard way by women to whose attention their wants had become known.

This plan proved most injudicious and worked a hardship to the men, as some were deluged with gifts while others got nothing. As the larger part of the men were quartered on the receiving ship at the Brooklyn Navy Yard, the matter was put in the hands of John H. Lathrop, Field Director of the Third Naval District, 165 Remsen Street, Brooklyn, under whose jurisdiction the work in the navy yard falls.

Mrs. Robert Bacon and Miss Yvonne Gourd were appointed a committee in New York to work in conjunction with the French Institute and notify the Red Cross of any requests for aid. The French naval base, which is located on Fulton Street, near Borough Hall, has been made a clearing house for any additional contributions which persons may see fit to send. All applications for assistance should pass through this office, when they will be turned over to Mr. Lathrop to fill from the Red Cross stores.

The following articles have been distributed to French sailors in New York by the Red Cross through the French Institute: 1,570 pairs of socks, 818 mufflers, 700 wristlets, 546 helmets, 1,274 sweaters, 1,340 undershirts, 1,640 drawers, 600 pairs of gloves, 700 pairs of shoes 1,000 cakes of soap, 1,264 packages of tobacco, 200 sets of games, 15 bath towels, 2 sponges, 252 tooth brushes, 60 dressing combs; besides packages of foot powder, vaseline, tooth powder, and shaving soap.

American Students' Committee.

The American Students' Committee of the Ecole des Beaux Arts, which is devoted to the immediate relief of the students of the Ecole des Beaux Arts and Julian's Academy who are serving their country at the front and their families, has collected to date more than $51,070. The fund provides as well comfort kits, consisting of sweaters, mufflers, socks, tobacco, &c., for the soldiers. Last week's receipts amounted to $845, of which $400 is return from Hero Land participation. Subscriptions should be sent to Henry R. Sedgwick, Treasurer, 107 East Thirty-seventh Street, New York.

WORK IN RURAL SCHOOLS.

Have Helped Liberty Loan, Red Cross Drives, and Stamp Campaigns.

According to a statement recently sent out by the Bureau of Education of the Department of Interior, after an inquiry, the country schools of the United States have been rendering admirable wartime service. The inquiry shows that the schools have had enthusiastic and successful membership drives for the Red Cross, many counties reporting 100 per cent. in enrollments. They also have aided materially in the sale of Liberty bonds, War Savings Stamps, and War Savings Certificates, and are beginning to show possibilities in leading campaigns for food conservation.

A Missouri rural high school reported that the sales of bonds and stamps in that school amounted to $4,273.50. In a New Hampshire school 337 pupils purchased 3,470 thrift stamps. Another school in Oregon reported that every pupil had taken a pledge to sell at least $30 worth of War Savings Stamps. In Montana, where the 1917 crops were practically a failure, and economic conditions were serious, the boys and girls of one rural school took the prize money won by individuals and by the school at the county fair, and gave it to the Red Cross.

This war work has been facilitated by such organizations as the boys and girls' home garden clubs, pig clubs, chicken clubs, corn clubs, &c., and the Boys' Working Reserve. A schoolhouse community organization for enlightening public opinion recently has been put into effect through the co-operation of the Bureau of Education and the Council of National Defense, working through its State, county and community councils.

Practically all the leaders of rural education who have communicated with the bureau emphasized the fact that present war work is permanent. One County Superintendent says:

"Really, I consider all this work I have mentioned of permanent value. The children are learning lessons of co-operation and real patriotism. They are learning the much-needed lessons in thrift, which they will never forget. Their Red Cross and food conservation work makes them feel that they are really helping to win the war. The teachers as a unit have organized their whole schools into a current events class, which will do much to broaden the minds of the future citizens of the United States and thus make better citizens of them."

All of the school teachers argue that the teaching of agriculture, especially on the basis of school credits for home work, and wider use of school buildings for public meetings are two movements that have had special stimulus as a result of the war. The New Hampshire country school, where 227 pupils engaged in home garden work added products worth $8,775 to the food supply of the district, was unquestionably gaining something which will be of considerable value after the war. Similarly with the districts where pupils helped to conserve coal by cutting wood near the schoolhouse which would, in normal time, have gone to waste.

That the schools of California are backing the conservation movement is shown in a recent proclamation by Governor Stephens, urging upon all of the school authorities and teachers "that a regular period on each Monday morning be devoted to instruction in ways and means whereby each pupil can aid materially in the nation's food conservation campaign."

After Care for Hospital Patients.

The annual meeting of the Thursday Hospital After Care for the needy of Gouverneur and New York Post Graduate Hospitals was held last Thursday. Five thousand dollars, it was brought out, had been expended on the needy patients. Forty children who were crippled by infantile paralysis received treatments at the Post Graduate Hospital clinic, the organization paying three expert masseurs for this. Three hundred and fourteen maternity outfits, consisting of 7,850 articles, were distributed to the mothers of Gouverneur Hospital. This work is kept up by membership, and contribution, which may be sent to the President, Matilda Danziger, 50 West Seventy-seventh Street.

NEW GERMAN TAXES SPARE THE JUNKERS

DEFICIT IS MOUNTING FAST

The outstanding features of the new taxes by which Count von Roedern, Secretary of the Imperial German Treasury, hopes to overcome a deficit of 2,875,000,000 marks ($684,250,000 at normal exchange) in the empire's regular budget for the fiscal year of 1918-19 are the tenderness with which the Government purposes to handle the big capitalists and agrarians and the evidence that the new tax schemes are not intended to serve merely as war measures but as a definite source of enormous revenue after the war to enable the empire to pay the interest on its huge war debt and aid German business men in attempting to regain their lost world trade.

Count von Roedern presented his tax plan to the members of the Reichstag on April 17, and, as was told in a special cable dispatch printed in The New York Times on April 20, both the financial writers and the general public were temporarily nonplused by its mass of detail and its far-reaching possibilities. Copies of German newspapers just received here show that as soon as the editorial writers had recovered from their momentary shock, they began to subject the proposed tax plan to detailed analysis and criticism. Because the von Roedern plan failed to recommend a direct Imperial tax on personal incomes, but did propose a big increase and extension of the so-called tax on trade turnovers and in the postal rates, it was made the object of much bitter criticism on the part of the Liberal and Socialist papers and of guarded praise by the Conservative organs.

Reichstag May Alter Plan.

That the tax plan will have to be altered considerably before it is approved by the Reichstag would seem to be indicated by the general demand on both sides for a thorough discussion of its provisions and open assertions by many newspapers that a scheme covering the raising of revenue for several years in advance must not be saddled upon the German people without due deliberation and amendment.

Last year the deficit was about 1,250,000,000 marks in a budget of approximately 5,000,000,000 marks, so this year's deficit of 2,875,000,000 in a budget of 7,332,000,000 is not only actually, but proportionately, larger. This enormous increase is due to the fact that only part of last year's deficit was covered by the new taxes then put into effect and to the steady rise in the amount of war bonds upon which interest must be paid.

As has frequently been pointed out by German financial writers, while the German Government has always operated on the principle that the war is to be financed through the issue of bonds and treasury notes, the theory is that the interest on these war bonds must be paid from the regular budget. When, however, as Vorwärts, the leading organ of the pro-German Socialists, remarked, this theory doesn't work and the receipts fail to meet the expenses, the Imperial Treasurer balances his accounts by charging the ordinary expenditures for the army and navy to the special war fund and carrying the remaining deficit forward.

According to the estimates worked out by the Treasury Department, the proposed increase in revenue amounts to 3,153,000,000 marks, divided as follows: From the beer tax, 380,000,000; wine tax, 120,000,000; spirits monopoly, 643,000,000; tax on nonalcoholic drinks, 51,000,000; tea, coffee, and cocoa tax, 75,000,000; stock brokers' tax, 200,000,000; higher postal rates, 125,000,000; tax on business turnovers and luxuries, 1,000,000,000; special levy on companies' excess war profits, 600,000,000.

Big Revenue from Spirits.

Most of the newspapers spoke of the clause providing for the establishment of a Government monopoly in the handling and retailing of spirits as the most important feature of the von Roedern plan, as it was the first decisive step toward the realization of the idea of the Government going into business itself for the purpose of enabling Germany to recover from the devastating effects of the world war and maintain its credit at home and abroad.

Under the proposed plan the Government is not to operate the distilleries, but merely takes over their product and disposes of it at an estimated profit in normal times of 847,000,000 marks, compared with a revenue of 204,000,000 marks in taxes under the present system. The Imperial impost on beer is based on a normal tax of from 10 to 12.50 marks per hectolitre, (about 10 cents per gallon,) and is expected to bring in 513,000,000 marks a year, against the present revenue of 174,000,000 marks. The wine tax is a straight 20 per cent. ad valorem rate, except in the case of sparkling wines and champagnes, which are to pay from 15 cents to 75 cents per bottle.

The greatest stir in the press representing the smaller business interests was raised by the proposal to increase the "umsatz" (turnover) tax from one-tenth of 1 per cent. to one-half of 1 per cent., and make it apply to personal services as well as to goods. In the case of so-called luxuries, such as jewels, works of art, antiquities, cameras, pianos, guns, automobiles, furs, &c., the turnover tax is fixed at from 10 to 20 per cent.

The war profit tax on companies ranges from 30 to 60 per cent., according to the amount of the extra profits made and the percentage of the capital invested. The maximum rate is to be paid on excess profits of more than 500,000 marks in the fourth war year. This tax is fixed for only one year.

Compare British Methods.

In commenting upon the new taxes both the Conservative and Liberal papers ask the German taxpayers to look at the much greater taxes levied in England, the former for the purpose of reconciling the working and middle classes to their lot and the latter in the hope of inducing them to insist upon the German Government following the English example and making a serious attempt to collect more money from the wealthy Junkers and big industrialists.

Any German possessing as much as 80,000 marks who thinks he may dodge paying his share of the new and old taxes by leaving the country finds on looking at Section 9 of the proposed law that he will have to leave security to the amount of 20 per cent. of his property before going, so as to insure the payment of his personal taxes for the next five years. If he is an "Auslandsdeutscher," i. e., a person who is engaged in business abroad largely in the interest of the Fatherland, or who was thus engaged before the war broke out, he is not bothered by this regulation.

Professional speculators and brokers fare better than outside customers in the application of the proposed increase in the transfer tax, as they only pay half the rate levied upon the latter. The German Treasury Department justifies this difference in rates by remarking that while occasional speculators only trade when there is a prospect of big profits and thus can easily afford to pay a fairly large tax, the brokers are content to buy and sell for themselves at less profit and, therefore, could hardly stand the higher rate.

Junkers Wary of Reichstag.

Discussing in the Berliner Tageblatt the failure of the Imperial Government to invade the field of personal income taxes, inheritance levies, &c., Dr. Paul Michaelis, a prominent publicist, points out that Dr. Hergt, the Prussian Finance Minister, remarked in the Prussian Chamber of Deputies on March 14 that under no circumstances should the different Federal States be deprived of the current income and property taxes and that he, together with the Finance Ministers of the other States, had succeeded in bringing the Imperial Treasury Department around to this view. Therefore, about the only really rich source of revenue still to be tapped by the Imperial Government this year is the personal excess war profits tax, and this, according to Dr. Michaelis, is not to be done until later in the season.

The Cologne Gazette, in explaining why the German States so vigorously oppose any attempt by the Imperial Government to levy personal income taxes, admits that this attitude is largely due to the fear of the popularly elected Reichstag entertained by the rich Junkers and industrialists, and their confidence in the various State Diets, practically all of which are elected under most reactionary voting systems. The Gazette remarks, however, that this condition cannot obtain indefinitely and warns its readers to prepare for a change.

The Frankfurter Zeitung is particularly wroth at the turnover tax increase and points out that, aside from the war profiteers in industry, the agrarian interests are the ones who have fared the best economically during the war. Georg Bernhard of the Vossische Zeitung, as well as many other German editors, laments the failure of Count Roedern to work out any really comprehensive plan of taxation and refers to the new taxes as merely patchwork.

Several of the Conservative papers, such as the Tägliche Rundschau and the Hamburgischer Correspondent, as well as the Münchner Neueste Nachrichten, seize the occasion of the discussion of the new tax plan to remind the Reichstag that the question of war indemnities cannot be left out of any thorough scheme for the rehabilitation of German finances after the war.

NEW JEWISH REGISTER OUT.

Shows New York to be the Largest Jewish Centre in History.

The Jewish Register of New York, edited and published by the Kehillah, 356 Second Avenue, contains a mass of information concerning the million and a half Jews in this city, one-half of all the Jews in the country. An account is given of the many philanthropic and other agencies, religious, educational, recreational, economic, correctional, research, national, and international.

Within one generation New York has grown into the largest Jewish centre in history. Statistics are given showing that there are 858 Jewish congregations in New York; 69 schools, 101 recreational and cultural agencies, 1,010 mutual aid societies, 965 lodges, 193 economic agencies, and 164 philanthropic and correctional agencies, the total number of organizations being 3,637. The total expenditure last year amounted to $17,657,000.

CONVENTIONS PAY THE CITY.

The convention bureau of the Merchants' Association reports that for the year ended April 30, 105 national, international, and State conventions were held in New York under its supervision and through its activities. All together 660 conventions were held and attended by more than 400,000 persons, who spent $20,000,000 during their stay in the city. Shortly after the entry of the United States into the war, it was intended to suspend the holding of all conventions, but a communication to William Fellowes Morgan, President of the association, from President Wilson was received stating that the President saw no reason for foregoing conventions of commercial, industrial, professional, agricultural, and other organizations.

The bureau committee comprises John Buckle, Chairman; L. M. Foomer, Michael Friedsam, T. D. Green, W. C. Muschenheim, Mason B. Starring, and Percy S. Straus.

SOLDIERS HUNGRY FOR NEWS

Pershing's Men Quiz All New Arrivals from United States.

WASHINGTON, May 23, (The Associated Press.)—The American soldier in France has a voracious appetite for news from home, declares Eliot Wadsworth of the Red Cross War Council, who has returned to the capital after three months abroad.

"How did Mayor Thompson make out in Chicago" and "Who's Police Commissioner of New York?" are questions which Mr. Wadsworth says occasionally supplemented the constant queries about baseball.

"So long as you've come from America within a month, you're a welcome object for attack by any member of Pershing's forces," says Mr. Wadsworth. "A crowd of news-hungry boys will light on you and compel you to ransack your mind for news items concerning every part of the country.

"And, if it happens that a doughboy from Terre Haute or Kankakee discovers in the course of the conservation that you know some one from those towns—well, his joy simply can't be described."

Our Aristocracy.

The great trouble about our American aristocracy is that no matter how much fine apparel we may robe it in, how much culture we may smear over it, or how much we may monocle, broad "a" or travel it, whenever you seat it at a feast where codfish is the pièce de résistance it will bolt into the game before the old man at the head of the table can steady himself to say grace.—Houston Post.

ENEMY AVIATORS RELUCTANT TO FIGHT

NEW SWIFT BRITISH PLANE

It Can Climb 15,000 Feet in 11 Minutes and Travel 165 Miles an Hour.

Canadian officers in the Royal Flying Corps who have just returned from the western front on their way home for a rest say that the British have held the supremacy in the air since August, 1917. Up till that time it was change and change about. Sometimes the Germans were supreme and then the British would take control for a time.

They say that the star flyers like Richthoven, who was killed recently, will always fight, but the average Hun aviator will only attack when he has the superiority of numbers or class of machine on his side. About one Hun out of ten will face a fight at the present time with the British fighting planes. Even when their cities have been attacked and their aerodromes bombed they have declined to climb up and fight.

One British pilot was so disgusted at the lack of pluck exhibited by the enemy airmen that he flew over a German aerodrome at a low altitude and fired his gun at the hangar to attract attention. He then dropped a parcel with the following message inside:

"If you won't come up here to fight, herewith one pair of boots for work on the ground."

Rising into the mist he waited for the inevitable curious party who came out of the shed to examine the parcel and then threw a bomb among them.

At one place in the district of the Loire there is a British naval air station whence the young aviators go up nightly to bomb the German cities. Every flight is full of adventure and excitement, which commences directly their machines cross the German lines. They manage to dodge the anti-aircraft guns, which are more effective than the French or British weapons, and inflict severe damage on the aerodromes, factories, railroad stations, &c., in the enemy's territory.

The British S. E. 5, which is the rival of the German Albatross battleplane, can climb 15,000 feet in fifteen minutes, travel at 140 miles, and dive at 250 miles an hour. According to the Canadian officers the British Government is building a new machine which is reported to be able to develop a speed of 165 miles, and climb 15,000 feet in eleven minutes. The German bombing machine, the Goethe, carries four guns against the three carried on the Handley Page machine. Most of the fighting takes place at an altitude from 15,000 to 20,000 feet, because the atmosphere is too cold for flying higher up.

Fighting in the air is a strain on the aviators, because they rise to a great height quickly and then often have to dive and change atmospheres so rapidly that it has a serious effect on the system. In addition to the strain of fighting the aviator is over a strange country, and, although improbable, it is possible for his engine to go wrong.

"The Germans fire 500 shots from their anti-aircraft guns daily to our fifty," said one officer. "The shells which burst underneath an airplane will force it up 25 or 30 feet or throw the machine over to one side or the other. If the first shell does not get the plane the pilot feels safe, as he is going too fast for the gunners to get the range.

"The reason that pilots do not feel dizzy in looking down from such great heights is that they are moving over the objects below them instead of being stationary. The British aviators go up from three to six hours daily, and after six months' continuous flying over the lines a man needs a rest. Aerial fighting, which includes tactics in manoeuvring as well as gunnery, takes at least three months to learn after a pilot's certificate has been obtained.

"The sensation when you are going to attack a Hun at 20,000 feet is rotten until you get your gun going, and then you feel all right and keen on the sport. It is all over in a flash and does not give much time for thinking out problems as the speed is so great. Most aviators develop a style of fighting of their own, but the most popular method of attack is above and behind. Ball, the famous British fighter, always got underneath the enemy and then fired up at his machine until he downed him. Some of the aviators get their engines and planes riddled with shrapnel bullets and still keep on fighting."

Wednesday, at 2:30, an inquiry into the general conditions of the Rockaway Electric Railway Company.

TURKS TO SWAP PRISONERS.

Terms for Invalids: 300 British Plus 100 Indians Equal 1,500 Turks.

The British Government has just made known in the form of a White Paper the agreement between the British and Ottoman governments respecting prisoners of war and civilians, signed Dec. 24, 1917. It particularly concerns the exchange of invalid prisoners and interned non-combatants, and is similar to the agreement already in force between the British and German governments.

"According to article 5, a preliminary repatriation is to take place immediately, the two States agreeing that "1,000 British invalid prisoners of war, irrespective of rank, of whom as nearly as possible 300 shall be white and 700 natives of India, and 1,500 invalid Turkish prisoners of war shall be repatriated as soon as possible, without awaiting the formality of the medical examinations."

The medical examinations later to be enforced concern all prisoners or interned persons, if not under sentence, whose health comes within a schedule of disabilities, which, however, is not published in the White Paper, and are to be made in Turkey by two Turkish doctors and one British doctor prisoner, and in British prison camps by two British doctors and one Turkish doctor. The Medical Commission shall decide by majority vote from which there is no appeal.

Certain prisoners and interned persons are discriminated against, as their work is required to put the agreement into force. Thus, while the British Government may retain one medical officer and ten medical non-commissioned officers and soldiers for every 2,500 Turkish prisoners, the Turkish Government retains one officer and five of lower grade for every 1,000 British prisoners.

The expense of repatriation is to be borne by the nation to which the prisoners affected belong. The agreement also stipulates the future treatment of prisoners of war based on the report of the Swiss Commission, which visited the Turkish prison camps a year ago. It was then found that while the parole of officers was usually accepted the state of the rank and file. Particularly that of the Indian Mussulmans, was very bad. The agreement affects some 50,000 Turks, 10,000 British and 20,000 Indians.

To Reopen Line to Sea Gate.

The Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company has announced its intention of restoring service on the Norton Point railroad line between the Sea Beach-West End terminal and Sea Gate at Coney Island. Last October the operation of this line was stopped because of the reconstruction of the elevated lines to Coney Island, and the building of the new terminal there. A trolley service was substituted on Surf Avenue with transfer privileges at Thirty-seventh Street to Sea Gate. Transfers were also given to the Culver and the Brighton Beach lines. These privileges will be continued when the rapid transit service is restored.

German Prisoners in Universities.

Eighty-two of the German prisoners recently released by England and interned in Holland are now studying at Dutch colleges, according to the Berliner Abendpost of April 18. There are thirty of these students at Leiden University, fifteen at the Rotterdam Commercial College, thirty at the Delft Technical College, and seven at the College of Agriculture at Wageningen.

LAMMASCH ATTACKS PAN GERMAN IDEAS

But Says His Memorandum to Kaiser Karl Was Not Directed at the German Alliance.

DEFENDS STAND ON ALSACE

Asks if Germany Would Not Take a Hand in Trentino if Peace Depended on That Province.

Herr Hofrat Dr. Heinrich Lammasch of Vienna, member of the Austrian upper house, leader of the "peace-by-understanding" group in Austria and author of a peace memorandum sent to Kaiser Karl, has written an answer to the heavy attacks made upon him in the German press. He denies that he is an enemy of the Dual Alliance and seeks to explain that his recent efforts which cost him such a drubbing at the hands of "ruthless" German writers were directed against the Middle Europe ideas of Herr Naumann—ideas, he says, which will divide the world into two hostile camps and make wars continuous and inevitable.

In a cable dispatch to THE TIMES, published April 28, Lammasch was mentioned as one of the group hateful to the Grand Ducal party and as an ally of the Empress Zita. A German paper links him with the anti-German party in Salzburg, and indirectly with the family of the Grand Duke of Tuscany, whose relative, the former Crown Princess of S[redacted] expelled from Germany after leaving her royal husband for a musician.

Munich, March 26.

Recently in a large number of newspapers of the German Empire heavy attacks have been made on me. I have thus far not answered them because I had completely refuted similar charges made in Austrian papers. With the articles which have appeared in your honored paper I may make an exception, since I am convinced that they do not rest upon animosity or any kind of outside influence, but only on mistaken information.

The party in favor of a peace purely by force, which in Austria is, to be sure, very small, but has disproportionately large means, seeks to render me harmless as one of the representatives of peace by understanding in our unofficial circles. For this purpose they have sprung the fable of my hostility to Germany. In our internal politics they say I represent the Czech point of view and in foreign affairs the point of view of the Entente. For whoever pointed out that Austria was a supernational State composed of eight races was set down as not a good German. He was considered an enemy of the Fatherland who pointed out that peace must be concluded in such a way as not to make permanent hate and striving for revenge among the peoples of Europe, leading to new and finally destructive wars.

As proof of these charges, some sections of my last Herrenhaus speech were torn out of their setting and thereby placed in an entirely false light. In that speech in many places I expressly stated the necessity of fulfilling our alliance obligations and the gratitude which we felt for our field-gray German brothers. Also, in an earlier speech in October of last year, I set forth the necessity of strengthening the German-Austrian alliance in the following words:

A peace can only be honorable for us in which we keep the faith with our allies with whom, helping and supporting each other, we have stood through these four frightful years of war, especially the faith with the German people, a faith which springs not only from agreement, but from the heart. We must cordially increase the close bonds between the different branches of the North and South, with their very different, but equally valuable endowments, without, however, cutting ourselves off by an impassable, barb-wired trench from the suggestions of give and take from the East and West. Through such a spiritualization of the alliance will the anxiety be removed that this alliance could be a danger to the peace of Europe. On the contrary, thus can the alliance become the cornerstone of the great peace alliance of the peoples for which progress strives.

In regard to what I said in my last long-debated speech in the Herrenhaus about Alsace-Lorraine I may ask the converse question. Would it be an unpermissible interference of Germany in Austrian affairs if the [German] empire insisted upon the granting of far-reaching autonomy to the Trentino in case peace depended upon that grant?

In addition to my Herrenhaus speech a memorandum has been brought out against me that for a large circle of people was conclusive, and which possibly was made known in the highest place, [Kaiser Karl.] This memorandum was directed against Naumann's "Mitteleuropa," and sought to bring forth proof that a "Mitteleuropa" would make a lasting peace impossible, would perpetuate the league of our present enemies, divide Europe into two hostile camps, and make a new war unavoidable. In place of the "Mitteleuropa" idea I proposed a general league of the nations for the maintenance of peace, with devices for the peaceful settlement of differences and the guardianship of all nations of peace. A general union of States such as Mr. Wilson also has in mind would make all special alliances everywhere unnecessary, and more surely reach the goal of promoting the peace of Europe than the balance of power which completely failed in 1914. Austria-Hungary, I said, should openly place herself at the head of a movement with this thought, whereby the enemy, especially England, might be reassured as to the dangers, perhaps more fancied than real, of "Mitteleuropa," and thus make easier the conclusion of peace.

A demand for the dissolution of the alliance [with Germany] can be interpreted from this memorandum only by misunderstanding or misconstruction.

A HOST IN HIMSELF.

Belgian Soldier Tells of Capturing a German Troop Train.

Officials at the Custom House were thrilled yesterday when Jacques de Pre, a Belgian who before the war was a steward of the Red Star Line from New York to Antwerp, related the story of his adventures in the great campaign which began in 1914. He said he received the French War Cross and that the Order of Leopold was given to him by King Albert of Belgium, who kissed him on both cheeks.

The Belgian soldier told the officials that he was serving at a small village on the Belgian border when he accidentally overheard a German talking over the telephone, giving information about a trainload of German soldiers that was to pass through that place, on its way to France. He managed to stop the train by shooting the engineer, he continued, and then compelled the fireman to drive the train to Antwerp, where the enemy troops were taken prisoners. The King of Belgium decorated him with the Order of Leopold. In the Spring of 1916 de Pre said he was transferred to a French regiment, and went to Verdun, where he received a wound that kept him in a hospital for nearly a year. He got a War Cross from the French Government.

After his recovery he obtained a berth as steward on a French steamship trading between Marseilles and Algiers. One moonlight night, off Majorca, a German submarine rose to the surface of the Mediterranean and prepared to shoot a torpedo at the steamship. The Belgian steward was on deck, and immediately went to the starboard bow gun, which he said he aimed at the U-boat and sank it. The commander and crew of the U-boat were brought back to the harbor. He still has a wound in his side sixteen inches long that does not bother him unless he sings, de Pre went on to say. After hearing his story the customs official signed the passport which de Pre wanted vised to enable him to go back and offer his services to King Albert.

OUR ENGINEERS IN FRANCE.

Numbers Constantly Increasing, and They Are Ready for Fight.

Railroad engineers are playing an important part in the war, according to an article appearing this month in The Bulletin, a magazine devoted to the interests of the railroads of the South. Of the special engineer units recruited for service on railways and in the maintenance of lines of communication, it is said, many are already in France and others are awaiting recruitment to full strength in order to be ready for overseas service.

The first engineer troops, 1,100 in number, to be sent abroad, arrived in France about three months after war was declared on Germany. Since that time the number has been greatly augmented. These troops have been constantly engaged in engineering work, including the construction of railways, docks, wharves, cantonments, and hospitals for the use of the American Expeditionary Forces. They have, in some instances, in the performance of their duties, engaged in active combat with the enemy.

Through the inability of the Russian Government to accept certain railroad equipment and supplies ordered in this country, the Engineer Department of the Southern Pacific Railroad has been able to obtain 200 locomotives, by assuming the liability of $11,000,000 therefor, with the understanding that the Russian Government could purchase them later if desired. These locomotives have been rented to American railroads, and have thus assisted in reducing the shortage of motive power in this country. Rails were obtained in the same way and in great part sent to France in return for rails loaned by the French Government to the American Expeditionary Forces.

The office of the Director General of Military Railways, from the beginning of the war to Feb. 20, 1918, had placed orders for railway supplies having an aggregate weight of 754,000 long tons and a value of about $142,000,000.

The following excerpts showing how seriously the engineers are taking the great drive are taken from a letter, received by W. H. Moulthrop of the Southern Pacific Railroad, from Sergeant Lloyd W. Fontaine, formerly connected with the Engineering Department of the same road, and now with a regiment of engineers in France:

"Well, the war is going on and no immediate symptoms of an end have evinced themselves. Every one has settled down to business upon the basis of it's lasting ten years. At least, I hope we are not feeble, white-haired old men before we cross the briny deep again.

"Americans are no longer a rarity here. They are everywhere and always going at top speed all the time. Before long they will be hounding at their chunk of Hindenburg's line, and that is the day we are all looking forward to. One thing you may be sure of, the Yank is going to do some fighting. He has already proved that. What he needs is restraint until everything is ready to go. The American preparation in France is stupendous. I wish I could tell you all that is being done. Uncle Sam is surely in with both feet.

"Don't fool yourself that these demoiselles are going to literally adopt the Sammies. Sammy is taking good care of himself and wouldn't trade one American girl for a dozen Mignons or Isabelles or Jeannes. True, they are very 'chic' and wear some doll rags, but I was in Paris and saw the cream of them all, and believe me when I tell you that I would crawl ten blocks on my knees, past ten thousand of them, for a minute chat with a real American girl."

ENEMY SOLID IN UKRAINE.

The theory that the German Government's violent overthrow of the Ukrainian Rada, with which the Central Powers had made a so-called peace, and its support of General Skoropadsky, the Cossack Hetman, who was proclaimed Dictator of the Ukraine on April 29 on a program opposing the proposed socialization of the land, were due to the agitation of the German colonists in the Ukraine, as well as to the propaganda of the Pan Germans at home, is supported by the following article written in Odessa by Rolf Brandt, a German newspaper man, and printed in the Kölner Lokal-Anzeiger of April 20:

"On April 12-13 there was held in Odessa another congress of the Union of German Colonists, the first since Odessa came under Germany's protection. Some 700 delegates were present. It was desired first of all to take a stand regarding the order of the Central Rada in Kiev requiring a declaration within three months in the matter of obtaining Ukrainian citizenship—a law that naturally applies to all the inhabitants of the Ukraine.

"In the course of lengthy debates it was openly and honestly asserted that there were only two possibilities to be considered: 'If the land is socialized, then no power on earth will hold the colonists in the Ukraine; but if the mania for socialization goes up in smoke and property rights assume an endurable condition, then the colonists will be exposed to the hatred of the Russian peasantry. For these peasants would hold the German colonists responsible for the failure of the realization of the Utopia of the revolution: Plenty of land and low taxes. And we cannot live and endure this hatred.' Furthermore, and this is characteristic of the temperament of these German farmers, the representatives of the country districts pointed out: 'We must again have a cultural ideal. We cannot obtain from our church, school, and language in the Ukraine that which really makes us worth while as Germans.'

"So it was resolved temporarily to refrain from taking the oath of allegiance to the Ukraine. A confidential committee is to investigate ways and means of repatriation and, furthermore, is to take steps toward protecting the lives and property of the colonists. Leaders with whom I talked today said to me: 'We are looking toward Germany; we don't want to plead for protection with empty hands. Here upon the rich earth which holds the graves of our ancestors we could help Germany with everything that it needs: Grain, cattle, fodder, fats. We don't talk, we cultivate the land; our fields will produce crops.'

"And let's add a few figures without comment: Around Odessa alone there are 200,000 German farmers and 78 per cent. of the land of the richest government belongs to them. In the Crimea almost 90 per cent. of the land is in German hands."

FORCES WARSAW TO PAY.

Germans Take $59,500 of City's Funds as Fine for Outbreak.

An echo of the anti-German demonstration that occurred in Warsaw last February, when the Poles learned that the Central Powers had agreed to give the Cholm district to the Ukraine, is found in the following item, dated Warsaw, April 7, printed in the Münchener Zeitung:

"Since the Warsaw Municipal Council, despite warnings, has not paid the fine of 250,000 marks, ($59,500,) imposed upon the city on Feb. 14 because of the incidents following the making public of the peace treaty with the Ukraine, the Imperial German Police President, according to the Kurjier Warszawski, has informed the council that the fine thus imposed will be deducted from the revenues belonging to the city now in the hands of the occupying powers."

Another step toward the ultimate dissolution of the "National Polish Army" seems to be indicated by the following dispatch sent out from Warsaw on April 17 by the semi-official Wolff Telegraph Bureau:

"On the basis of an understanding between the Polish Government and the representatives of the German Great Headquarters, 1,500 men of the oldest class of the First Polish Corps of Lieut. Gen. Dowbor Musnicki are to arrive in Minsk-Mazowiek in order to be sent home. Their arms will be turned over in Minsk to the Polish Command for the use of the Polish militia. The negotiations by the competent authorities regarding the First Polish Corps continue. A decision is expected shortly."

New York City's Total Draft Is 105,627

THE 189 local draft boards which exercise draft jurisdiction in New York City have inducted into the service of the United States since the beginning of the draft a total of 105,627 men, this number including 7,462 who were released for service in the shipyards of the Emergency Fleet Corporation. The number does not include men of draft age who were in the National Guard when Congress declared war on Germany or those who enlisted in the regular or guard service, the navy, or Marine Corps, in the weeks which intervened between the signing of the selective service law by President Wilson and the registration, on June 5 last, of all men between the ages of 21 and 31 years.

Martin Conboy, Director of the Draft for New York City, has just completed a report which shows the results accomplished by the draft boards of this city since their organization and up to today. The figures do not include the 5,000 men who are called to report for duty in the next six days nor those who are called to the colors next week.

Mr. Conboy's report, which has been sent to Provost Marshal General Enoch H. Crowder, is believed to be complete in every detail. It is the first submitted by any city in the country since the draft law went into operation.

The following is a key to the general table published below. The numbers refer to the columns in the table.

1. Number of men inducted under general induction orders to mobilization camps from each board, (including first draft.)
2. Number of individual inductions under Section 150 S. S. R. and competent orders.
3. Number of voluntary inductions under special calls.
4. Enlistments in navy and Naval Reserve since the beginning of the draft.
5. Enlistments in Marine Corps since the beginning of the draft.
6. Commissions, enlistments in Medical and Engineering Reserve Corps and field clerks since the beginning of the draft.
7. Enlistments in all branches of the military service prior to Dec. 15, 1917.
8. Number of men on emergency fleet classification list.
9. Total registration.
10. Total number registrants in Class 1 qualified for general service not yet inducted and now available for induction.
11. Cases pending before Medical Advisory Board.
12. Cases pending before district board.
13. Delinquents.

PRINCETON'S EIGHT CONQUERS CORNELL

Tiger Oarsmen Come from Behind to Win by Less Than Half a Length.

RACE IS FULL OF THRILLS

Orange and Black Battles Gamely to Fore After Trailing—Ithaca Freshmen Win.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., May 25.—Princeton's 'Varsity crew vindicated all of the early season defeats by Havard, Penn, and Columbia on Lake Carnegie this afternoon in the most thrilling rowing duel of the year by coming from behind to beat Cornell by less than half a length. It was a game crew that sat in the Tiger shell, for when the race was half over Princeton was a full length behind the Ithacans, andsurmounting this handicap with grit and perseverance, the Orange and Black shot over the finish line a second and a half in front of the pupils of the great rowing seer, Courtney.

It was Cornell's only appearance in competition this season, but it wasn't because of inexperience or lack of form that the Cornell crew lost. It was because there was more actual rowing power behind the lighter oarsmen who swung the Princeton blades. Thus did Princeton's rowing season, which has looked like a deep disappointment all season long, finally end in truly great victory.

There was great rejoicing around the boathouse on the lake tonight for the Princeton lads, handicapped all season long because of lack of material, realized a great ambition and for the first time in modern times showed Cornell the way over the finish line in a 'Varsity race.

Cornell started out the day's regatta with a sensational victory for her freshmen crew when the boys from Lake Cuyuga led the Princeton freshmen home in a one-sided race, winning by half a dozen lengths. It looked pretty bad for Princeton, for Cornell's youngsters in spite of lack of racing experience were as fine a freshmen crew as has been seen even in normal rowing years.

Cornell Is Favorite.

Naturally the freshman victory of Cornell made the Ithacans favorite in the 'Varsity event. This was Princeton's last sporting carnival of the year, and the old town was crowded with automobiles, which came here hoping against hope that the Tigers would turn the tables on Cornell and put over a victory.

When Referee John Brown of Penn sent the crews away Princeton for once got the better of the start, a quick, sturdy stroke pushing the Tiger shell in front of the Ithacans in the first half dozen strokes. Before Cornell had settled down to a steady stroke Princeton was almost three-quarters of a length in front and going well.

Princeton had the west course of the lake, Cornell rowing on the tow path side. A great riot of cheers went up from the thousands along the lake bank as Princeton pushed in front. It seemed as if at last Princeton's rowing ambitions were about to be realized. Princeton was rowing a 32 when they went in front and Cornell had settled down to a smooth, steady 32 beat.

After a time the cheering from the Princeton crowd stopped. The spectators began to see the Cornell shell creep up steadily, and when the crews had gone an eighth of a mile Cornell began to gain. The voice of Coxswain Hendrie of the Cornellians could be heard over the still meadow lands which roll away from the lake banks in their grandeur of green.

Cornell Goes to Fore.

Cornell was coming along and coming fast. The high hopes of the spectators fell as the Cornell boat drew up steadily stroke by stroke. In a very short space of water, Cornell had closed up on Princeton until the Tigers were only half a length ahead. Streaking through the flags which mark the half mile Cornell pulled up on even terms and Princeton spectators prepared themselves for another defeat.

Steadily and with commanding superiority, Cornell went out and the nose of the shell showed in front. Hendrie was calling on his men frantically, and once in front Cornell settled down to a steady 32, which was bringing them further to the front with every pull.

Hammer, the Princeton coxswain, saw the Cornell boat pulling away, but he did not call for a higher stroke. He just called on the Tigers to put every ounce of strength in their swings. At this stage of the race both crews were rowing a 32, but Cornell's seemed to have the more power, and the Ithacans crept up and up until Cornell was a length in front.

To have their lead taken from them in this short space would be enough to take the heart out of almost any crew, but not so with Princeton. They displayed their gameness and courage, and, although Cornell tried to increase the lead beyond this one precious length, Princeton hung on doggedly.

At the mile and a quarter Cornell was still maintaining its lead of about a length and it looked safe. The sharp yells of the Princeton coxswain just kept the stroke at that steady 32 with never a varying beat. Princeton seemed to be just holding Cornell, and that was all.

Princeton Then Gains.

Then something happened. Princeton, rowing just the same as Cornell, began to creep up. The rally was greeted with an explosion of cheers from the onlookers, but it looked almost too good to be true. It was not a flash in the pan this sudden realization of strength from Princeton. They were rowing the perfect stroke that old John Fitzpatrick, the Irish sculler, had taught them. The only difference was that now they were putting more power into their swings.

Hendrie, steering the Cornell shell, had his eyes riveted on the Princeton boat almost all the time and he saw what was happening, but so sure did the Ithacans feel with their lead that they could maintain it to the end that they never dreamed that this outburst of grit and power from the Tigers was anything more than the usual dying spring that a crew makes before it accepts defeat.

Here was a picture to delight the most ardent rowing enthusiast. The finish flags were in sight, less than a quarter of a mile away, when Princeton started to come along. Little by little the cedar beak of the Princeton craft slid along, gaining on Cornell with every lunge backward of the sweeping swingers.

Ithacans Remain Cool.

In the face of the impending danger Cornell behaved as the coaches Courtney and John Collyer had taught them. They were cool and collected, and did not become flustered in the least. They hung to their 32 stroke, and had absolute confidence in the hope that Princeton could not pass.

From the canoes and other craft crowded near the finish the spectators began to yell for Princeton to keep it up. Keep it up they did, and with a will and a mighty effort which meant success every time they slid through their seats.

The Cornell coxswain seemed spellbound as he watched Princeton come tearing along. At every stroke he expected to see the Tigers crack, for he realized that at the stroke they were going it must have taken almost herculean strength to send their shell skimming over the water at the pace that Princeton was going.

About 200 yards from the finish the Tigers had their shell up on even terms with the Cornellians, and now it was a case of gameness if ever there was one. For a time the two boats went along as one, each pulling exactly the strong, steady 32 beat.

The power which the Tigers had behind their pull began to tell, and first the prow of their boat showed inches ahead of Cornell. Then the margin grew until, bearing down on the finish flags, Princeton was almost a quarter of a length ahead. With this advantage the Tiger oarsmen tugged at their oars in perfect unison, and each stroke seemed powerful, and more so, than the preceding one.

Final Spurt Thrills Crowd.

Such a sprint has not been seen in a boat race this year, and the Princeton lads, keyed up with the shouts of Hammer, who was guiding the boat straight and true for the finish flags, made one grand, desperate spurt which carried them out a little further in front, and, among the honking of auto horns, blowing of launch whistles, and the cheers of the student crowds, the Tiger shot past the judges' boat more than a third of a length in front. Princeton's time was 9:51.

It was a great race and Cornell bowed to defeat like good sportsmen and answered the Princeton cheer for the vanquished with a Cornell yell for the victors.

The freshmen race was only a procession. The Cornell cubs had an unusually big and rangy crew and the light Tiger cubs were no match for them. The crew had the stamp of Courtney all over it, and after the first race was over the spectators just tried to reconcile themselves that it was just another chapter of the same old story of Courtney's greatness on the water.

Four of the Cornell freshmen were over six feet tall, and two of them were six feet three inches. It was a hopeless race for Princeton from the start, for Cornell, rowing easily and steadily, gradually increased its lead as it wished and crossed the line six lengths ahead. The time of the Cornell freshmen was 10:07. The 'Varsity crews were boated as follows:

Cornell—Bow, Quick; 2, Knight; 3, Egbert; 4, Davenport; 5, Wipperman; 6, Smith; 7, Hall; stroke, Swartz; coxswain, Hendrie.

Princeton—Bow, Godfrey; 2, Campbell; 3, Gregor; 4, Walter; 5, Bryan; 6, Lamont; 7, Rocke; stroke, Paxton; coxswain, Hammer.

HARNESS RACES TO BEGIN.

Parkway Track, in Brooklyn, Will Open on Decoration Day.

Decoration Day will see the opening of what promises to be the busiest season on record at the Parkway trotting track in Brooklyn. The Nassau Driving Club, which made its headquarters at Mineola until the track there was taken over for a base hospital, will hold its first harness races at Parkway on Thursday, with a program of nine events, in which about fifty trotters and pacers have been entered by amateur members of the club. After this week the matinées will take place on Saturdays, and there will be sixteen of them before the season ends.

Besides the club races there are to be three big trotting meetings during the season. The first of these is billed for July 16 to 19, under the auspices of the Junior League of Amateur Driving Clubs, of which John R. Townsend is President and Captain Pierre Lorillard, Jr., is Secretary. Ex-Governor Horace White and many other prominent horsemen from all parts of the country will drive in the league races, for cups and other trophies.

Following the league races, the Metropolitan Circuit will be opened with a professional meeting under the auspices of the Parkway Driving Club on July 23 to 25, with purses of $1,000 each, and on Sept. 24 to 27 there will be another circuit meeting under the auspices of the Nassau Driving Club, for purses of $700 each. The proceeds of both meetings are to be given to the war charities.

TIGER CUBS ARE VICTORS.

Trounce Harvard Yearlings on Diamond by 6 to 2.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 25.—Princetons' freshman nine beat Harvard's yearlings 6 to 2 on Soldiers' Field this afternoon. The Tiger pitcher, Margells, allowed only five scattered hits, one of which was a home run by J. Baldwin.

In the eighth inning Margells passed the first three batters, but then settled down and retired the side. He struck out eleven men in the game.

Butterfield, pitching for Harvard, was wild, four of his midgame passes being turned into Princeton runs by timely hitting. Princeton made the game sure in the fifth, when three runs were scored on passes to Craig and Harvey, hits by Kopp, and Schrer, and a fumble by Harvard's centre fielder, Davis.

HARVARD NET TEAM VICTOR.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., May 25.—The Harvard tennis team defeated Princeton this afternoon, 5 matches to 4. The play was fast throughout and the outcome of the contest was undecided until the final match of doubles, in which Warburg and Levi of Harvard defeated Smith and Grey of Princeton, 6—4, 5—7, 6—4.

RICHARDS GAINS NET TITLE.

Defeats Taylor in Final of Brooklyn Junior Championship.

Vincent Richards, holder of the boys' national tennis championship, gained additional laurels on the courts yesterday when he won the Brooklyn junior championship at the Terrace Club by defeating Harold Taylor, the junior metropolitan champion. The score of the contest was 6—3, 6—2, 6—1.

Richards in gaining his triumph played tennis of high calibre. He forced his way to the net at every opportunity, and, once there, volleyed and smashed in a way that was decidedly disconcerting to Taylor. The first set was bitterly fought, two of the games being carried repeatedly to deuce.

Richards gained an early lead of 5—1, and while Taylor made a heroic effort to overcome the advantage, he fell far short of the mark. Richards's steadiness was evidenced all through the second and third sets, and while Taylor now and then injected a bit of brilliant play into the game, his efforts were not well enough sustained seriously to threaten Richards.

The junior doubles championship went to Cecil Donaldson and Frank Anderson, this team defeating Geraldson, Jr., and Abraham Bassford, 3d, in a four-set contest at 6—3, 4—6, 8—6, 6—2.

Mathews Victor at Traps.

MANHASSET, L. I., May 25.—Herbert J. Mathews won a 100 clay bird scratch shoot at the traps of the Manhasset Gun Club this afternoon when he broke 94. Percy L. Hoag was second with 93, D. E. Smith was third with 90, and John Cleek fourth with 86.

The Manhasset Club will hold one of the biggest shoots of the season next Saturday. Ten prizes have been offered, and a number of professionals and some of the best amateurs on Long Island will compete.

Fordham Catcher an Ensign.

Dick McGinn, star catcher on the Fordham University nine last season, has just been made an Ensign in the navy. McGinn received his rank at the Pelham Bay Naval Reserve Station, where he entered the officers' school in February, after enlisting at the Charlestown Navy Yard. He was one of the best backstops at Fordham in recent years.

WIDENER TRIUMPHS AT BELMONT MEET

EXTERMINATOR IS BEATEN

Philadelphia, represented by Joseph E. Widener, dominated the race meet of the United Hunts Racing Association, held at Belmont Park Terminal yesterday. Whether his horses were competing on the flat or over the jumps the Philadelphian was well equipped with thoroughbreds to make the others stretch their necks, and at the finish of an excellent day's sport his scarlet and white stripes had been placed in the van on three occasions.

It is no new phase of racing for Mr. Widener's jumpers to prove themselves masters, but he earned a fresh distinction at the hunts meet when Kilts II., his four-year-old imported son of Macdonald II., scurried over the smooth turf track in the Highweight Handicap at a mile, and surprised the experts by defeating Willis Sharpe Kilmer's Exterminator, which came East with his laurels gained by a victory in the recent Kentucky Derby.

It is true that Exterminator had been well looked after by the handicapper, but his class was expected to land him in front, and he started an odds-on favorite in the field of six, only to finish a hard stern chase a length behind Kilts II., which was making his first appearance of the season.

Meet Attracts Crowd.

The United Hunts, which determined to keep up amateur racing by running its meeting, while the other associations waited for less troublesome times, had every reason to be pleased with the stand taken. There never was a more successful meeting held by amateurs and one that brought out more high-class horses, both on the flat and over the obstacles. The Long Islanders turned out in force to give countenance to the continuance of the sport, and the special trains from New York were well filled by racing enthusiasts attracted by the races, which fulfilled all the promise of excitement given by the entries.

Cloudy weather and threats of rain, which fortunately held off, caused the women to be less brilliantly garbed than usual, but the lack of color in this respect was offset by the large percentage of officers present in uniform. Nearly all grades of the service were represented and many foreign officers attended.

There was a large delegation of officers from Camp Devens, and most of these had mounts in the military race, which also brought out a Blue Devil officer in Lieutenant Mallet and a British warrior in Lieut. Col. Jamison. The Camp Devens delegation was led by Major Charles L. Stevenson, who, besides bringing on the boys for the day of racing, had the honor of winning the military event with Mrs. T. J. Donohue's The Brook. A compliment was paid to the French officer by making his mount, Archdale, favorite, but Lieutenant Mallet was forced to fight a rear-guard action most of the way, and it was only by a whipping finish that he landed Archdale in fourth place.

Leading Horsemen Present.

Captain Perry Belmont, President of the United Hunts, was prevented by military duties from attending the meet, but there were many notable men in sports who ranged from paddock to lawn and took the greatest interest in the contests. Among those noticed were R. Lawrence Smith, George B. Hulme, Joseph E. Widener, F. Ambrose Clark, I. J. Muurling, John R. Townsend, Samuel Willets, Dr. J. O. Green, Edward King, E. von der Horst Koch, William T. Koch, H. L. Herbert, Captain Charles L. Appleton, Edward M. Weld, Walter J. Salmon, and William R. Coe.

The Turf and Field Handicap, in which Exterminator was entered, provided the first occasion for a Widener victory. The presence of the Derby winner overawed many of the owners, and the entry of twenty-five was reduced to half a dozen starters. Thomas Welsh, who trains the flat runners for Mr. Widener, was confident that Kilts II. would take Exterminator into camp, and Jockey Loftus, who rode Kilts II., set out to make a runaway race of it.

Exterminator kept fairly close to the pacemaker for the first quarter, but dropped back going down the hill on the backstretch, and was five lengths behind the leader and the Greentree Stable's Square Dealer rounding into the stretch for home. Knapp called on Exterminator for his best effort then, and he came racing through the stretch like a good horse.

A furlong from the finish Loftus began to let up on Kilts II., and for a moment Exterminator appeared to have a chance. Loftus heard the shouts for the Derby winner and, going to a drive, landed the purse by a length, with Exterminator the same distance in front of Square Dealer.

Skibbereen in Front.

The next Widener success was gained through the field in the Great United Hunts Steeplechase, which proved the best race of the day, five horses being abreast 100 yards from the finish after covering the stiff course of two miles and a half. In the desperate drive to the finish it appeared to those opposite the line on the spectators' side of the field that Captain J. E. Davis's Brooks had beaten Mr. Widener's Skibbereen by the greater part of a length.

The judges, however, hung up Skibbereen's number and placed Brooks second. Cherry Malotte had the distinction of carrying 155 pounds into third place and defeating her great rival, St. Charlcote, which unseated his rider while in the lead at the last turn. Mr. Widener called it a day after winning the last race with Louvois. The victory of this mare was made easier, as five of the eight starters came to grief at the stiff obstacles.

NO SUNDAY GAME AT HUB.

Police Threat Causes Postponement of Boston-Chicago Contest.

BOSTON, May 25.—To avoid legal complications the American League baseball game between Boston and Chicago, scheduled to be played here tomorrow for the benefit of the Red Cross, has been postponed until Monday.

The game was originally on the schedule for Monday, but President Harry H. Frazee of the Boston Club in offering the Red Cross the proceeds of the contest, suggested that a Sunday game would attract a larger crowd of spectators, and would probably swell the Red Cross fund by $50,000. Through the efforts of Governor McCall, Mayor Peters and Red Cross officials, a license to play the game Sunday was obtained from the Public Safety Committee and the State police.

Today Commissioner Stephen O'Meara of the city police pointed out that the game was in open violation of the Sunday law, and that if played it would mean that big league baseball here on Sunday would get its first legal test. The Commissioner instructed police officers to obtain the names of players and promoters and to apply to the court on Monday for summonses.

When the Commissioner's order became public, officials of the Red Cross called on President Frazee and explained the difficulty they were in. Mr. Frazee and Clarence Rowland, manager of the White Sox club, promptly agreed to play the game on Monday and to give the Red Cross the entire gate receipts.

GREEN TAKES FINAL GAME.

Amherst Victim of Dartmouth at Baseball by 4 to 1.

HANOVER, N. H., May 25.—By defeating Amherst, 4 to 1, today the Dartmouth team finished its home season with a victory. The game was marked by many sensational plays, the two catchers, Carr and Eveleth, featuring in this department.

The defense of the Green was a big factor. Ross had his weak moments, but the fielding support on each occasion tightened up and killed the chances of the opposition from running up tallies.

Amherst got away to a small lead but was passed in the fifth, when the Green pounded Nash, from the mound and Zink went in.

PHILS SHUT OUT BY SMITH.

Former Giant Twirler is Victor for Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI, May 25.—George Smith, recently secured by Cincinnati from the New York club, pitched great ball today, and Philadelphia was shut out by 3 to 0 in the second game of the series.

Cincinnati played errorless ball, the work of Lee, Magee, and Blackburne being especially clever. In sliding into third base in the fourth inning, Griffith had his hand spiked by Stock, and several stitches were taken in it.

MILLER AND BAKER COME TO LOVE'S AID

Yankees' Brilliant Support Carries Slim Pitcher to Victory Over Indians, 2 to 1.

MANY HITS ARE WASTED

New York Gets Twelve Safe Drives in First Six Innings, but Lacks the Punch in the Pinch.

Sensational support by the Yankees pulled Slim Love through to a 2-to-1 victory over the Cleveland Indians at the Polo Grounds yesterday and helped materially to even up for the nineteen-inning disaster which overtook the clan of Huggins on Friday. J. Franklin Baker and Elmer Miller contributed the fielding gems which turned determined attacks of the Forest City invaders and left the Yankees triumphantly in possession of the matinée, much to the liking of some 15,000 fans, who cheered throughout the afternoon. Victory also returned the Yankees to second place, after a one-day stay in fourth place.
